THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The schools of Clanton open for the fall term Monday, and it is the duty of each and everyone who has a child of school age under their care to see that it gets all the advantages set before it. If you fail in this you are robbing the child of that which belongs to it.

The town of Clanton should indeed be appreciative of the fact that the faculty of the local schools measure up to those found anywhere. The fact should be borne in mind that it was only a few years ago which could not be truthfully made up of inexperienced teachers, but now the teachers almost as a whole are normal and college graduates with years of training in the line of work.

Prof. Stephens of the high school and Prof. Martin of the grammar school, who have been elected to another term in the high school and grammar school, respectively, have been at the head of our schools for several years, are competent and able executives.

Without the cooperation of the public, which they serve, schools will make slow progress, hence the News would beg of each and every patrons his hearty support of the local schools in the term just beginning. In that way you not only enrich the minds of the pupils but you are laying the foundation for a bigger and better state and a bigger ans better nation.

Chilton county has ranked low in literacy, but with the competent instruction received, is climbing out of the depths of ignorance and is gaining a place in the spotlight of enlightenment.

CAUGHT IN RUM-NET

The democrats of the nation are in the attitude of laughing up their sleeves at the fact that Cohen, the negro customs collector at the port of New Orleans is under bond on a charge of having aided rum runners in the New Orleans district.

It will be remembered that this is the negro whose appointment the democrats fought so hard to keep President Harding from making. The president appointed him twice for recess appointments, because the democrats had been able to keep him from being confirmed by the senate.

President Coolidge likewise wanted this negro to fill the post, and he was finally confirmed.

The people have an idea of who they want to serve them and when a man is jammed down the people's throats by a president we can see the cause the record generally don't care much what behind them.

By keeping such folks in office it will turn the south into voting the republican ticket is like waving a red flag at a bull and expect him to keep still.

It will take a far different policy than that. Whether he is found guilty or not remains to be seen, but it is giving a whole lot of suppressed glee at the way things are turning out.

Clanton is missing a golden opportunity in not making an effort to land manufacturing enterprises. It has the location, the facilities and the men with capital to help finance establishments, but if you don't go out and induce people to locate in a community, there are other towns which will. Boost Clanton by asking outside capital to invest here.

Democrats have the laugh over the appointment of the negro Cohen, by Presidents Harding and Coolidge, to the post of collector of customs at the port of New Orleans. In other words, I told you so!

Our cotton may be short and our corn curtailed, but from al appearances the "asses" crop is bountiful.

Western Boy's Rose Takes Prize Honor

If these were the good old times, when laurel wreaths rested on deserving brows, fourteen-year-old Jimmy Dunning, rose grower extraordinary, would have one cocked over his cowlick, and a youthful blackamoor page besides, to carry the tail of his toga, says the Portland Telegram, which continues:

And nobody would blame him for strutting through the forum or festival center or wherever the admiring crowds might be assembled.

For Jimmy has put all the old heads among the local rose growers to rout and won the grand sweepstakes prize for the best blossom at the rose show against contestants who have spent double his lifetime in making pruning a fine art and fertilization a matter of prayer.

The judges decided that a Frau Carl Druschki rose, grown on one of Jimmy's own bushes in the family garden at 884 East Yamhill street was the finest among all the aristocrats of blossoms entered at the show.

Bee Library a Memorial

The Miller apicultural library at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture contains more than 1,100 books and bulletins relating to bee culture.

After the death of Dr. Charles C. Miller at Marengo, Ill., in 1920, fellow beekeepers sought some means of perpetuating his memory. A memorial library was finally decided on, which was endowed by the beekeepers and others. Because of the interest which the Wisconsin College of Agriculture displayed in beekeeping the Miller library was established there.

The library is an international monument to beekeeping, says a bulletin by E. F. Wilson, in charge of the agriculture department of Wisconsin college.

POULTRY

MATURING PULLET BEFORE SHE LAYS

One of the best discussions of a good method of finishing pullets comes from the pen of Mrs. George R. Shoup of the Western Washington experiment station, which is as follows:

To put on body growth, give a low open hopper of cracked yellow corn or yellow cornmeal. Keep it full all the time. Feed a full breakfast of sprouted oats or scratch, using so much that a little grain is in the litter at the next feed. At breakfast time or shortly after give sour milk, or a substitute, using four to six quarts to the hundred birds. At 11 a. m. again feed scratch grain and also give a fair-sized amount of green feed. At 2 p. m. another feed of grain and at 5 or 6 p. m., a last feed of grain and also all the greens they can eat. A good growing mash should be before them in hoppers, giving one-quarter as much mash as grain by weight. This program says: "Won't you eat a little?" over and over, and at night you will have the satisfaction of having these young ladies going to bed with crops only partly filled. As long as this is continued you know these birds are growing bodies, not combs, and you may be surprised to find that in four weeks' time these same youngsters will have gained anywhere from three-fourths to one and one-quarter pounds each, without having come into laying. When maturity (full body growth) has been reached, you can put on the laying program and feel that one more point in poultry management has been put under definite control.

A number of such details as this used by one and neglected by another makes the difference of steady, or spasmodic, egg production during the following year. In short, it helps to make a poultryman who makes his chickens keep him and not one who just keeps chickens.

Cholera and Limberneck Cause of Poultry Loss

Cholera and limberneck are two diseases that attack the poultry flocks and cause the loss of a number of birds each year, says D. H. Hall, extension poultry specialist at Clemson college, who suggests below methods of treatment for these troubles.

Cholera is one of the worst diseases that is known in the poultry business. It attacks the fowls very suddenly, and as a rule a poultryman loses from one-third to one-half his flock before he can do anything. The best treatment is to prevent the spread of the disease rather than to treat the sick birds. Spray the house with a 10 per cent solution of some disinfectant, and burn or bury all of the droppings and dead fowls in deep holes. Feed wet mash in troughs so as to prevent spreading through dry mash hoppers. Keep the water fountains clean and use permanganate of potash as an antiseptic in the drinking water.

Limberneck is a disease resulting from poisoning of the fowl caused by feeding on decomposed animal flesh. This disease is characterized by a paralyzed condition of the body. The neck becomes limber and the head cannot be held erect. In treating this disease give each bird two teaspoonfuls of castor oil with a few drops of turpentine, and find the cause of the disease and remove it. Bury or burn all dead fowls.

Five Excellent Reasons for Standard Bred Hens

Here are five reasons for keeping standard-bred poultry:

More uniform in size, type and color. More attractive in appearance and appeals more strongly to purchasers of stock and eggs.

Offer a greater combination of practical and useful qualities suitable to the needs of the farmer and poultry keeper.

The products of standard-bred fowls are more uniform in quality, are in greater demand, and bring better prices.

Standard-bred poultry means greater success and better profits.

Average Production of Hens in Ordinary Flock

A flock of hens that averages 160 eggs a year per hen is a good flock. Here is the number of eggs per hen such a flock should average in each month:

November	8 eggs
December	10 eggs
January	10 eggs
February	10 eggs
March	13 eggs
April	21 eggs
[illegible]	[illegible]
June	18 eggs
July	16 eggs
August	13 eggs
September	9 eggs
October	6 eggs

Best Poultry Tonics

Fresh air, sunshine and exercise are the best tonics that can be given poultry. But fresh air does not mean drafts in the houses, nor does sunshine call for exposure to the hot sun's rays during the summer. But the houses should be so constructed that fresh air will be present both day and night, and the atmosphere purified. They must, too, be so arranged that the sunshine may reach every corner of the interior to destroy germs that may be lurking in dampness.

Use Soy Bean Oil Meal for Poultry

New Feed Could Well Be Fed to Greater Extent Than at Present.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With the rapid expansion of soybean culture in the Corn Belt states farmers of that region have at their disposal a new poultry feed which could well be used to much greater extent than is being done at present, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Poultrymen in the Pacific Coast states have used soy-bean oil meal for several years and consider it a most excellent feed for growth and egg production.

Feed Value of Meal.

A number of feeding tests at various experiment stations have shown the value of soy-bean oil meal as a poultry feed. At the North Carolina station it was found that when fed in equal quantities with wheat shorts and cracked corn mixed with sweet milk soy-bean oil meal proved to be a most valuable feed and one to be recommended as a good ration for feeding to little chicks. One lot of chicks on soy-bean oil meal averaged 1.4 pounds when eight weeks old. From these tests it was concluded that the soy-bean oil meal could replace rolled oats in chick feeding.

Another series of experiments showed that soy-bean oil meal with a suitable mineral mixture is a better supplement to corn meal than meat scraps and is nearly as good as condensed buttermilk when fed to chickens for short-time intensive-feeding periods. A simple mineral mixture composed of bone ash, limestone and salt was used. To be most effective, the amount of mineral mixture to be added should be about 2 per cent of the ration.

Add Mineral Mixtures.

The addition of the mineral mixture is necessary to prevent too great a growth of fat at the expense of protein growth. Hens responded in these tests to the use of the mineral mixture in a similar manner to that of young, growing birds. The mineral mixture, it has been shown, increases the value of the soy-bean oil meal as a protein supplement for growth and egg production more than 40 per cent.

A good mineral mixture is made of 00 parts bone phosphate, 29 parts salt, and 20 parts of limestone.

Vaccinate to Prevent Hog Cholera Outbreak

Warnings against a possible serious outbreak of hog cholera this year were given out recently from three states in which the hog famine definitely pointed in the direction of profits, this seems like a poor time to take chances on losing the hog crop to save a few dollars.

F. A. Zimmer, state veterinarian of Ohio, points to the fact that hog cholera runs in cycles and that it is due this year. About the time the hog raiser concluded in other years that the disease was disappearing, it has reappeared in acute form to take a toll of millions of dollars.

Dr. R. A. Craig of the veterinary department at the Indiana Agricultural college believes that a large corn crop and a good price for hogs will bring about a heavy movement of feeder hogs and cholera infection will become widely scattered. Furthermore, because of low prices, few hogs were immunized during the past two years, thus adding to the amount of material for cholera to work upon. Threshing gangs and visitors during the fall are largely responsible for spreading the disease from local areas because people do not practice what they know about the control of infectious diseases.

Vaccination is now generally recognized as the reliable method of preventing cholera when properly administered. While hundreds of farmers are vaccinating their own hogs successfully, there are many advantages in employing a skilled, established veterinarian who is known to be reliable and who will do his work for a reasonable price. At any rate, avoid the drifter who offers to do the job cheaply, but seldom is ever heard from again.

Silage and Fodder Made by Stacking Green Corn

Another form of silage may be made by stacking the bundles of green corn which have been cut about 20 feet in diameter and 20 feet high. The bundles should be distributed evenly over the surface with the butts laid to the outside. This will keep the outside higher than the center so that it will be necessary to fill in the center before the stack is completed. Thorough tramping will be beneficial. About eight inches around the outside of the stack will spoil but as only the butts of the stalks are affected by this, the loss is not serious. The top of the stack should be kept covered with a foot or two of straw or hay during the winter to reduce spoilage.

According to the Minnesota experimental station, stack silage cures somewhat differently from ordinary silage and has a sweet molasses odor and flavor which makes it palatable to all kinds of live stock. The results obtained with stack silage, however, have not always been satisfactory. The method is only suggested here as a possibility. Under many, if not most conditions it would seem that handling the immature corn as fodder would be safer.

Showers for Swine Aid to Sanitation

System for Washing Before Entering Killing Pen.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A shower-bath system for washing hogs before they enter the killing pen was recently installed in a large packing plant at Salt Lake City as a means of improving sanitary conditions about the place in general and particularly to aid in maintaining the scalding vat in a clean condition. Hogs normally are dirty and dusty, and if not thoroughly washed before killing will carry many impurities into the scalding vat. Maintaining the sanitary condition of the scalding vat has been one of the most troublesome problems of meat-packing plants.

The shower installed in this plant at a suggestion from Dr. E. P. Durham, in charge of federal meat inspection at Salt Lake City, consists of a battery of five water nozzles of the overhead fire-extinguisher type which cannot clog by corrosion. As the floor of the pen is of concrete, even the feet of the hogs are thoroughly cleaned.

The practice has not only reduced the contamination of the water in the scalding vat, but has also served to do away with the dust which ordinarily arises from dirty hogs, thus protecting the employees of the killing section of the establishment from infection and irritation of the nose and throat.

The benefits of the plan greatly outweigh the slight expense of installation and operation. Officials of the United States Department of Agriculture state that the practice of washing hogs prior to slaughter is suitable and advisable in any plant, whether under federal supervision or not.

Flour Middlings Useful in Making Pigs Thrive

Flour middlings and those other wheat products, standard middlings and red-dog flour, are good feed for hogs, according to a series of tests reported in a new bulletin by E. F. Ferrin and M. A. McCarty of the Minnesota agricultural experiment station.

While these by-products of the flour mill have long been fed to pigs, there have been no very definite guides for intelligent selection among the three, or for determining whether it pays to use any one of them. It is for this reason that the bulletin, which is for free distribution, has been issued.

In tests, hogs were fed four rations. The first ration contained yellow shelled corn, tankage and alfalfa meal. The other three contained the same ingredients with the addition of either standard middlings, flour middlings, or red-dog flour. The quantities of corn and tankage were reduced in each case to meet the addition of the wheat by-product.

As a result of the tests the bulletin says that it is profitable to substitute a wheat by-product for a part of the corn and tankage fed to growing pigs on alfalfa pasture, provided the mill feed does not cost more per pound than corn. If the differences in prices are normal, flour middlings should be given the preference.

Growing Hay Crop Need Not Harm Soil Fertility

Growing hay need not injure the fertility of the soil if proper methods are followed, say workers in the field of soil fertility at the New York State College of Agriculture. If conditions have been made favorable for clover though the addition of sufficient lime and phosphorus, the timothy field may be maintained for one year without further fertilization.

In some cases, however, it seems desirable to keep the land to timothy for more than a year. It should then be top-dressed with manure each fall or winter. Six to eight loads to the acre have usually been found adequate, providing 25 pounds of acid phosphate are mixed with each load of manure. An alternative procedure is to top-dress in the early spring at the rate of 200 pounds or more to each acre with a mixture of equal parts of nitrate of soda and acid phosphate.

This method of utilizing fertilizers in rotation has been found to result in a much larger than average yield of timothy, while at the same time there is no lessened yield of the other crops grown in rotation.

FARM NOTES

Corn silage is a better feed than corn fodder.

Scrub cows are manufacturers; they turn profits into losses.

More acres of soy beans than alfalfa were planted in Ohio last year.

Blueberries seven-eighths of an inch in diameter have been produced on an experimental farm in New Jersey—which eventually should make blueberry pies less infrequent.

In soil fertility tests at the South Dakota experiment station the addition of phosphorus alone has increased the yield of all crops about 30 per cent. These tests have been carried on for 15 years.

A better ration is always an economical one. Six profitable changes in feeding methods were reported in one month to the state college at Ithaca by those who had finished its correspondence courses.

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

How Much Are Poor Roads Costing You?

5,000,000 of America's 18,000,000 motor vehicles are recognized as an economic necessity on the farm.

Is your car giving the full efficiency of which it is capable—and at the lowest cost per mile possible?

Not if you are jolting over bumps and ruts. Not if you get stuck in the mud.

In addition to the time you thus lose along the way, you also pay from one to four cents a mile more in gasoline, tire and repair bills than you would pay on permanently paved highways.

Think, too, how many so-called improved roads have gone to pieces within the past few years, thereby piling up huge maintenance and rebuilding costs.

Contrast all this with the record of Concrete Roads—the roads that have repair built out and maintenance built in. Firm, rigid and unyielding, free of bumps, ruts, holes, mud and dust, they are, in every way, the most economical roads.

Tell your highway officials you want more Concrete Roads. Such an investment will pay you big dividends after a year.

Let us give you all the facts about Concrete Roads, including the experience of other communities. Ask for our free booklet, R-3.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COBRA-DE-CAPELLO

"Well, well, well, here I am," hissed the Cobra-de-Capello.

"So I see," said Billie Brownie, who had come to the snake house in the zoo to hear some of the stories the snakes had to tell him.

Then, as you know, he would send forth his stories for others to hear, and the night that he got back to Fairyland and Brownieland all the Elves and Fairies, Brownies, Gnomes, Old Witty Witch, Old Mr. Giant, the members of the Bogey and Oaf families would come and hear what he had to say.

"You know, of course, too, that Mother Nature gave Billie Brownie the power to understand the different languages of her children and to see them when he wished.

When people were around he wore his invisible robe so they could not see him.

Brownies and Gnomes and Elves and Fairies are shy and do not want to be seen by people.

"Yes, here you are," hissed the Coral Snake, both to Billie Brownie and to the Cobra-de-Capello.

"What is there to do in the zoo?" asked the Cobra-de-Capello.

"Nothing much," said the Coral Snake.

"Doesn't sound encouraging or cheerful," said the Cobra-de-Capello.

"How about people? Do many of them come around, or do we just have to go out of our cage and search for them?"

"So I See," Said Billie Brownie.

Billie Brownie knew that he was safe, as his robe was also an absolute protection.

Sometimes when the animals talked in a very wild fashion Billie did tremble a little!

But he knew he was really safe.

He thought now that these snakes were talking among themselves it would be more interesting just to listen to them than to ask them questions.

So he sat by and listened.

"I can't get out of here it seems just now," said Cobra-de-Capello, "but I suppose I will find a way.

"Answer my question, Coral Snake, do we go for the people or do they come around these parts so that they are easy to get?"

"Lots and lots of people come to the zoo," said the Coral Snake.

"Great joy!" hissed the Cobra-de-Capello. "Great joy. We don't have to look for people. They come to us.

"That is fine. How my mouth waters! Let me see—I could kill about two thousand people a month nicely by biting them."

"Ha, ha, ha," hissed the Coral Snake, "you will do nothing of the sort."

"I beg your pardon," said the Cobra-de-Capello, "you don't realize to whom you are speaking. You are talking to the most dreadful snake in all of India.

"No one can cure a person whom I have bitten. I have a poison which no one understands, it is so horrible. Ah, it is fine to be so powerful.

"They felt glad when I left India—they hated me! Oh, how they hated me! I rejoice in that fact."

"I know perfectly who you are and what you are," said the Coral Snake, "but you are in the zoo and the people who come here only come to look at you. They don't come to be bitten."

"Then I will give them a surprise," said the Cobra-de-Chapello.

"Oh no, you won't," said the Coral Snake, "for you can't get out of your cage, and the people can look at you without being touched."

"So that is what the zoo is, eh?" said the Cobra-de-Capello. "Oh, well, I'm worth looking at, and if they feed me enough and let me sleep enough, I'll be happy. Still, if ever they want to see how powerful I am they can let me out and I'm sure I'll never forget my wonderful poisonous bite."

"You won't forget it, but you won't have the chance to remember it," said the Coral Snake, and Billie Brownie went away much satisfied at this.

Proving a Proverb

"Now, boys," said the master, "always remember that the early bird catches the worm."

Next morning a small boy appeared with a tear-stained face.

"What's the matter, Tommy?"

"Please, sir, you said it was the early bird that got the worm."

"Yes."

"Well, father thrashed me!"

"What for?"

"Because I let our canary out early this morning and it hasn't come back with the worm."

SATIN CREPE FOR AUTUMN; BEADED LACE FALL NOVELTY

ACCORDING to our psychologists, self-expression is the big thought of the present generation. Nor is this characteristic found wanting in the world of modern fashion. There is the matter of silk, for instance. In the days of "lavender and old lace" a silk dress was looked upon as a "possession," as a treasurable frock reserved for "Sunday-go-to-meetin'" wear or for weddings or special festive occasions. For the ordinary affairs of life calico, ginghams, percale and the like were the appointed materials. We modernists, being self-expressionists, take issue with this idea.

So it is silk we are choosing for school, for office, for home, for sports, for street, and in fact for general utility wear. To substantiate this claim that silk is eminently practical for all occasions, we have taken to making it up in very simple styles which betray no signs of "fussiness" or overdressy effects.

Two interesting silk frocks which eloquently bespeak modes adaptable to informal daytime wear are here illustrated. Attention is especially called to the girlish neck lines and tie effects. These tie-collars are the styles' pet theme this season. The majority of darker silk dresses are enlivened by graceful long ties matched either to the frock or in contrasting color, or, most popular of all, of pure white washable crepe silk.

Notice, too, the intriguing manner of introducing fullness in the skirt, for the flare is an established fact for forthcoming autumn and winter frocks. The dress in the top foreground charmingly interprets the new vogue for shirred set-in portions, while the continued favor for plaiting is confirmed by the other model. In both instances satin crepe is selected for the making of these frocks, for satin crepe is authoritatively announced as one of the popular dress materials for the forthcoming season.

In modes of the hour, lace is playing a winsome part. Its continued use is also accented by stylists throughout autumn fashions. This vogue for lace embraces not only metal and other elaborate types, such as for instance the new beaded laces, but it also stresses chantilly and colored silk laces. This favor for lace emphasizes the tendency to exploit supple and sheer effects for this fall and winter.

One of the elegancies to which much attention is being directed is the graceful lace tunic. To be sure, there is a note of extravagance suggested in the idea, but as a matter of fact, economy is the chief asset of a lace overblouse which can be posed over various silken or satin costume slips, thus supplying a "different" appearing frock suited to the time and the event.

Referring, by way of demonstration, to the lace tunic in the picture. As shown here it is worn over a black satin slip and thus proclaims its tastefulness as a grande dame afternoon frock. Substitute for this black foundation a slip of flesh-colored satin or silver metal cloth, change the girdle for one of the delicately toned ribbon worn with loops en masse at the left hip and presto! the daytime costume becomes a formal evening gown of appealing charm. The fact that this adorable lace tunic is fashioned of several sorts of lace should prove an inspiration to the woman of vision, and deft fingers. Most every family's cedar chest holds within its sacred precincts bits of lace treasured from generation to generation. Furthermore the bargain counter in this store and that offers tempting lace lengths to those who will, for a trifling fee, come and partake.

Beaded lace is the exquisite novelty promised for fall. In some instances the richness of lace is enhanced by embroideries in colored silk together with an interspersion of beads. There is a decided movement afoot toward the use of metal laces especially for evening gowns and for millinery purposes.

Let us sometimes live—be it only for an hour, and though we must lay all else aside—to make others smile.—Charles Wagner.

INEXPENSIVE DISHES

While the tender celery is at its best in our gardens, let us eat freely of it. As a luncheon dish it is especially attractive. The coarser outside stalks may be cut up and cooked for this dish. Take two cupfuls of cooked celery, put a layer in a buttered baking dish, add a layer of thick white sauce, then a sprinkling of cheese and another layer of celery; finish with a layer of white sauce and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake until the crumbs are brown.

Missouri Chicken.—Place a good-sized piece of fresh pork (one of the cheaper cuts), in the pan with the stuffed and roasting chicken. Around the meat place peeled sweet potatoes and baste them often while roasting. Season the pork well and the flavor of the chicken and pork will blend, making a delicious gravy.

Oysters in Cucumber Cups.—Cut large cucumbers into two parts, crosswise; scoop out the centers and slice a piece off each end to make them stand upright. Fill with raw oysters and bake in a hot oven until the cucumbers are tender. Serve with a spoonful of tartar sauce in each cup. Minced fish or lobster may be used in place of the oysters, if they are not available.

Corn Pudding.—Open and air a can of corn for an hour before using. Beat three eggs, add a pint of rich milk, the corn, salt, pepper, and one-half teaspoonful of worcestershire sauce. Cook until the mixture is firm.

Sweet Potatoes Southern Style.—Cook the potatoes in their skins until soft. Cut them after peeling into thick slices and lay them in a greased baking dish. Sprinkle with sugar and add butter to each layer. Bake in a slow oven at least an hour. Place a marshmallow on top of each slice and let it puff and brown, just before serving.

Beets are never better than when prepared and baked in the oven until tender. Peel, chop, dress with butter, pepper and salt and a dash of vinegar. Olive oil is especially good instead of butter. Serve very hot.

Inviting Dishes.

A head of lettuce with a good salad dressing is a salad which appeals to almost all tastes.

It is difficult to analyze a dressing when all the ingredients are not in some visible form. Garlic has been tabooed by people who have never used or tasted it. Simply the mention of garlic is enough to call forth criticism. When correctly used garlic makes a delicate, indescribable and appetizing flavor; it is also a natural aid to digestion.

One of the recent recommendations given for garlic is that eaten daily, one clove on retiring, it is a cure for high blood pressure.

Garlic vinegar is easily prepared and is always ready to add to any salad dressing. To a small clove of garlic, finely sliced, add a pint of vinegar; let stand in a bottle three weeks, strain and put away for use.

Sherry's Dressing.—Take two tablespoonfuls each of chopped red and green pepper, both of the sweet variety; add one tablespoonful of powdered sugar, a teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of red pepper, one-fourth of a cupful of good vinegar and one cupful of the best olive oil, one small southern onion finely chopped. Shake in a pint jar for five minutes, then set away to chill. This will keep for two weeks in an ice chest.

Peach Butter.—Pare and cut into slices fully ripe freestone peaches of good flavor. Add a third of a cupful of water to a pound of fruit, cook and mash all the time; add ten finely chopped blanched peach kernels and three-fourths of a pound of sugar to each pound of fruit, weighed before cooking. Cook, stir and test by trying a little on a cold plate. Be careful in the cooking as it burns easily.

Watermelon and muskmelon are not often associated with salads, but they add greatly to the flavor and appearance of any salad in which the flavor blends. Diced pineapple, green grapes cut into halves, peeled and seeded; bananas, a ripe pear cut into strips, and a dozen quartered marshmallows make a fine salad, with spoonful of mayonnaise added to a cupful of cream. Dip the scissors in water and the marshmallows will cut easily.

Club Sandwich.—On a three-cornered piece of buttered toast lay a slice of cooked chicken breast, over it lay a very thin slice of dill pickle; on this a piece of crisp, cooked bacon, and cover with a lettuce leaf. Serve cut in triangles.

Sponge Bananas.—Cover the bottom of a baking dish with small sponge cakes, cover with a layer of bananas, sprinkle with sugar and the juice of a lemon, add chopped nuts, and bake 15 minutes. Serve with custard or thick cream.

Lesson for September 13

PAUL IN THESSALONICA AND BEREA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:1-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thess. 5:21.

PRIMARY TOPIC — Loving God's Word.

JUNIOR TOPIC — Studying God's Word.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Two Kinds of Hearers.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Searching the Scriptures.

I. Paul Preaching in Thessalonica (vv. 1-4).

1. His Method (vv. 1-2).

He observed the divine order, to the Jews first wherever he went (Acts 1:8; Rom. 2:9-10). He was exceedingly anxious for his kinsmen in the flesh, but whenever they proved themselves unworthy, he turned to the Gentiles. His own kinsmen first should be the method of every missionary, but should not stop there. He went out on the Sabbath day so as to find them assembled together.

2. His Message (v. 3).

His message was always and ever the same, viz., that Jesus is the Christ. To the Jew the essential thing was to be convinced from the Scriptures. So Paul expounded to them the Scriptures. This is the business of all ministers, to expound the Scriptures, to prove their positions by the Word. Concerning the Christ, he set forth three propositions:

(1) The Scriptures prove that Christ must be a sufferer (v. 3). "It behooved Christ to suffer." No plainer reference need be made than Isaiah 53, but it seems that the rabbis of that time had explained away the fact of a suffering Messiah so that the Jewish people were only looking for a glorious and powerful king to come; therefore they rejected Christ because of His lowly appearance. The same method of exegesis is employed by many Bible teachers and preachers today. Only the emphasis is placed upon the literal suffering of the Messiah, while they spiritualize and allegorize the teaching of the glorious coming of the Messiah to judge His enemies and to reign upon the earth (Ps. Sam. 7:8-16; Isa. 53; Jer. 23:5-8; Zech. 9:14; Luke 1:31-33; Acts 15:14-17).

(2) That Christ Must Rise Again From the Dead (v. 3).

This he proved by the Scriptures. The resurrection of Christ, and the bodily resurrection of believers, needs sound and practical exposition in our churches today.

(3) That the Historic Jesus Whom He Proclaimed Did Suffer and Rise From the Dead; Therefore, He Is That Christ, the Predicted Messiah (v. 3).

II. The Attitude of the Jews (vv. 4-10a).

While some Jews believed and many Greeks, the envy of certain Jews was so aroused at Paul's success that they gathered together the worthless fellows of the town and set on foot a riot. They assaulted the house of Jason and dragged him before the rulers, having failed to get the missionaries. In their indictment of the missionaries they uttered unwittingly some great truths. They said: "These that have turned the world upside down." It is true that the gospel is revolutionary, but it is not treason to right government. The real truth, however, is that the world is now upside down. The work of the gospel is to set it right side up. They turned the preaching of Paul into a specious lie. He did preach the kingship of Jesus (see verse 7), but not as they endeavored to make it appear. Jesus is most assuredly coming to reign on this earth (Ps. 2). Let all men acknowledge Him in humble submission.

III. Paul Preaching in Berea (vv. 10b-15).

1. His Method (v. 10).

He entered the Jewish synagogue and preached Jesus unto them.

2. The Reception of the Gospel by the Bereans (vv. 11-12).

It was with gladness of heart. The message was just as new to these Jews and just as counter to their way of thinking as it was to the Thessalonian Jews, but they had a more noble disposition. The success of the gospel depends altogether on the disposition of the hearers. Two things are said of them:

(1) They received the message gladly.

(2) They searched the Scriptures daily for the truthfulness of the preaching. For this worthy act Paul says they were more noble than those at Thessalonica.

Weak, Noble Creatures

In this world there are thousands of weak, noble creatures who fancy that sacrifice always must be the last word of duty; thousands of beautiful souls that know not what should be done and seek only to yield up their life, holding that to be virtue supreme. They are wrong; supreme virtue consists in the knowledge of what should be done, in the power to decide for ourselves whereto we should offer our life.—Maeterlinck.

Crow's Little Hoard

While cutting a large tree at Stow, Maine, Herbert Andrews was surprised to see a piece of money fall at his feet. Upon picking it up, it proved to be a bright dime, which was partly covered with flecks of tree mold. A careful search of the tree, after it was felled, disclosed the place from which the coin had fallen. As the tree was well back in the woods from any highway, it is believed that a crow, attracted by the gleam of the dime, picked it up and carried it to a safe hiding place.

ROYAL AMBASSADORS RETURN FROM CAMP

The Royal Ambassadors of Clanton Baptist church, Mr. J. L. Johnson leader returned from a delightful three days [illegible] on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Johnson and ambassadors with their paraphernalia, left by truck for Speigners on Wednesday afternoon.

The time was spent boating fishing swimming and enjoying the out of door life.

At some points the lake at Speigners is fully a mile wide. From one of these points Messrs Clarence Lumpkin and Rowell Deumison, Speigners, performed the feat of swimming across.

Mr. ClarenceLumpkin who has charge of the lake, assumed the role of host to the ambassadors and so well did he play the part that Mr. Johnson and those boys will ever feel grateful to him for a full measure of the pleasure they had while in camp at Spigners.

The ambassdors accompanying Mr. Johnosn were:

Stewart Armstrong, Jackson Armstrong, Gaston Robinson, Courtland Retherford and Archie Harris.

TELEPHONE FACTS

New York State has 14 times as many telephones as Italy.

Of cities in the state of Mississippi, Jackson leads in the number of telephones. Meridian is second.

The average amount spent for telephone service in the American home is less than two cents a day per person.

In proportion to number of folks Boston has twice as many telephones as Berlin, nearld four times as many as London, and over nine times as Rome.

If all the telephone employees in the United States tried to attend the same football game, they would fill Yale Bowl four times over.

Five hundred and fifty thousand miles of new telephone wire were added to the Bell system in Pennsylvania during 1924, including underground, aerial cable and open wire circuits.

Two and one-quarter million miles of wire are used in furnishing telephone service in the city of Chicago. This is enough to encircle the earth ninety times at the equator.

A fruit tree is a plant in the same sense that cotton or corn are plants. All of us know that to get good crops of cotton, corn or other annual growing plant that good soil, well prepared, properly cultivated and cared for is necessary. Yet thousands of people plant fruit trees on rather poor soil and expect these trees to look out for themselves after they are planted. A fruit tree is not a forest tree. It will not produce fruit of any material value if it must expend all of its energy fighting for its very existence. Therefore set in fertile soil, if profitable returns are expected.

The soil should not only be fertile but should be well drained. Few fruit trees will stand wet feet, this being specially true of peaches. In order to avoid as much damage as possible from late frosts, the trees should be planted where good air drainage exists. Therefore keep them out of low places. Put them on the knolls and hills where good air drainage is provided.

It is a well known fact that earliest or latest frosts appear in the low, bottom places. This is because of the fact that cold air is heavier than warm air naturally rushes into these low places or drains off in the same way that water drains from high to low places. This makes it especially important that fruit trees be planted on the ground that is not only well drained as far as water is concerned, but porvided with proper air drainage as well. This may seem like a small point yet it may very well mean the differeence between many crops of fruit bing destroyed by late frosts or freezes and escaping same.

A big Chicago bakery has installed a 90-foot traveling oven that will use 12,000,000 cubic feet of gas a year. There are now nine such ovens in Chicago alone, producing 54,000 loaves of bread every every hour of the year.

Gas was thought to have deceived its death blow with the coming of electric power. It hasn't—it has really just begun to find its true sphere in the industrial field. Its use is increasing enormously.

Garage Changes Hands at Thorsby

Messrs Garrick and Scott have purchased the Thorsby Garage from E. N. Bentley, and are now in charge of same. These two young men are experienced auto repair mechanics, and will give their patrons the very best of service.

Mr. Scott recently sold his garage at Maplesville, while Mr. Garrick has been connected with Thorsby garage for some time.

Besides a regular garage business, a full line of accesories will be kept.

Mr Bentley will devote all his time to his new filling station on the pavement just east of the depot.

An announcement will be found on page eight or these two firms.

About 9,000,000 persons make income tax returns. But 100,000,000 more Americans help make the money the 9,000,000 pay. Now even the tax. The government spends $10,000,000 a day. The people have to earn that money and pay it to the government. If federal economy causes a saving of $1,000,000 a day the money saved will not be piled up to make a treasury surplus but left in the hands of the people. Unfortunately, to a large extent national government economies are offset by local government extravagances on bad management. But the fact that there is saving any where is cause for rejoicing. A cut in the income tax at least will save money to help pay local taxes—

The common people don't believe in the two-primary system, as their state expenses are enough already, and when they try to saddle two-primaries on them, they are going to get nipped off.

GET A BROADER VIEWPOINT

Because our country is so large, we are often inclined to narrow our [illegible] more immediate sections in which we live. Californians may think their state [illegible] that they have the only modern buildings and Flordia that it has the principal recreation resorts.

To show the narrowness of such views, consider the road question alone. The Southern states, which have been generally advertised as having bad roads, are rapidly forging to the front in the construction of new paver motor roads. Reports from the highway departments of 16 southern states show that under their direction a total of $170,000,000 is available for new roads this year.

Including the construction work [illegible] year [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] year for road improvements will aggregate approximately $400,000,000. In the new construction, the asphaltic types of pavements predominate and their mileage this year will outstrip any year heretofore, on account of their practicability for all types of hard-surfacing.

As it is with roads, so it is with other lines of activity. The whole country is growing. We should all know more about its resources and realize that [illegible] our favored section.

TRY THIS OUT

"One phase of radio reception which is generally overlooked and yet has a most important bearing on results," says Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, Chief Broadcast Engineer, of the Radio corporation of America, is the location of the loud speaker.

It is astonishing now considerably radio music can be modified by changing the location of the loud speaker. A little experimentation along this line will generally produce worthwhile results. Especially is this true in summer, when the static background stands out boldly unless the sound volume [illegible] duced. The loud speaker, located [illegible] doors will give out more volume but it will also focus attention on every little detail, static background included, no [illegible] to worry be.

"On the other hand, if the loudspeaker is brought out on the porch or on the lawn, little details of its voice are no longer discernible and only the main theme-music or speech-remains to attract attention of listeners."

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON "GOLD BONDS"

"Before I go to the bank to ask advice about investing the money mother left me, I wish you would tell me something more about bonds," said Helen to Aunt Emmy. "Am I right in thinking that gold bonds are absolutely safe? Are gold bonds a [illegible] [illegible] a gilt edged security?"

"What a child it is!" laughed Aunt Emmy. "I can see that you do need to learn something about bonds. The term 'gold bond' does not have anything to do with the term 'gilt edged security.' The latter is nothing more than a commonly used phrase that means a safe security. [illegible] the bond gold [illegible] redeem them in United States gold coin of the weight and fineness of the gold coin issued by the United States Treasury at the time the bonds are put on the market. This is done in order to protect the bondholders from the very remote possibility of a radical change in the value of United States currency, such as, for example, the changes in the values of German and other European currencies as a result of the war. While such a thing is unlikely to occur in this country financiers always try to guard against every possible trouble. Although a bond may be payable in gold [illegible] necessary to demand payment in actual gold coin since our American money is on a gold basis anyhow and our good old paper dollars have exactly the same value as golden dollars.

"But you want to hear in mind one thing. Because you buy a so-called 'gold bond,' that does not mean that the bond is secured by gold in any way, or that it is stronger than any other bond. The strength of a bond lies simply and only in the ability of the company that issues it to pay its debts. And of course you should consider the value of the property pledged or mortgaged to secure the bond, if any property is given as security."

"Dear me, Aunt Emmy," exclaimed Helen, "I never realized how much one needs to know before investing one's money. In my case it is important not to have a loss, because although I have only a tiny amount of money it is all I have in the world. How can I ever learn to tell what is good from what is bad?"

"I am not sure you ever can rely on your own judgement, my dear," smiled Aunt Emmy, "but if you will be guided by your bank, you needn't worry."—A. B. Aymes.

ON GUARD AGAINST FARM CROOKS

With every constructive movement for the improvement of agriculture one is likely to find men who will attempt to capitalize it for their own personal benefit. This may take the form of shipping in poor and unprofitable livestock to palm off on unsuspecting farmers, or it may sometimes be selling fair to good livestock at exorbitant prices under promise of taking back some of the offspring at high figures.

There are several instances where the college of agriculture through its county agent system has co-operated in heading off the introduction of undesirable or extravagantly priced live stock. In other instances the state bankers association, through its agricultural committee or the secretary's office, has sent warnings to its member banks relative to individuals or firms operating on an unsound basis. It is as important to head off undesirable and unprofitable [illegible] as it is to encourage constructive and profitable ones.—Banker-Farmer

BANKERS HELP

The banks of [illegible] county, Tennessee, are furnishing pure bred eggs to all who will agree to return one pullet for each fifteen eggs in the fall.

The Missouri Bankers Association issued the first number of the "Agricultural Information Service Quarterly" in April. This publication deals with timely agricultural subjects of interest to bankers. A discussion of the various projects proposed as a basis for the program of banker-farmer co-operation in Missouri appears in the first issue.

Clearing houses in Georgia have approved a [illegible] of $30,000 annually for the next three years for the purpose of carrying out a program of farm development and crop diversification in Georgia. The proposal was initiated by the Georgia Bankers Association. The plan calls for the creation of a state-wide development committee of thirty members which will function under the direction of the Agricultural Committee of the Georgia Bankers Association.

Nebraska [illegible] to school. The College of Agriculture is having a short course in agriculture for bankers. Registration is in charge of the Nebraska Bankers Association. The [illegible] thought is, "Every bank in Nebraska should be represented." Nine out of ten banks in one county have signed attendance cards. Scores of the cards have been received by Dan V. Stephens, chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Bankers Association, and he has received over a hundred letters

"Perhaps," eagerly, "you'll dine at my little apartment some time. Just four or six of us, or even—"

"Perhaps."

"Would you like the Drake tonight?"

"It looks too much like a Roman bath. The pillars scare me. Let's go to the Blackstone."

They went to the Blackstone. The head waiter knew him. "Good evening, Mr. DeJong." Dirk was secretly gratified. Then, with a shock, he realized that the head waiter was grinning at Dallas and Dallas was grinning at the head waiter. "Hello, Andre," said Dallas.

"Good evening, Miss O'Mara." The text of his greeting was correct and befitting the head waiter at the Blackstone. But his voice was lyric and his eyes glowed. His manner of seating her at a table was an enthronement.

At the look in Dirk's eyes, "I met him in the army," Dallas explained, "when I was in France. He's a grand lad."

"Were you in—what did you do in France?"

"Oh, odd jobs."

Her dinner gown was very smart, but the pink ribbon strap of an undergarment showed untidily at one side—her silk brassiere, probably. Paula would have—but then, a thing like that was impossible in Paula's perfection of toilette. He loved the way the gown cut sharply away at the shoulder to show her firm white arms. It was dull gold, the color of her hair. This was one Dallas. There were a dozen—a hundred. Yet she was always the same. You never knew whether you were going to meet the gamin of the rumpled smock and the smudged face or the beauty of the little fur jacket. Sometimes Dirk thought she looked like the splendid goddesses you saw in paintings—the kind with high, pointed breasts and gracious, gentle pose—holding out a horn of plenty. There was about her something genuine and earthy and elemental. He noticed that her nails were short and not well cared for—not glittering and pointed and cruelly sharp and horridly vermilion, like Paula's. That pleased him, too, somehow.

"Some oysters?" he suggested. "They are perfectly safe here. Or fruit cocktail? Then breast of guinea hen under glass and an artichoke—"

She looked a little worried. "If you—suppose you take that. Me, I'd like a steak and some potatoes au gratin and a salad with Russian—"

"That's fine!" He was delighted. He doubled that order and they consumed it with devastating thoroughness. She ate rolls. She ate butter. She made no remarks about the food except to say, once, that it was good and that she had forgotten to eat lunch because she had been so busy working. All this Dirk found most restful and refreshing.

Usually, when you dined in a restaurant with a woman she said, "Oh, I'd love to eat some of those crisp little rolls!"

You said, "Why not?"

Invariably the answer to this was, "I daren't! Goodness! A half pound at least. I haven't eaten a roll with butter in a year."

Again you said, "Why not?"

"Afraid I'll get fat."

Automatically, "You! Nonsense. You're just right."

He was bored with these women who talked about their weight, figure, lines. He thought it in bad taste. Paula was always rigidly refraining from this or that. It made him uncomfortable to sit at the table facing her; eating his thorough meal while she nibbled fragile curls of Melba toast, a lettuce leaf, and half a sugarless grapefruit. It lessened his enjoyment of his own oysters, steak, coffee. He thought that she always eyed his food a little avidly, for all her expressed indifference to it. She was looking a little haggard, too.

"The theater's next door," he said. "Just a step. We don't have to leave here until after eight."

"That's nice." She had her cigarette with her coffee in a mellow, sensuous atmosphere of enjoyment. He was talking about himself a good deal. He felt relaxed, at ease, happy.

"You know I'm an architect—at least, I was one. Perhaps that's why I like to hang around your shop so. I get sort of homesick for the pencils and the drawing board—the whole thing."

"Why did you give it up, then?"

"Nothing in it."

"How do you mean—nothing in it?"

"No money. After the war nobody was building. Oh, I suppose if I'd hung on—"

"And then you became a banker, h'm? Well, there ought to be money enough in a bank."

He was a little nettled. "I wasn't a banker—at first. I was a bond salesman."

Her brows met in a little frown. "I'd rather," Dallas said, slowly, "plan one back door of a building that's going to help make this town beautiful and significant than sell all the bonds that ever floated a—whatever it is that bonds are supposed to float."

He defended himself. "I felt that way, too. But you see, my mother had given me my education, really. She worked for it. I couldn't go dubbing along, earning just enough to keep me. I wanted to give her things. I wanted—"

"Did she want those things? Did she want you to give up architecture and go into bonds?"

"Well—she—I don't know that she exactly—" He was too decent—still too much the son of Selina DeJong—to be able to lie about that.

"You said you were going to let me meet her."

"Would you let me bring her in? Or perhaps you'd even—would you drive out to the farm with me some day. She'd like that so much."

"So would I."

He leaned toward her, suddenly. "Listen, Dallas. What do you think of me, anyway?" He wanted to know. He couldn't stand not knowing any longer.

"I think you're a nice young man."

That was terrible. "But I don't want you to think I'm a nice young man. I want you to like me—a lot. Tell me, what haven't I got that you think I ought to have? Why do you put me off so many times? I never feel that I'm really near you. What is it I lack?" He was abject.

"Well, if you're asking for it. I do demand of the people I see often that they possess at least a splash of splendor in their makeup. Some people are nine-tenths splendor and one-tenth tawdriness, like Gene Meran. And some are nine-tenths tawdriness and one-tenth splendor, like Sam Huebch. But some people are all just a nice even pink without a single patch of royal purple."

"And that's me, h'm?"

He was horribly disappointed, hurt, wretched. But a little angry, too. His pride. Why, he was Dirk DeJong, the most successful of Chicago's younger men; the most promising; the most popular. After all, what did she do but paint commercial pictures for fifteen hundred dollars apiece?

"What happens to the men who fall in love with you? What do they do?"

Dallas stirred her coffee thoughtfully. "They usually tell me about it."

"And then what?"

"Then they seem to feel better and we become great friends."

"But don't you ever fall in love with them?" Pretty d—d sure of herself. "Don't you ever fall in love with them?"

"I almost always do," said Dallas.

He plunged. "I could give you a lot of things you haven't got, purple or no purple."

"I'm going to France in April. Paris."

"What d'you mean! Paris. What for?"

"Study. I want to do portraits. Oils."

He was terrified. "Can't you do them here?"

"Oh, no. Not what I need. I have been studying here. I've been taking life-work three nights a week at the Art institute, just to keep my hand in."

"So that's where you are, evenings?" He was strangely relieved. "Let me go with you some time, will you?" Anything. Anything.

She took him with her one evening, steering him successfully past the stern Irishman who guarded the entrance to the basement classrooms; to her locker, got into her smock, grabbed her brushes, went directly to her place, fell to work at once. Dirk blinked in the strong light. He glanced at the dais toward which they were all gazing from time to time as they worked. On it lay a nude woman.

To himself Dirk said, in a sort of panic: "Why, say, she hasn't got any clothes on! My gosh! this is fierce. She hasn't got anything on!" He tried, meanwhile, to look easy, careless, critical. Strangely enough, he succeeded, after the first shock, not only in looking at ease, but feeling so. The class was doing the whole figure in oils.

The model was a moron with a skin like velvet and rose petals. She fell into poses that flowed like cream. Her hair was waved in wooden undulations and her nose was pure vulgarity and her earrings were drug-store pearls in triple strands but her back was probably finer than Helen's and her breasts twin snowdrifts penked with coral. In twenty minutes Dirk found himself impersonally interested in tone, shadows, colors, line. He listened to the low-voiced instructor and squinted carefully to ascertain whether that shadow on the model's stomach really should be painted blue or brown.

Even Dirk could see that Dallas' canvas was almost insultingly superior to that of the men and women about her. Beneath the flesh on her canvas there were muscles, and beneath those muscles blood and bone. You felt she had a surgeon's knowledge of anatomy.

It was after eleven when they emerged from the Art institute door way and stood a moment together at the top of the broad steps surveying the world that lay before them. Dallas said nothing. Suddenly the beauty of the night rushed up and overwhelmed Dirk. Gorgeousness and tawdriness; color and gloom. At the right the white tower of the Wrigley building rose wraithlike against a background of purple sky.

Straight ahead the hut of the Adams street L station in midair was Venetian bridge, with the black canal of asphalt flowing sluggishly beneath. The reflection of cafeteria and cigar-shop windows on either side were slender shafts of light along the canal. An enchanting sight.

"Nice," said Dallas. A long breath. She was a part of all this.

"Yes." He felt an outsider. "Want a sandwich? Are you hungry?"

"I'm starved."

They had sandwiches and coffee at an all-night one-arm lunch room because Dallas said her face was too dirty for a restaurant and she didn't want to bother to wash it. She was more than ordinarily companionable that night; a little tired; less buoyant and independent than usual. This gave her a little air of helplessness—of fatigue—that aroused all his tenderness. Her smile gave him a warm rush of pure happiness—until he saw her smile in exactly the same way at the plumply young man who lorded it over the shining nickel coffee container, as she told him that his coffee was grand.

Chapter XV

The things that had mattered so vitally didn't seem to be important, somehow, now. The people who had seemed so desirable had become suddenly insignificant. The games he had played appeared silly games. He was seeing things through Dallas O'Mara's wise, beauty-loving eyes. Strangely enough, he did not realize that this girl saw life from much the same angle as that at which his mother regarded it. In the last few years his mother had often offended him by her attitude toward these rich and powerful friends of his—their ways, their games, their amusements, their manners. And her way of living in turn offended him. On his rare visits to the farm it seemed to him there was always some drab dejected female in the kitchen or living room or on the porch—a woman with broken teeth and comic shoes and tragic eyes—drinking great draughts of coffee and telling her woes to Selina—Sairey Gampish ladies smelling unpleasantly of peppermint and perspiration and poverty. "And he ain't had a lick of work since November—"

"You don't say! That's terrible!"

He wished she wouldn't.

Sometimes old Aug Hempel drove out there and Dirk would come upon the two snickering wickedly together about something that he knew concerned the North Shore crowd.

It had been years since Selina had said, sociably, "What did ther have for dinner, Dirk? H'm?"

"Well—soup—"

"Nothing before the soup?"

"Oh, yeh. Some kind of a—one of those canape things, you know. Caviare."

"My! Caviare!"

Sometimes Selina giggled like a naughty girl at things that Dirk had taken quite seriously. The fox hunts, for example. Lake Forest had taken to fox hunting, and the Tippecanoe crowd kept kennels. Dirk had learned to ride—pretty well. An Englishman—a certain Captain Stokes-Beatty—had initiated the North Shore into the mysteries of fox hunting. Huntin'. The North Shore learned to say nec'sary and conservatory. Captain Stokes-Beatty was a tall, bow-legged, and somewhat horse-faced young man, remote in manner. The nice Farnham girl seemed fated to marry him. Paula had had a hunt breakfast at Stormwood and it had been very successful though the American men had balked a little at the deviled kidneys. The food had been patterned as far as possible after the pale flabby viands served at English hunt breakfasts and ruined in an atmosphere of lukewarm steam. The women were slim and perfectly tailored but wore their hunting clothes a trifle uneasily and self-consciously like girls in their first low-cut party dresses. Most of the men had turned stubborn on the subject of pink coats, but Captain Stokes-Beaty wore his handsomely. The fox—a worried and somewhat dejected-looking animal—had been shipped in a crate from the South and on being released had a way of sitting sociably in an Illinois corn field instead of leaping fleetly to cover. At the finish you had a feeling of guilt, as though you had killed a cockroach.

Dirk had told Selina about it, feeling rather magnificent. A fox hunt.

"A fox hunt! What for?"

"For! Why, what's any fox hunt for?"

"I can't imagine. They used to be for the purpose of ridding a fox-infested country of a nuisance. Have the foxes been bothering 'em out in Lake Forest?"

"Now, mother, don't be funny." He told her about the breakfast.

"Well, but it's so silly, Dirk. It's smart to copy from another country the things that that country does better than we do. England does gardens and woodfires and dogs and tweeds and walking shoes and pipes and leisure better than we do. But those luke-warm steamy breakfasts of theirs! It's because they haven't gas, most of them. In Kansas or Nebraska a farmer's wife would stand for one of their kitchens—not for a minute. And the hired man would balk at such bacon." She giggled.

"Oh, well, if you're going to talk like that."

But Dallas O'Mara felt much the same about these things. Dallas, it appeared, had been something of a fad with the North Shore society crowd after she had painted Mrs. Robinson Gilman's portrait. She had been invited to dinners and luncheons and dances, but their doings, she told Dirk, had bored her.

"They're nice," she said, "but they don't have much fun. They're all trying to be something they're not. And that's such hard work. The women were always explaining that they lived in Chicago because their husband's business was here. They all do things pretty well—dance or paint or ride or write or sing—but not well enough. They're professional amateurs, trying to express something they don't feel; or that they don't feel strongly enough to make it worth while expressing."

She admitted, though, that they did appreciate the things that other people did well. Visiting and acknowledged writers, painters, lecturers, heroes, they entertained lavishly and hospitably in their Florentine or English or Spanish or French palaces on the North side of Chicago, Ill. Especially foreign notables of this description.

Since 1918 these had descended upon Chicago (and all America) like a plague of locusts, starting usually in New York and sweeping westward, devouring the pleasant verdure of greenbacks and chirping as they came. Returning to Europe, bursting with profits and spleen, they thriftily wrote of what they had seen and the result was more clever than amiable; bearing, too, the taint of bad taste.

The Telephone

Elizabeth was three years old and, what is more, Elizabeth, like most small girls, was very fond of games of "make believe." Her latest delight in the realm of fancy was "playing telephones," a game of which she never grew tired.

Her grandmother was well aware of Elizabeth's fancy and one night, when the little girl was proving obstinate about going to have her bath, the old lady thought she would try a little strategy.

Grandmother (holding one end of the toy telephone)—Hello! Is that Elizabeth?

Elizabeth (very delighted)—Yes, grandma!

Grandmother—Well, come along, Elizabeth, it's time for your bath.

Elizabeth (dropping receiver)—Wrong number!

Green Grocer

"Have you any nice fresh eggs today?" asked the breezy customer.

"Madam," answered the man who had just started in the grocery business, "permit me to remind you that nice eggs are necessarily fresh and fresh eggs always nice. Moreover, if I have any I have them today. My possession of eggs yesterday or tomorrow does not affect the situation, therefore—"

"Humph!" snorted the woman as she started for the door, "eggs are not the only fresh things in this store. I'll do my trading elsewhere."—Boston Transcript.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

FAMILY OF DOLLS FOR SMALL GIRL

For the modern child has been invented the combination doll. It is many nations, any age and both sexes to the child who has but one doll to caress. Now it is a Dutch girl with flapping cap, long golden braids and bodice, now it is a clown with painted face or a cry-baby with tears on its cheeks. It may be a flossy French toddler with long golden curls or a neat Red Cross nurse with bobbed black curls. It may be a slant-eyed Chinese, a dusky black boy or an Indian papoose. The doll alters its countenance as well as its frock. Besides a trunk full of dresses, the little mother has a box full of heads. She may get a body with a couple of changes, then add to her family by acquiring more heads. With each head comes a costume to match. The body is made with a brass plug neck and the heads have brass sockets to fit. With two turns the head is removed, and with two more another is fitted snugly in place. Thus a dozen dolls may be had in one.

Taking a Chance

"Want to take a chanst?" asked a producing manager of Yorick Hamm, the eminent comedian. "I can use you in a show, but can't pay salaries until we see whether the show is a winner."

"How's a fella gonna live?"

"That's the chanst I'm offering. In act 2 we eat a meal on the stage. It's a bedroom farce, with sixteen beds. That solves your rooming problem. All you gotta dig up is breakfast, and if you sleep all day you won't need any."—Louisville Courier-Journal

Interlarded Proposal

"It was at the luncheon table that he proposed to me and he wasn't at all put out at the arrival of the waitress. 'You know, my dear girl,' he began, 'that I have grown very, very fond of you. We'll have something cold, waitress. Cold beef for two. I want you to be my wife. Yes, salad, please. You are quite indispensable to me. Boiled, if you're sure they're mealy, otherwise mashed. You'd like pota toes, wouldn't you, Prissy? Now darling, do say "Yes" and make me the happiest man in the world. Hi, bring some Vienna rolls, waitress.'"—From an English Book.

Throwing Sand in Eyes

The expression, "Throwing sand in their eyes," is said to have had its origin in southern Siberia, where the tribes depend for safety largely on the fleetness of their horses. The land is very sandy and the method of repulsing an opponent was by means of a handful of sand tossed at him, with the result, if the aim was good, of at least temporary bewilderment and blindness.—Family Herald.

Costly Lawsuit Over Egg

Alexander Muir, a former near Aberdeen, Scotland, sold twenty hens to his neighbor, Angus MacDonald, but delivered on the morning of the sale only nineteen, producing the twentieth one late in the afternoon of the sale day. MacDonald asked why, and learned that Muir retained the one hen, which had a peculiarity of laying in the afternoon, until she had produced her daily egg. They went to court on the issue and lawyer fees and court costs soon mounted to $6,000.

Two Letters

The first written twenty years ago, the second recently by Mrs. J. H. Bourland, Frankston, Texas.

June 2, 1904, she writes:—

"For twenty-three years I was a constant sufferer from chronic catarrh. I had a severe misery and burning in the top of my head, a continual dropping of mucous into my throat causing frequent expectoration. My entire system became involved and I grew worse. It seemed as if I could not recover from a constant cough and frequent attacks of bilious colic. My bowels were affected, causing alarming hemorrhages. I tried many remedies and finally took Pe-ru-na. In three days I was relieved of my bowel trouble and entirely cured by five bottles. I most cheerfully recommend Pe-ru-na."

June 30, 1924, Mrs. Bourland writes again:—

"I will soon be seventy-nine years old and enjoy god health for one of my age. I still recommend Pe-ru-na and take it myself when necessary."

For more than half a century Pe-ru-na has a proud record of good done. Men and women the world over stand ready to testify to its value in the treatment of all catarrhal disorders.

Life's Span Extending

In spite of the fact that the continued betterment of health and living conditions in this century has given Americans the expectancy of longer and longer lives, the average American had his "expectancy of life" reduced from 58.01 years in 1921 to 57.32 years in 1923, or a loss of about eight months. According to statisticians of a leading life insurance company, who compiled the figures, greater prevalence of influenza and pneumonia in 1922 caused the reduction, but from advance indications for 1924 and 1925 the expected span from birth to death will be a larger number of years than it was in 1921, a banner year.

STATE RESOURCES TO BE ADVERTISED

MEETING AT MONTGOMERY FORMS PERMANENT PUBLICITY ORGANIZATION

SUGGEST CRAWFORD AS CHIEF

Funds for Conducting an Effective Advertising Campaign Are to Be Raised

Montgomery.—A permanent organization of leading business and professional men and members of the Alabama Press Association for the purpose of "Broadcasting Alabama" was formed at a meeting called by the Alabama Press Association in the capitol Sept. 3. Approximately 100 men from every section of the state gathered in the house of representatives, and pledged their support to a program of advertising that will direct the attention of the United States upon the natural resources and opportunities of Alabama.

George Gordon Crawford, of Birmingham, was elected a member of the board of directors from the ninth district and a resolution expressing the hope of the convention that he would be selected chairman of the board was adopted.

Constitution and by-laws setting out the purpose of the organization and providing for its permanent organization and activities were adopted, but the document left to the discretion of the board of directors practically all the vital matters of closer organization.

The net result of the meeting was the declaration of the belief in the future prosperity of the state; the announced purpose of raising funds and finding most effective means of advertising the state; the requesting of all departments of state, all private agencies and all citizens to co-operate with the movement; and the selection of the board of directors.

Directors elected were: First district, Wallace J. Parkham, Jr., Mobile; second district, Jesse B. Henrin, Montgomery; third district, J. E. Z. Riley, Ozark; fourth district, B. W. Pruet, Anniston; fifth district, H. S. Doster, Prattville; sixth district, E. F. Allison, Bellamy; seventh district, Otto Agricola, Gadsden; eighth district, H. J. Willingham, Florence; ninth district, C. G. Crawford, Birmingham; tenth district, H. P. Gibson, Jasper.

Resolutions adopted commended the press of the state for its efforts to advertise the state, felicitated the state board of agriculture on its work and its declaration of support to the movement undertaken, reccommended the more extensive use of "made in Alabama" products, recommended that the advertising agencies and mediums now at the command of the state be used by the committee in advertising the state, and declared it the belief of the convention that policies and the method of raising funds be left to the board of directors.

J. C. McLendon, president of the State Press Association, presided at the meeting. Gov. W. W. Brandon welcomed the men in the name of the state. He praised the good roads program extensively, declared that more roads would yet be built, and divided his praise for the road system with that of the schools.

Mayor W. A. Gunter, Jr., greeted the men as the executive of the city. A meeting of the board of directors will be called at an early date when the actual work of planning for a state advertising campaign will be mapped out.

FLAVOR OF ONIONS ALMOST ESSENTIAL

Believed to Be Good Sources of Vitamins B and C.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To begin with, onions are believed to be good sources of vitamins B and C, and fair sources of calcium. Hence it is well to include them frequently in children's diet, and to accustom the family to the flavor of onions in such a way that its members will not develop the prejudice that frequently exists toward this vegetable. Onion flavor may be so skillfully used as to be almost unnoticeable, and yet add appreciably to the seasoning of a dish. A slice of onion may be scalded with the milk and then removed before a cream soup is thickened; a few drops of onion juice may be added to a salad dressing; a bit of onion may be lightly fried or simmered in fat and removed before the meat or vegetables that are to be cooked in it are put into the pan. For such foods as potato salad, cream of celery or potato soup, bread stuffing for meat or fowl, stewed tomato and some meat stews, hashes and croquettes, onion flavor seems to many cooks almost an essential ingredient.

Either large or small onions may be used for flavoring. When only a small amount of onion is needed, at frequent intervals, waste can be prevented in the following way: Set an onion over the top of a glass of water so that the water touches its lower surface. Within a few days a mass of fine white roots will sprout down into the water, and these may be removed one or two at a time. One bulb may thus be made to furnish a teaspoonful or so of minced onion for many occasions.

Young spring onions are delicious when cooked and served with butter on toast, like asparagus. When very small, cut off and discard the tops and boil about five minutes in slightly salt water, cooking it down almost dry at the last. When spring onions are a little larger, it may be better to mince and fry them, or slice and boil them.

If mature onions are baked rather than boiled, they will have a milder flavor and their odor during cooking will not permeate the house so noticeably, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Holding them under water while paring prevents smarting of the eyes. If the onions are to be boiled, the time of cooking will be reduced by cutting them in small pieces, and the onions will have a better flavor. The water in which they were cooked may be used for cooking other vegetables or meat, or put into soup.

Boiled onions may be served with butter, salt and pepper, or simmered in cream for five minutes, and then seasoned and served.

Wheat Cooked Whole in Pressure Cooker Good

Nutrition specialists urge, among other necessary foods, the frequent use of whole-grain cereals in the diet, especially in families where there are growing children who need the vitamins and mineral substances. For this reason such foods as whole wheat breads or breakfast foods, brown rice, cornmeal made from the entire grain, and oatmeal, should appear on the table at frequent intervals. The whole grain cereals can be prepared in a variety of ways. The United States Department of Agriculture suggests a way of making whole wheat very palatable—cooking it in the steam-pressure cooker. This makes an excellent breakfast cereal rich in flavor and food value.

To prepare it, sort the grain, wash it thoroughly, then cover with about two and one-half times its volume of water, add salt, and cook under 15 to 20 pounds pressure for a half hour or longer if needed to make the grains soft. A generous dish of these thoroughly cooked whole wheat berries with milk or cream, and a serving of fruit, makes an ideal breakfast, lunch, or supper. The germ and the outer layers of the wheat grain are rich in vitamins and minerals, while the rest is such an excellent source of energy for the body that wherever possible people all over the world use wheat in some form as the mainstay of their diet.

Vegetable Flavors Are Good in Soup or Stews

Combinations of vegetable flavors are liked in soups and stews, and the same idea can be applied to make a lunch or supper dish and introduce more vegetables into the diet. The recipe below, tested by the United States Department of Agriculture, includes vegetables easily procured in most localities the year around. Often vegetable combinations may be worked out by the housekeeper, following the preferences of her family for particular vegetables.

Vegetable Pie.

2 cupfuls diced or shredded raw potato (white or sweet)
2 cupfuls diced raw celery
1 cupful diced raw onion
1 cupful shredded raw cabbage
1 cupful sprouts, cauliflower, kale or cabbage
1 cupful tomato juice or other vegetable stock
Salt, pepper
Rich biscuit dough

Cook first four vegetables in boiling water for ten to fifteen minutes, drain; add cooked brussels sprouts, tomato juice, and seasonings. Place in baking dish. Use stock drained from boiled vegetables instead of water or milk, when making biscuit dough for crust. Line sides (not bottom) of baking dish and cover top with dough. Bake until crust is browned.

Cooked cauliflower or kale or even cabbage (cooked or raw) may be substituted for the brussels sprouts.

PIMENTOS BEST PEPPERS FOR CANNING

Rub With Cloth to Remove Dirt—After Roasting Cut Out Stem and Seed Partitions—Roasting the Peppers—Placing Filled Jars in Container to Process.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The best sweet peppers for canning are the Spanish variety, known as pimentos. The fruit of these peppers has a very thick flesh and tough skin and comparatively smooth and free from ridges. Bell peppers are not a suitable variety to can. Only ripe, sound peppers free from bruises should be used. Can the whole peppers. The small or broken ones may be cut into strips and canned or used in relishes, sauces and soup mixtures.

Remove the seeds with a slender paring knife by cutting around the stem and taking out the inside partitions. To peel, roast the peppers in a hot oven from 6 to 10 minutes or until the skin blisters and cracks. Do not allow them to scorch. Remove skin with a sharp paring knife, flatten the peppers and pack in layers in a jar which has been boiled 15 minutes. No water or seasoning is used in the canning. The processing in the jar brings out a thick liquor which almost covers them.

Put in a place the rubber and top which have been boiled. If a screw-top cover is used, screw about half way on; if a glass top with wire bails, put top bail in position and leave the lower clamp unfastened. Place jars on the false bottom in a water-bath canner. If the cover of the vessel in which the processing is done, is not tight, water sufficient to cover the jars should be put in. Boil pint jars for 30 minutes, invert to test for leaks and, when cool, store in a cool, dark, dry place.

Clanton Booster Merchants Out to Build Up Clanton

The Chilton County News is this week carrying a booster page by the different merchants urging the people to trade at home and giving them an especial invitation to come to Clanton and trade with them.

This advertising is in line with plan initiated by the News to land industries for Chilton county, and to set before the world that her business men are reaching out and willing to accept any legitimate business enterprise, at the same time urging our people to remember that it is their first duty to buy at home, and get habit of letting these prettily printed catalogue houses alone when you can see what you are getting here at home.

Clanton needs every dollar of your trade and the merchants whose advertisements appear on the last page of today's paper offer you service and merchandise second to none anywhere. Do your part and they will do theirs.

KILLING THE FARMERS' FRIEND

When an Iowa farmer complained that the pheasants were eating his corn the game department killed two of the birds, examined their crops, and found 200 cutworms and no corn. Almost without exception, when the scientists investigate such cases they find the same result. The farmer owes his crop to the feathered police that keep down the bugs insects and worms. With continuing slaughter of every form of bird life, the insect loss wil be heavier and farm work harder. The nation could soon get army of riflemen in a comparatively short time but it couldn't in a century restore the bird armies that are the farmers allies in food to feed

In order that railroad traffic may move smoothly and promptly over an entire system, every division of this system must have its proper quota of equipment, locomotives and cars. That such a condition exists on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad is evidenced by the fact that it owns and operates 21 locomotives for every 100 miles of track, as compared with the national average of 23 locomotives for every 100 miles of track.

L. & N. freight cars have a total carrying capacity of 2,900,000 tons, which, based on average loading of 31.5 tons per car in 1924, is equivalent to the provision of 17.7 cars for each mile of track operated. The corresponding figure for the United States is 14...

The significance of these figures to the readers of this newspaper is that it shows the L. & N.'s determination to provide adequate rolling stock facilities to meet the requirements of its patrons [illegible]

North Shore hostesses vied for the honor of entertaining these notables. Paula — pretty, clever, moneyed, shrewd—often emerged from these contests the winner. Her latest catch was Emile Goguet—Gen. Emile Goguet, hero of Champagne—Goguet of the stiff white beard, the empty left coatsleeve, and the score of medals. He was coming to America ostensibly to be the guest of the American division which, with Goguet's French troops, had turned the German onslaught at Champagne, but really, it was whispered, to cement friendly relations between his country and a somewhat diffident United States.

"And guess," thrilled Paula, "guess who's coming with him, Dirk! That wonderful Roelf Pool, the French sculptor!"

"What d'you mean—French sculptor! He's no more French than I am. He was born within a couple of miles of my mother's farm. His people were Dutch truck farmers. His father lived in High Prairie until a year ago, when he died of a stroke."

When he told Selina she flushed like a girl, as she sometimes still did when she was much excited. "Yes, I saw it in the paper. I wonder," she added, quietly, "if I shall see him."

That evening you might have seen her sitting, fingering the faded shabby time-worn objects the saving of which Dirk had denounced as sentimental. The crude drawing of the Haymarket; the wine-red cashmere dress; some faded brittle flowers.

Paula was giving a large—but not too large—dinner on the second night. She was very animated about it, excited, gay. "They say," she told Dirk, "that Goguet doesn't eat anything but hard-boiled eggs and rusks. Oh, well, the others won't object to squabs and mushrooms and things. And his hobby is his farm in Brittany. Pool's stunning—dark and somber and very white teeth."

Paula was very gay these days. Too gay. It seemed to Dirk that her nervous energy was inexhaustible—and exhausting. Dirk refused to admit to himself how irked he was by the sallow heart-shaped exquisite face, the lean brown clutching fingers, the air of ownership. He had begun to dislike things about her as an unfaithful spouse is irritated by quite innocent mannerisms of his unconscious mate. She scuffed her heels a little when she walked, for example. It maddened him. She had a way of biting the rough skin around her carefully tended nails when she was nervous. "Don't do that!" he said.

Dallas never irritated him. She rested him, he told himself. He would arm himself against her, but one minute after meeting her he would sink gratefully and resistlessly into her quiet depths. Sometimes he thought all this was an assumed manner in her.

"This reign of yours—this effortlessness," he said to her one day, "is a pose, isn't it?" Anything to get her notice.

"Partly," Dallas had replied, amiably. "It's a nice pose though, don't you think?"

What are you going to do with a girl like that!

Here was the woman who could hold him entirely, and who never held out a finger to hold him. He tore at the smooth wall of her indifference, though he only cut and bruised his own hands in doing it.

"Is it because I'm a successful business man that you don't like me?"

"But I do like you. I think you're an awfully attractive man. Dangerous, that's wot."

"Oh, don't be the wide-eyed ingenue. You know d—d well what I mean. You've got me and you don't want me. If I had been a successful architect instead of a successful business man would that have made any difference?"

"Good Lord, no! Some day I'll probably marry a horny-handed son of toil, and if I do it'll be the horny hands that will win me. If you want to know, I like 'em with their scars on them. There's something about a man who has fought for it—I don't know what it is—a look in his eye—the feel of his hand. He needn't have been successful—though he probably would be, I don't know. I only know he—well, you haven't a mark on you. Not a mark. I'm not criticizing you. But you're all smooth. I like 'em bumpy. That sounds terrible. It isn't what I mean at all. It isn't—"

"Oh, never mind," Dirk said, wearily. "I think I know what you mean. Listen, Dallas. If I thought—I'd go back to Hollis & Sprague's and begin all over again at forty a week if I thought you'd—"

"Don't."

Chapter XVI

General Goguet and Roelf Pool had been in Chicago one night and part of a day. Dirk had not met them—was to meet them at Paula's dinner that evening. He was curious about Pool but not particularly interested in the warrior. Restless, unhappy, wanting to see Dallas (he admitted it, bitterly) he dropped into her studio at an unaccustomed hour almost immediately after lunch and heard gay voices and laughter.

Dallas in a grimy smock and the scuffed kid slippers was entertaining two truants from Chicago society—Gen. Emile Goguet and Roelf Pool. They seemed to be enjoying themselves immensely. She introduced Dirk as casually as though their presence were a natural and expected thing—which it was. She had never mentioned them to him. Yet now: "This is Dirk DeJong—Gen. Emile Goguet. We were campaigners together in France. Roelf Pool. So were we, weren't we, Roelf?"

Gen. Emile Goguet bowed formally, but his eyes were twinkling. He appeared to be having a very good time. Roelf Pool's dark face had lighted up with such a glow of surprise and pleasure as to transform it. He strode over to Dirk, clasped his hand. "Dirk DeJong! Not—why, say, don't you know me? I'm Roelf Pool!"

"I ought to know you," said Dirk.

"Oh, but I mean I'm—I knew you when you were a kid. You're Selina's Dirk. Aren't you? My Selina. I'm driving out to see her this afternoon. She's one of my reasons for being here. Why, I'm—" He was laughing, talking excitedly, like a boy. Dallas all agrin, was enjoying it immensely.

"They've run away," she explained to Dirk, "from the elaborate program that was arranged for them this afternoon. I don't know where the French got their reputation for being polite. The general is a perfect boor, aren't you? And scared to death of women. He's the only French general in captivity who ever took the trouble to learn English."

"We're all going," announced Dallas, and made a dash for the stuffy little bedroom off the studio.

Well, this was a bit too informal. "Going where?" inquired Dirk. The general, too, appeared bewildered.

Roelf explained, delightedly. "It's a plot. We're all going to drive out to your mother's. You'll go, won't you? You simply must."

"Go?" Dirk put in General Goguet. "Where is it that we go? I thought we stayed here, quietly. It is quiet here, and no reception committees. His tone was wistful.

Roelf attempted to make it clear. "Mr. DeJong's mother is a farmer. You remember I told you all about her

DISASTROUS FIRE BURNS 12 STORES

BUSINESS DISTRICT OF DORA SWEPT BY FLAMES FOR THIRD TIME IN TWO YEARS

DYNAMITE IS RESORTED TO

Nearly All of Business Section Left by Two Previous Fires Was Consumed by Latest Disaster

Dora, Ala.—Fire originating in the building of the Temersons Dry Goods Company last Thursday entirely destroyed the buildings occupied by 12 stores. The blaze, which swept one side of the business section of Dora, was only checked by the fire-fighters when dynamite was used to blow up the rooms occupied by the Methodist Missionary organization.

Chief of Police Martin suffered a severely lacerated hand received from broken glass, and Charley Extra, who was sleeping over the Temerson's Dry Goods Company, narrowly escaped. No one was dangerously injured.

The loss is estimated at $35,000.

The buildings destroyed are the Crenshaw Cafe, Temerson, Burke's Cafe, Martin's Meat Market, the office of the Alabama Power Company, Southern Express Company, Vandiver Clark's Barber Shop, Lanthrip's Jewelry Store, Little Gem Cafe, Methodist Missionary rooms, the Dora Bargain Store and the pool hall beneath it.

With the exception of Crenshaw-Temerson's, Burke and Martin, the others had sufficient time to remove their equipment from the path of the flames.

Everything was swept away from the McCutchin Furniture Company on the east, to the Dora Furniture Company on the west.

All telephone and telegraph equipment was dismantled to escape the fire, and as a result, was out of commission for several hours.

This is the third blaze which Dora has suffered in the last two years. The last has almost completely destroyed all the business section which escaped the other two. The blaze lasted about two hours.

CAN SURPLUS FOOD TO KEEP COST DO[illegible]

Everybody's Doing It—Even Father Takes a Hand In Canning Nowadays.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Don't let any fruits and vegetables go to waste in the garden this summer. When there is more than the family can eat in season, put it in cans to furnish variety in the diet next winter. An abundant supply of fruits and vegetables at all times is essential for health, and from an economic standpoint every family should produce and conserve as much as possible of its food. However, no product which is too ripe for immediate eating should be canned. Aboveall, do not can bruised, wilted or partly rotten material.

Open kettle canning—fruit and vegetables cooked in a kettle and put in the jars hot—is not a very satisfactory way to preserve certain kinds of vegetables, although it is used successfully with fruits and vegetables like tomatoes. The modern way, and that used by the home-demonstration workers and the boys' and girls' club leaders from the United States Department of Agriculture, is to place food products cold in jars, cover the fruit with sirup or the vegetables with salted water, and then process (heat) the jar and its contents in steam or hot water the required length of time. With this method, the average of success is high and the results are satisfactory, if directions are carefully followed, say the Department of Agriculture specialists.

No expensive equipment is necessary. A washboiler, lard can, or any container with a tight fitting cover large enough to hold a number of packed jars, and a few other simple utensils generally found in the ordinary kitchen, will do the work. When such equipment is used, a false bottom must be placed in the boiler or other container to prevent the jars coming in contact with the metal. A rack made of strips of wood is probably best for the purpose. The processing or boiling of the jars in the container may be done on the kitchen stove or on a furnace built out of doors.

Several types of canners, by which the work can be done more easily than with a homemade outfit, are on the market. The hot-water-bath canner is the least expensive commercial type. There are two kinds, one that may be placed on the kitchen stove and another which has a firebox and pipe attached and is to be used out of doors. Each has a sterilizing vat, lifting trays, tongs for handling hot jars, false bottoms and tools necessary to use in sealing tin cans. Tin cans or glass jars may be used with any outfit.

There are also steam pressure outfits for home use. They develop a higher temperature than the water-bath canners mentioned. Steam pressure outfits are made to carry from 5 to 30 pounds of steam pressure and are regulated easily.

Any kind of a glass jar which makes a perfect seal readily may be used. Test both jars and rubbers to make sure they are perfect. Select jars which are appropriate for the fruit or vegetable to be packed. Consider the size of the container from the standpoint of the quantity desired when opened, the size of the fruit or pieces of fruit to be packed, and the ease of processing.

Wash the jars carefully and place them, side down, in a vessel. Cover with cold water and bring the water to the boiling point and allow it to boil for 15 minutes to process the jars.

While the jars are being boiled sort and grade the fruit or vegetables according to size and degree of maturity. Discard all over-ripe, under-ripe or unsound fruit. Vegetables should be in choice condition for the table to be suitable for canning. After the sorting and grading, wash thoroughly before proceeding to pare, core or slice. Berries should be washed lightly by placing in a colander and pouring water over them, instead of immersing them in water. Peel, or scrape when needed, and cut large products into pieces of canning size. If the hot jars are not yet ready, cover the prepared product with a clean towel or cover but the quicker a product is prepared and packed into the jar which has been scalded 15 minutes, the better.

What Blanching Does.

The blanch—immersion for a short time in boiling water or live steam—gives a more thorough cleansing, improves the texture of the product and insures a clearer liquor in the can. It also shrinks the fruit or vegetable and makes it more flexible. A full pack is then made more easily. The time required for blanching varies with the state of maturity. After blanching the fruit or vegetable place it for an instant in cold water to make it more crisp.

Pack in the hot jars, which rest on cloths wrung out of hot water. Fruits cut in half should be arranged with the pit surface down. A thin, slender, flexible puddle made of wood is useful in placing the fruit or vegetable in the jar. When the jar has been packed as full as possible without crushing the pieces, the sirup, brine or seasoning is added. The paddle is also used to take out bubbles of air after the liquor has been added to the pack.

When the jar is full, put in place a rubber jar ring (which has been boiled in a solution of one teaspoonful of baking soda to one quart boiling water) and on the caps. When a screw top jar is used, screw the top evenly about half way. When a glass top jar with wire clamp is used, place the lid on evenly and raise both clamps, the upper one fastened to hold the lid in place. When jars equipped with rubber caps and clamp spring adjustment for sealing hermetically are used, the cap should be fastened on the jar evenly with clamp.

Chilton county should have a county fair, to display her products to the world.

It's a long road that has no turn, and there's three miles just above Lomax that is in that class. It is as straight as a shingle.

Cotton in the warehouse,
Money in the jeans,
Corn in the barn loft,
Plenty pork and beans.

When Jefferson county finishes her work, Clantonians can get to the Magic City without getting their feet muddy. It beats the Atlantic City board walk all hollow, without any genrickishas.

Cotton in the warehouse.

Miss Birmingham didn't win, but she [illegible] how they look down this [illegible] some folks would say

A Chilton county woman picked 404 [illegible] tton in one day. Boys come to Chilton to get your wife, but [illegible] else's alone. 'Tis true they all don't do so well, but they stack up well.

How about some cotton mills for [illegible] Won't some body take

Two or three ought to be located in this section—not one from Birmingham to Montgomery. Can you beat it with Mitchell dam as a part of our county, and every other convenience, there is no reason for Clanton not becoming an ideal little city.

PUSH CLANTON

No, town in the south is suffering more in growth from lack of manufacturing industry than Clanton, especially when there is nothing to hinder her from getting them.

In a few weeks the main streets of the town will be paved, she has the up-to-date business houses with good business men and good stocks of goods.

With a concerted movement a few small industries—it doesn't take large ones to make a good city—just a few such as an oil mill, heading mill to use up the cheap short leaf pine, and such as this soon make a city of towns like Clanton

Clanton needs a little push along this line. With seven to ten thousand bales of cotton ginned here every year, and the proximity of other towns and gins, it is easy to see that the nucleus is here to feed a prosperous oil mill to utilize the farmers cotton seed. Towns only have what they go after, and the early bird gets the worm. How about starting something to boost Clanton to where she belongs.

THE JORDAN PLAN

"As the history of the future shall be written in the shcool of to-day, it is vital that the teacher lay in minds of children the foundation of a sane and wholesome background from which to develop international amity and intelligent abhorrence of war."

In the above statement, Dr. David Starr Jordan expresses a profound truth and adds prefix to great plan of international peace.

The plan of Education for peace looks courageously toward the ultimate abolition of [illegible] legitimate sequence of disagreements between nations or between individuals of different countries. Its central purpose is the mobilization of teachers in all lands most immediately in America, in order that their combined influence and that of their pupils may be thrown solidly on the side of peace.

After receiving the Raphal Herman $25,000 award, Dr. Jordan's plan of education to develop international justice and friendship was adopted by the world federation of education associations at its meeting at Edinburgh, Scotland last month. The plan received hearty indorsement by the attending delegates from most of the countries of Europe and North and South America. Twenty official and forty unofficial delegates attended from the United States.

The coordination of educational force throughout the world stablizing as far as possible by teaching the trend of the future toward peace and international understanding along the lines of the Jordan plan will without question go a long ways toward that mental and moral disarmament which must precede and accompany military disarmament and also bring about a better understanding among men.

FALL BUSINESS BEGINS TO OPEN UP

The tone of business in Clanton for the past two weeks has had the appearance of bringing a realization that fall is here. The early picking of cotton and ginning of the crop has brought this about.

Another realization of the season is the advertising columns of the News, the merchants are making every effort to lay in stocks to please the public, and through space in the News they are inviting you to come in and feel at home inspecting these stocks.

Read our store news along with the other news for it all goes to make up your everyday life.

LACK OF HOGS IN CHILTON COUNTY

It has been very noticeable to the editor of the News in driving over the county, the dearth of hogs. Whether as a rule the hogs are not discernable from the road or whether it is a real scarcity we do not know, but with the [illegible] land adaptable to peanuts, etc., it has occurred to us that farmers of Chilton county should ship several car loads of hogs every year.

CARD FROM MR. WILBANKS

Editor Chilton Co. News:

Two weeks ago you published an article for me, so I am calling again. I being a land renter, I know the disposition of a renter pretty well.

Most renters are a little careless about keeping up the land which they work. They will say "I don't know whether I will be here another year or not, so it isn't necessary for me to take much interest in keeping the place up."

I think we have the wrong idea. Most landlords want good renters; those who will take interest and stay with him. I think best plan is for renters to get good land with good landlords, take an interest like it was his and build land up, stay almost a lifetime. It will be best for renter—also for landlord. Some will say land is too poor and cotton rusted too bad this year, so I will hunt land that won't rust so bad. We had rust in our cotton where it never had before. In fact I say it wasn't rust—it was blight or scald, caused from hot dry weather, then raining and turning so cool. This [illegible] ten years, so don't move for that reason. You might get worse land than you left.

We think this a fine section, with this large line of railroad running right through here. It would be a wonderful place around here if we had a good cotton mill like Alexander City [illegible] We hope to see such enterprises in course of a few years.

Will close by saying we hope to see Clanton with a good cotton mill and cheaper ginning. Thanking you for your kindness, I am,

GEO. T. WILBANKS.

MRS. BORGELIN'S REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Gives Credit for Restored Health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. All Women Interested

MRS. OSCAR F. BORGELIN
FOREST CITY, IOWA

Forest City, Iowa.—"My first child lived only a short time and I was sick for a year after. When I bent over and raised myself up again I could almost scream with pain in my back. One day I was so bad that I had to leave my washing and get ready to go to the doctor. He gave me medicine, but it did no more good than if I drank just water. Once when we had been in town a little book telling about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was left in our car. I have taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound now and I do all my housework and help with the milking, and taking care of chickens and garden. Besides I have a fine baby girl eight months old, just the picture of health, and I am feeling fine myself. You may use this letter as a testimonial and I will answer any letters asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. OSCAR F. BORGELIN, Route No. 5, Forest City, Iowa.

A Bad Case of Nerves Relieved

Denver, Colorado.—"I was very despondent, blue and sad all the time, which is worse than real pain, and extremely nervous, with no appetite. I was this way for about two years and thought no one cared for me. My mother had had the same trouble and had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it. I tried everything else, then I began to take it. I soon had a better appetite and restored mental condition. I moved to a bright, sunny house, began calling on different people, and changed many other things. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash for my female weakness. With the aid of your medicines I am now a fairly healthy, happy and contented woman. I've used the Vegetable Compound at different times and will say it always helps me over the bad spells that come to every woman past 40 years."—Mrs. HELEN FINE, 35 South Washington Street, Denver, Colorado.

FARM POULTRY

ERADICATE MITES TO SAVE POULTRY

There are few poultry producers who do not know of the ravages caused by the common chicken mite. It is very common in all parts of the country and while it is more prevalent in mid-summer it is well to eradicate it from the chicken houses before the young chickens arrive in the spring.

The removal of all interior fixtures and a thorough disinfection with a strong dip applied with a force pump is recommended by the Kansas experiment station. They state:

All rubbish should be removed and burned. Care must be taken to get the spray into all crevices. Kerosene emulsion, crude petroleum, and wood preservatives may be used for spraying, followed by whitewash. Whitewash aids mechanically by helping to fill up many crevices. Spraying should be repeated after a week in order to get any mites that may escape. Roosts should be painted frequently with wood preservative or crude petroleum. A treatment of the roosts, nests, boxes, etc., each spring with undiluted crude carbolic acid or sheep dip is usually sufficient to reduce the action of the mites to a minimum. The fact should be kept in mind that mites are blood-sucking parasites and do not remain on the birds as do lice. Mites are more harmful to poultry than lice and in treatment it is necessary to treat the house and not the bird, as is the case of lice.

The construction of roosts and nesting places so as to reduce hiding places to a minimum is an excellent control measure.

If new birds are brought to the farm, or birds to new quarters, they should be isolated for a few days in a pen separate from the permanent quarters so that all of the mites will leave them, thus preventing the infestation of new quarters. If birds are moved in the daytime mites will not be carried on them.

Poultrymen Use Greens in Greater Quantities

New Jersey poultrymen are finding that for greatest success plans should be made to supply poultry with an abundance of greens. They find that vegetation usually becomes tough and coarse in the summer and free range conditions do not provide the proper type of green food for poultry.

To offset this the principal crops sown in yards or on range are oats, rape and alfalfa. An alfalfa sod makes an ideal range because of the new growth constantly coming out. Rape also makes a new growth as the old is eaten off. It produces dark yellow yolks, however, and must be avoided if light yolks are desired. Oats make a very good crop for a few weeks. They should be planted in small quantities, because if not consumed while young they soon become too large and coarse.

In addition to range crops, cabbage, kale and swiss chard are often grown in a side field and fed to the birds. Kale has proved particularly well suited for summer feeding as it continually sends out new shoots after being cut. Cabbage makes a fine feed for late summer and fall.

Regardless of the kind of succulent feed used, successful poultrymen aim to provide six to eight pounds daily per 100 birds. When fed the first thing in the morning or the last thing at night, the green feed does not interfere with consumption of other feeds, and egg production is improved by its use.

Poultry Facts

A Leghorn cockerel may become a rooster, but never a roaster.

Painting the roosts and nests with a good preservative or creosote is insurance against mites.

It is a good rule never to let a sick chicken die on the premises. It should be killed before it reaches that stage.

If you are expecting to get the best results from your poultry flock, feed a balanced ration and do not overfeed.

The ancient buncombe about hens getting too fat to lay is still widely credited when, as a matter of fact, no hen except a fat hen can lay.

A full feed early in the day tends to make the hens listless, while a small feed encourages them to take the exercise which they need in order to keep in the best of health.

A hoe with 15 or 18-inch blade is very satisfactory for scraping the dropping boards, and if used regularly once a week or oftener, will assist materially in maintaining the health of the flock.

A good scratch grain ration consists of equal parts of cracked corn and whole wheat. Feed a little of the grain in the morning to make the flock exercise and give all they will clean up at night in fifteen or twenty minutes.

Egg and Poultry Societies Thrive

Coöperative Marketing Has Rapidly Developed in Past Few Years.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Co-operative marketing of eggs and poultry in the United States has undergone great development in the last 15 years. One hundred and eighty-three farmers' business organizations report handling eggs or poultry or both during 1924. They sold more than 70,000,000 dozens of eggs for approximately $22,000,000. Although only 31 of the 183 organizations were of the truly co-operative type, these 31 handled 90 per cent of the egg business.

Formerly practically all poultry products were sold on a flat price basis. Eggs brought the same price regardless of quality. Poultry, which was usually sold alive, was paid for on the pound basis with little regard to its age or condition. This method, besides offering no inducement to producers to improve the quality of their poultry and eggs, brought about seasonal gluts and shortages.

Improvement Made.

Great improvement was made when poultry producers in various parts of the country adopted co-operative methods of marketing eggs and poultry. These efforts, at first local and primitive, eventually became quite widespread and complex. Large-scale poultry and egg co-operatives have been successfully conducted for a number of years in the Pacific Coast states. Egg and poultry marketing has been organized co-operatively in many states. Considerable attention has been given in the last two or three years to the co-operative method of marketing poultry in Maine, New Hampshire, Connecticut, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri, Utah, Texas, New Mexico, Idaho, Alabama, Kentucky and Virginia. In Minnesota local associations are federated for selling purposes. Elsewhere most of the recently formed associations are of the centralized, nonstock, nonprofit type.

A survey in 1924 showed 31 egg and poultry marketing associations in producing regions, and 4 at terminal markets. Twenty-two of them handled both eggs and poultry. Eight handled only eggs, and one handled only poultry. Missouri, with nine associations, was the state with the largest number; Minnesota was second, with six; California third, with four, and Texas fourth, with three. Five of 29 associations that gave the department information as to when they began operations, were organized before 1920, and the remainder since the beginning of that year.

Co-operative egg marketing was first developed by the present method on the Pacific coast. An association was formed in 1913 in Tulare county, California, with about 100 members. In its first year its sales exceeded $25,000. Last year its sales were nearly $400,000. Poultry producers of central California formed an organization in 1916, and this concern last year had 2,500,000 hens covered by its contracts. Its eggs are carefully graded and handled and are in good demand in Eastern markets. The Poultry Producers of Southern California, Inc., a co-operative organization formed in 1917, handled 87,553 cases of eggs in its first year. Last year it handled 139,000 cases. In 1917 the Washington Co-operative Egg and Poultry association was formed with headquarters at Seattle. This association now handles about 300,000 cases of eggs a year, and its net worth has increased from about $1,000 to $700,000.

Records of Progress.

Similar records of progress in co-operation are cited by the United States Department of Agriculture from information furnished by co-operative egg and poultry associations in most of the other states mentioned. Poultry producers in New Jersey, faced with competition from Pacific coast poultrymen in Eastern markets, formed an association in 1921 with 438 members. After some unfortunate experiences this concern was reorganized in 1923, and last year it handled approximately 70,000 cases of eggs.

Poultry and eggs have been marketed co-operatively in the last ten years through co-operative creameries in Minnesota. This plan is considered ideal for assembling eggs, although it has its limitations in merchandising. So as to develop a better selling organization, Minnesota poultry and egg producers put a plan in operation in 1923 which provided for district organizations federated in a state association. This association, on December 31 last, was selling products from 14,000 members.

Self-Feeders for Calf Not Always Efficient

According to an experiment recently conducted by the dairy department of the South Dakota State college, Brookings, in regard to the efficiency of self-feeders for calves it was found that calves do not select their own rations to the best advantage—they eat too much of the protein feeds and keep themselves too fat. In another experiment as to the value of soy beans for dairy cattle, the results show that ground soy beans make a desirable feed because of their high protein content, but that soy bean hay is not as cheap a legume roughage in South Dakota as alfalfa hay, consequently soy bean hay is recommended as a feed only in localities where alfalfa and clover are not grown.

Oats Require Good Soil for Best Crop

To Avoid Winter-Killing Sow Plenty of Seed.

Oats are used mainly for hay or grain, seldom being turned under. They should be sown on good land. On poor soils they do not give satisfactory returns in either hay or grain, and make less growth than rye for turning under.

"Yet oats make a fine crop for farmers," says E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at the North Carolina State college. "Under favorable conditions they may be expected to yield 2,500 to 3,500 pounds of cured hay per acre. The hay contains 9.3 per cent protein, as compared to 5.9 per cent for timothy and 15.4 per cent for soy beans. A strong point in favor of oats is that hairy vetch sown with them will mature at the same time, making a hay richer in protein than oats alone.

"Oats often winter-kill severely. The best way to avoid this is to sow plenty of seed. Use at least two bushels per acre, sow them early enough to get a good start before cold weather. The best time is October. A good way to sow is to disk the seed in, or better still, drill them in, after corn or soy beans. It would be too late to sow them after cotton. October-sown oats far outyield late fall or spring-sown oats in both hay and grain."

Mr. Blair suggests that if oats begin to run up in the fall they should be grazed down or cold weather will damage them. They may be grazed for a while in the spring, but care should be taken not to graze them too long.

Fertilizer experiments made in North Carolina show that oats respond well to nitrogen. However, if the land is fertile, or has received a good application of fertilizer in the spring, oats need not be fertilized in the fall. They may be given 100 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre early in the spring if they appear to need it.

Oat hay should be cut when the grains are in the dough stage, then it is easy to cure and excellent in quality.

Limberneck Is Result of Ptomaine Poisoning

Limberneck or blind staggers, as it is sometimes known in some localities, may be the result of ptomaine poisoning caused by eating some rancid food which, in the case of poultry, generally means decayed meat. It may, however, mean moldy grains. Sometimes it comes about merely by acute indigestion caused by clogging the system in some way, possibly by feeding too much fiber such as is found in the hulls of oats, barley, etc., or allowing them to eat dried, tough grass.

The thing to do is to starve the birds for a day or so to get the crops empty and then give each one a teaspoonful or two of olive oil and empty the crop. Give the fowl in the meantime access to nothing but sand or grit and water. Then feed some easily digestible, highly nutritious feed, such as bits of raw meat that have been slightly broiled; or, if the fowl can handle it, stale, dried bread soaked in sweet milk.

High Living Is Bad

There is always some mortality among hens no matter how well they are cared for. It is probable that most of the deaths among hens are due to long confinement in good houses with rich rations, night feeding and lack of exercise. This condition tends to bring on liver trouble and other disorders. It is one of the penalties the poultryman must pay for getting a larger number of eggs. His problem is not to save a few weak sisters but to breed a race of hens that can stand the gaff.

FARM NOTES

Fresh manure may be spread on the garden in the fall.

Think of weeds as leaks swiftly depleting the water supply. But don't just think.

Last call for the cull hens. After September 15 it is difficult to pick the poor ones.

The best way of pasturing soy beans with hogs is to grow the beans with corn and then hog the combination down.

It costs just as much to raise a 40-bushel crop as one that yields 50 bushels, so why not plant your farm to adapted varieties?

Dockage consists of dirt, straw, sand, weed seeds, and chaff. Why pay freight rates on 4,398,000 pounds of dockage every fall?

Smutty wheat results in enormous losses in yields of wheat and in the value of the contaminated grain. The odor and color of the smutty grain render it inferior for milling.

Musty wheat is very objectionable because of the bad odor it gives the flour. Nearly 4 per cent of the wheat received at Kansas City is marked down on account of being sprouted.

It is a good policy to cut the silage up fine. It packs in the silo better and also feeds better. It may take a little longer to put the stalks through the cutter when cut fine, but it pays well to do so.

Cannot Put "Age Limit" on Singers

Since John McCormack decided to maintain a silence, as golden as his voice is silver, after he reaches fifty years of age, singers have held lengthy debates with vocal authorities on the subject of the age at which they should retire professionally.

Some claim the voice at or near that age begins to fail—that too many singers have been either too impecunious or too egotistic to cease at that time and have disgraced themselves thereby.

Eldorado Petri, director of the free choral school of the Metropolitan Opera company, is a member of the dissenting body which believes a singer is still capable of much melody long past the mooted age.

"It is the physique—the health—the physical condition that determines the time for resignation from the field of professional singing," he protested heatedly when the discussion reached him.

Making Signals Secret

Invisible light is opening up a new method of sending secret signals in warfare. Flash signals are invisible to all but the receiver of the message, and can be sent in full sunlight for a distance of from five to eight miles. Infra-red rays, too long to be seen, cause certain dyes and pigments to become more luminous. The receiver of the message is equipped with a tinted shade for his field glasses, similar in color to the shade used in the signal lamp.

Fooled by Scarecrow

For several days a patient fisherman has been noted standing on the shore of a certain pond in Wilton, N. H. Day after day he stood there. A particularly constant watcher felt sure the man was getting short trout, and notified a game warden. However, the watcher's eyes are in need of correction, for the man turned out to be a well-fashioned scarecrow.

Gave Skunks Right of Way

A party of Bangor motorists returning from Winterport, Maine, halted their car to let a moving obstruction have the right-of-way. The obstruction consisted of a family of skunks, including father, mother and three children, crossing the road in solemn single file.

Niagara Lights Itself

Power generated from Niagara Falls water power was recently thrown back onto the falls in the form of colored electric lights in order to make a spectacle of the falls at night. Twenty-four searchlights were used and the effect was startling.

"What in the world do you mean about talking duly or unduly about yourself?" asked the Spotted Salamander.

"I mean that I don't want to appear conceited but at the same time I am interesting and there is no use not admitting it."

"Well, do you admit it?" asked the Spotted Salamander.

"I do," said the Tiger Salamander.

"Well," said the Spotted Salamander once more, "so far, so good.

"What comes next?"

"What do you mean by 'What comes next?'" asked the Tiger Salamander.

"I am merely taking a polite interest in what you are saying," said the Spotted Salamander.

"I wanted to know what you are going to say next."

"I was going to tell you just why I am so interesting," said the Tiger Salamander.

"Go ahead," said the Spotted Salamander. "I'm listening politely.

"You'll forgive me if I have a little trouble, and show that I have, in my speech.

"I'm interesting but I could know more.

"Aren't my ways interesting, though? Don't you think I had the right to admit what I did?"

"Indeed your story is very interesting," said the Spotted Salamander.

"I listened to you first out of politeness, but when you told me such wonderful things about yourself I couldn't help listening and enjoying myself.

"It was so amazing and marvelous a story."

"And all perfectly true," said the Tiger Salamander.

"Yes, that's the best part of it," agreed the Spotted Salamander.

SIMPLE FROCKS FOR SCHOOL; FLARE IN COATS PARIS EDICT

HERE'S guessing, Miss Schoolgirl, as to a very important subject which will be receiving your due attention this semester, together with your perusal of Latin, Greek, higher mathematics and kindred kind. Clothes! Aye! there's a study which never loses in interest to the feminine mind. Indications are that the subject is going to prove more fascinating than ever this season.

Of course if you are to prove an apt student in the art of good dressing, it is necessary to first of all aim to wear clothes appropriate to the time and the occasion—which for the schoolgirl may be expressed in one word—simplicity. There is no costume quite so apropos for schoolgirl needs as the one-piece frock, or two-piece if you will, fashioned of fine cloth, navy blue the preferable color. By the way, how good it is to know that navy blue is "the style" this season. In fact all shades of blue are coming in for a successful run, be they classed as royal, copen, navy or pencil blue.

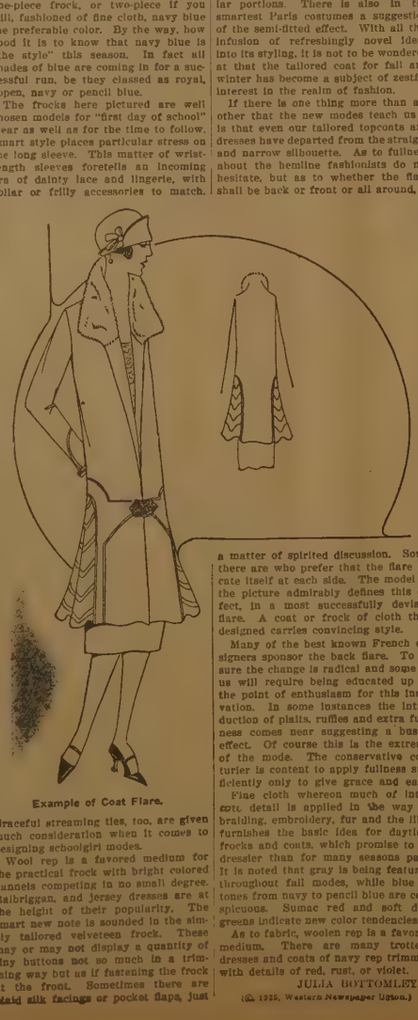
The frocks here pictured are well chosen models for "first day of school" wear as well as for the time to follow. Smart style places particular stress on the long sleeve. This matter of wrist-length sleeves foretells an incoming era of dainty lace and lingerie, with collar or frilly accessories to match.



Example of Coat Flare.

Graceful streaming ties, too, are given much consideration when it comes to designing schoolgirl modes.

Wool rep is a favored medium for the practical frock with bright colored flannels competing in no small degree. Balbriggan, and jersey dresses are at the height of their popularity. The smart new note is sounded in the simply tailored velveteen frock. These may or may not display a quantity of tiny buttons but so much in a trimming way but us if fastening the frock at the front. Sometimes there are plaid silk facings or pocket flaps, just enough to supply a dash of color. Be it said that these velveteen frocks prove very serviceable.

Bolero effects in misses' fall frocks are being featured, and these insure a youthful aspect. Necklines in daytime dresses are youthful, one might almost say boyish, especially the little turn-down shirt collars with narrow ties or ribbon bows. Sleeves, barreled from elbow to wrist, peasant sleeves puffed and cuffed characterize some of the newer gowns.

Let there be a decided flare, so comes the edict from Paris, and the thought is visualized in the newer coats and frocks which abound in fullness below the knee, attained through clever insets, shirred portions or circular portions. There is also in the smartest Paris costumes a suggestion of the semi-fitted effect. With all this infusion of refreshingly novel ideas into its styling, it is not to be wondered at that the tailored coat for fall and winter has become a subject of zestful interest in the realm of fashion.

If there is one thing more than another that the new modes teach us it is that even our tailored topcoats and dresses have departed from the straight and narrow silhouette. As to fullness about the hemline fashionists do not hesitate, but as to whether the flare shall be back or front or all around, is a matter of spirited discussion. Some there are who prefer that the flare locate itself at each side. The model in the picture admirably defines this effect, in a most successfully devised flare. A coat or frock of cloth thus designed carries convincing style.

Many of the best known French designers sponsor the back flare. To be sure the change is radical and some of us will require being educated up to the point of enthusiasm for this innovation. In some instances the introduction of pleats, ruffles and extra fullness comes near suggesting a bustle effect. Of course this is the extreme of the mode. The conservative couturier is content to apply fullness sufficiently only to give grace and ease.

Fine cloth whereon much of intricate detail is applied in the way of braiding, embroidery, fur and the like, furnishes the basic idea for daytime frocks and coats, which promise to be dressier than for many seasons past. It is noted that gray is being featured throughout fall modes, while blue in tones from navy to pencil blue are conspicuous. Sumac red and soft dull greens indicate new color tendencies.

As to fabric, woolen rep is a favored medium. There are many trotteur dresses and coats of navy rep trimmed with details of red, rust, or violet.

ECONOMICAL SUGGESTIONS

All liquids in which vegetables are cooked should be saved; either serve combined with thickening for a sauce, with butter or cream, in gravies, or simply chilli and use as a drink for those who need iron and the various mineral salts. A few tablespoonfuls of the water in which young carrots are cooked will be far more effective than iron pills or tonic. Even the water in which potatoes have been cooked, though we have been taught in times past that it was poisonous, will be found good in bread, griddle cakes and gravy.

When cooking such succulent greens as spinach, no water is used, but any drained off should be used in the food for the family.

When cooking any of the green vegetables that grow above ground, do not add salt until they are nearly ready to serve, as it toughens the fiber and makes them less digestible.

When peas or corn lack sweetness a teaspoonful of sugar added to the kettle when cooking will greatly enhance the flavor. However, do not overdo the sweetening, as it will be noticeable and unnatural.

A small steak which could serve but three will answer well for five or six in the following dish:

Chop Suey.—Brown a small steak in suet, cut into small pieces, add a small onion or not as one's taste dictates, and simmer with a little water for a half hour on the back of the stove; then add two bunches (if ordinary size) of celery cut into small pieces, and continue to simmer until the celery is tender but not soft. Season well with salt and pepper and a few teaspoonfuls of chop suey sauce. Serve in the center of a hot platter with a border of cooked rice well seasoned and sprinkled with chop suey sauce. Left-over meats may be used for this dish, such as roast veal with a little fresh pork browned and cut up. A small amount of meat thus flavors a large dish and it is one that most families call for again and again.

Corn Souffle.—Melt one tablespoonful of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended, then pour on one cupful of milk. Bring to the boiling point and add one can of corn, one and one-fourth teaspoonfuls of salt, a few grains of pepper, the yolks of two eggs beaten until thick and the whites of two eggs beaten stiff and dry. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven thirty minutes.

Suggestions for Dinner.

A fruit cocktail is a good beginning. Slice a ripe peeled pear into fine strips, add a peeled sliced peach or two, then a dozen or more melon balls; these are prepared with a potato scoop. Put the mixture into sherbet cups and pour over a thick sugar sirup made of sugar, water, lemon juice and a bit of the rind grated. Chill and serve for the first course.

Breast of Veal Stuffed.—The market man will cut a pocket as deep as one likes in a breast of veal. Fill it with a stuffing, using breadcrumbs, butter, eggs, salt, pepper, onion finely chopped and such poultry dressing as one likes. Sew up and roast, basting often during the roasting. Serve with:

Spanish Potatoes.—Boil as many potatoes as the family needs, drain and shake over the heat to dry. Into a vegetable dish which has been well heated, put plenty of butter and a small onion very finely minced. Mix well and turn in the hot potatoes, cut with a knife, mixing until all are well-seasoned.

Hashed Brown Potatoes.—Try out fat salt pork cut into small cubes and remove the scraps: there should be one-third of a cupful of fat. Add two cupfuls of cold boiled potatoes, finely chopped, with pepper and salt if needed. Mix the potatoes thoroughly with the fat, cook three minutes, stirring constantly, then let stand to brown underneath. Fold as an omelet and turn out on a hot platter. Garnish with parsley.

Potato Muffins.—Mashed potato, left over, put into buttered gem pans and baked until brown is both attractive and good. Serve as a garnish to platter of fish or chops.

Browned Cheese Crackers.—Split milk crackers and spread with butter, sprinkle with grated cheese and cayenne. Put into a dripping pan and bake until delicately brown.

Mock Crab.—Melt one tablespoonful of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended, then add one cupful of milk and cook until thick. Add one can of corn, one and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of worcestershire sauce and a half teaspoonful of mustard. Add two egg yolks and the beaten whites at the last. Bake slowly until set.

PAUL WRITES TO THE THESSALONIANS

LESSON TEXT—I Thess. 2:1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT—"In everything give thanks."—I Thess. 5:18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul's Love for His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Paul Worked in Thessalonica.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul's Devotion to His Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Spirit and Method of Paul's Work.

While the lesson committee has selected this brief passage in the second chapter for printing, the intention was to present the message of the entire epistle. It was on Paul's second missionary journey that the church at Thessalonica was founded as seen in the last lesson. After crossing into Macedonia he preached the Gospel at Philippi, where he was imprisoned. From Philippi he went to Thessalonica. The people there were largely Gentiles.

I. The Salutation (ch. 1:1).

Timothy and Silas were associated with Paul in this missionary journey, and they are associates of Paul in this message.

II. Paul's Thanksgiving (1:2-10).

1. For Their Faith, Love and Hope (v. 2-4).

This triad of graces testified of their election of God.

2. How They Received the Gospel (v. 5.)

It was in the power of the Holy Spirit.

3. Joyful Obedience (v. 6).
4. Exemplary Lives (v. 7).
5. Missionary activities (v. 8.)
6. Turned From Idols (vv. 9-10).

III. Character of Paul's Ministry (2:1-12).

It would seem from this defense that some of the Jews had called into question his ministry. He defends himself by showing the character of his ministry:

1. It Was Courageous (vv. 1-2).

His persistence in spite of shameful persecution proved his devotion to the Lord and His work.

2. Honest and Guileless (vv. 3-4).

As one sent of God, he faithfully ministered unto them, not courting man's favor.

3. Without Flattering Words (v. 5).
4. Without a Cloak of Covetousness (v. 5.)
5. Did Not Seek Glory From Man (v. 6).
6. Gentle and Affectionate (vv. 7-8).

So vitally did he enter into the lives of the people that he displayed a gentleness even as a nursing mother with her children.

7. Unselfish (v. 9.)

In order that his motive be not questioned, he labored night and day for his support.

8. Irreproachable and Blameless (v. 10.)

He did not claim to be faultless, but he challenged them as to his blamelessness.

9. His Lofty Aim (vv. 11-12).

That they would walk worthy of God in keeping with their high calling.

IV. How the Gospel Was Received (2:13-16).

As the very Word of God.

V. Paul's Desire for the Thessalonians (2:17:3-13).

1. He Endeavored to See Them Face to Face, but Was Hindered by Satan (2:17-18).
2. He Declared Them to Be His Crown of Rejoicing (2:19-20).

His hope of meeting his converts at Christ's second coming was his crown of rejoicing.

3. Timothy Sent to Them (3:1-10).

It was his report that furnished the information concerning this church.

4. He Prayed for Them (3:11-13).

VI. Sins Rebuked (4:1-12).

1. Uncleanliness (vv. 1-5.)
2. Dishonesty (vv. 6-8).
3. Lack of Brotherly Love (vv. 9-10).
4. For Being Busybodies (v. 11).
5. Idleness (v. 11).

VII. Doctrinal Errors Corrected (4:13; 5:11).

1. Not to Sorrow Unduly (v. 13).

It was because of their misunderstanding of the meaning of the coming of the Lord that they were indulging in excessive sorrow.

2. The Reason Assigned (vv. 13-18).

(1) The departed saints will come back when Jesus comes (v. 14).

(2) Living Believers Will Be Caught Up With Them (v. 17).

3. The Time of the Lord's Coming Unknown (5:1-11).

The exhortation is "be ready."

VIII. Concluding Exhortations (5: 12-28.)

Sin, Grace, Humility

No sin is so offensive to God, and so injurious to the soul as pride. No grace is so commended, both by precept and example, as humility.—Ryle.

Truth

Truth is not of man's making, but of God's revelation. Hear it in the house of God.—American Lutheran.

Chilton County to Have Exhibit at the State Fair

Chilton Not Represented as a County Since the Fair Ceased Several Years Ago—Has Good Chance to Make a Fine Showing if Farmers Will Cooperate—Mrs. Bruce Preparethe Booth as Usual—Everybody Help

For the first time in several years Chilton county will be represented by an exhibit at a state fair. Mrs. S. E. Bruce leaves today to make plans for the Chilton county display at the state fair in Birmingham. She is an experienced woman in this line, and with the right kind of help there is no reason why Chilton county can't taek off first prize. Farmers are urged to get their produce ready at once, so it can be loaded at Clanton not later than 13 or 14 of October. the News for further particulars each week.

Since the discontinuance of the state fair in Birmingham, Chilton county has not been displaying her products to the outside world as they should be, but with the resumption at Birmingham new life has been enfused into the matter and a creditable county exhibit is now being planned.

All farmers who have any products that would be creditable to the county is requested to get in touch with Mrs Bruce at Clanton, and get their display in creditable shape. A space 16 by 32 feet has been reserved for Chilton county. She has the products to win the state prize if the people will only avail themselves of the opportunity.

The exhxibit has got to get away from Clanton not later than the 14th, but the News wishes to urge upon the people to get everything in shape so there will not be such a rush at the last minute, and then not have time to display as should be done.

Corn, cotton, velvet beans, soy beans, oats, rye, peanuts, vetches of all kinds, peanuts, pumpkins—just everything imaginable in the way of vegetation. Do your county proud by helping in this matter. The Chilton County News will do everything possible to aid in this matter.

Chautauqua Is Drawing Large Crowds This Week

Pacific Serenaders Please Large Audience Yesterday Afternoon and Last Night—Two Good Lectures—Sprague Players Today and Joy Makers Tomorrow—Hear J. William Terry Today—Two Big Days Left

The Radcliffe Chautauqua has opened and performed one day to large and appreciative audiences yesterday afternoon and night. The two lectures and the programs rendered by the Pacific Serenaders was of high calibre and insures a success for chautauqua this year. The large tent was put up Tuesday night and everything was spic and span Wednesday. Large attendance from throughout the county shows the recognized value of the chautauqua programs. Radcliffe's are to be congratulated on the programs rendered.

The Pacific Serenaders made a hit with Clanton yesterday afternon and again last night, with their music. The quarte with its melodious music captivated the appreciative audiences at both performances. They are musicians par excellent.

Col. George A. Gearhart delivered a forceful address on "The Inalienable Rights of the Child," at the afternoon hour. At night he talked on the subject, "Government for All." The speaker covered a broad field in both of these subjects, and his talks were full of logic, and showed a wide range of thought.

Thursday's program is indeed a good one, with the Sprague Players putting on a one-act comedy in the afternoon, entitled "The Duel." They will no doubt draw a packed tent Thursday evening for the play "Rip Van Winkle." This old play—never old, though you may have seen it many times—will thrill the old as well as the young. J. William Terry lectures in the afternoon on "The Man the World Does Not Know," and at night "Education for All."

Friday will find the "Boston Joy Makers" to furnish the entertainment in connection with two lectures by C. M. Eichelberger. The Joy Makers are said to tickle the risibles of the most confirmed old grouch, and any boy who has been eating green persimmons is "shore" going to crack his lips laughing at these performances.

Large crowds are attending from Maplesville, Stanton, Jemison, Verbena, Thorsby, Billingsley, Mt. Creek and throughout Chilton county, as the chautauqua has an elevating and uplifting influence in the community and the people are expected to pack the tent afternoon and night.

MINES RESTORED THRU ELECTRICITY

Ten years ago the great coal mines of the Nord and Pas de Cals in France lay in ruins, burned above ground and flooded below, and it was estimated it would take twenty years to restore. These same mines are now producing more than ever, according to a recent report and because of the installation of the modern electrical mining equipment, are among the most efficiently operated coal mines in the world.

In 1914 the northern coal basin used electrical equiment of a total capacity of 100,000 kilowatts. At the present time it uses 260,000 kilowatts, or 350,000 electrical horsepower. New generating plants have been installed to burn pulverized coal so that the better grades can all be sold. Mine hoists are now operated by electricity and the working conditions of the miners have been notably improved by the installation of electric ventilating systems, pumps and lights.

REVIEW

GOLDEN TEXT—"Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see Him not yet believing ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory."—I Peter 1:8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul's Love for His People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul's Best Wishes for His People.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How the Gospel Spread.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Power of the Gospel.

The method of review must always be determined largely by the genius of the teacher and the condition of the class. For this review, two methods are suggested:

1.—The Biographical. This can be used in all the grades excepting, perhaps, the beginners. When skillfully presented, living, active personalities appeal to the heart and imagination of all ages. Among the interesting characters appear Paul, Luke, Silas, Timothy, Barnabas, Mark, Lydia, the Philippian jailer, James and the slave girl at Philippi. These characters can be assigned to the members of the class the preceding week.

2. The Summary Method. This involves the presentation of the salient points, and the central outstanding message of each lesson. The following suggestions are offered:

July 5.

The sending forth of Paul and Barnabas marked the beginning of foreign missions as the deliberately planned enterprise of the church. The Holy Spirit selected and sent out these missionaries, showing that the true method of world evangelization is to have spirit-sent men to preach the gospel.

July 12.

The grand theme of Paul's preaching was justification by faith. Those who receive Christ as their Saviour are freely justified from all things. Jesus took the place of the sinner that the sinner might have His place (II Cor. 5:21). This is the missionary message for all times.

July 19.

At Lystra Paul and Barnabas "so" preached the gospel that a great multitude believed. Only that which brings conviction of sin and induces belief in Christ can be said to be preaching in the biblical sense.

July 26.

Receiving the Gentiles on the simple condition of faith in Christ provoked a spirit of controversy in the church. Through Christ the middle wall of partition was broken down so that in this dispensation God makes no distinction between Jew and Gentile.

August 2.

James shows to the Jewish believers scattered abroad, who were passing through sore trials and persecutions, that true religion was to receive with meekness the engrafted Word, and live a self-restrained, unselfish life, bridling the tongue, helping those in need, and keeping unspotted from the world.

August 9.

Because of differences of opinion over John Mark, Paul and Barnabas separated. God overruled their contention to the wider dissemination of the gospel.

August 16.

The believer has been born twice, of the flesh and of the Spirit. A moral conflict goes on within him. The Christian's victory over the flesh is by yielding to the Holy Spirit, who dwells within.

August 23.

On the second missionary journey Paul attempted to preach in Asia Minor, but the Holy Spirit shut the doors against him. At Troas he had the explanation in the vision of a man from Macedonia calling him to preach the gospel in Europe. Divine guidance is as truly through closed doors as through open doors.

August 30.

Because of the casting out of an evil spirit from a slave girl at Philippi, Paul and Silas were imprisoned. As they were singing God's praises in the jail, God miraculously delivered them.

September 6.

To be in Christ is to have gain above the best things in the world. Those who are in Christ will have His mind, and therefore will press towards the goal.

September 13.

Though unselfishly preaching the Word of God, Paul was hated and persecuted by the Jews.

September 20.

Because Paul had experienced the life in Christ, and knew whom he had believed, he with undaunted courage went about preaching the gospel.

The garden still is green

And oh, how life is brief.

WHOLESOME FOODS

Sour cream is not enough prized. By keeping a little on hand from day to day one may have delicious cakes without butter, salad dressings, cookies, doughnuts and various other dishes which will appeal to all appetites.

One will have to use judgement in regard to the amount of cream used as it will vary with its richness. The following is a doughnut recipe which has been worked out and tested and found to be the "best ever." If the directions are carefully followed the cakes will be rich without soaking, tender and very moist. This kind will keep without drying out.

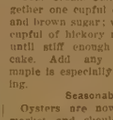
Best-Ever Doughnuts.—Beat two eggs in an aluminum bowl, add one and two-thirds cupfuls of sugar and beat until the sugar is well dissolved, then add a half teaspoonful of salt and one and one-fourth cupfuls of thick sour milk with a teaspoonful of soda well dissolved in it; then one-fourth cupful of rich thick sour cream, so thick that a spoon when dipped into it will stay well heaped with the cream. Powdered mace or grated nutmeg makes the best flavor. Vanilla never seems to be an appropriate flavor for doughnuts, and never, if you must use vanilla, use the substitute commonly called vanillin; it spoils the flavor of the food. Now the aluminum dish is set directly on the ice after just enough flour has been added to make a thick mixture that will still stir with the spoon. The secret of moist, tender and altogether delicious doughnuts is to cut them as moist as possible. The chilling process makes them easy to handle with no more flour. Work quickly, have the fat just right and carry the cakes to the fat on a broad [illegible] so they will not lose their shape; being soft they are hard to handle. This makes three dozen doughnuts cut in the usual size.

Sour Cream Dressing for Salads.—Add a tablespoonful of any good salad dressing to a cupful of thick sour cream, mix until well blended, add such seasonings as onion juice, red pepper or any chopped green pepper and onion with a bit of fresh red pepper. With this as a foundation one may vary it to suit any salad. For cucumbers add a bit of vinegar; also for chopped or shredded cabbage.

Sour Cream Cake Filling.—Cook together one cupful each of sour cream and brown sugar; when thick add one cupful of hickory nut meats and beat until stiff enough to spread on the cake. Add any flavoring desired; maple is especially good with this filling.

Seasonable Foods.

Oysters are now coming into the market and should be served occasionally by those who enjoy them. An oyster stew is a simple dish to prepare, but it is too frequently poorly made and served. Oysters should be carefully looked over to remove any bits of shell, then put under the tap and rinsed in a sieve. The liquor should always be reserved and used, but carefully strained. The amount of oysters to serve depends upon the number to serve and their fondness for the shell fish. Enough should be used to give the broth a flavor; many like the broth who care little for the oyster.



Drop the oysters into the strained oyster liquor, adding enough cold water to cook the oysters until their edges curl. Remove them to the soup tureen, adding plenty of butter and salt and pepper to taste. To the hot liquor add fresh scalded milk, pour over the oysters and serve at once. Too long cooking of the oysters will make them tough and too little will make them most unpalatable. Serve at once with crisp oyster crackers.

Grilled Oysters.—Put a large piece of butter into a hot pan; when smoking hot drop in the oysters, a few at a time. When the oysters are browned remove to a hot dish and pour over them a sauce made by using the liquor from the oysters, thickened with flour and butter well blended. Season with worcestershire sauce, salt and cayenne and serve on buttered toast.

Fried Oysters.—Drain and wipe the oysters dry, roll in cracker crumbs seasoned with salt and pepper, dip into egg which has been beaten with a tablespoonful of milk, then dip again into cracker crumbs. Fry quickly in deep fat; drain on paper as fast as taken up. Serve very hot with parsley and lemon.

Colonial Cabbage.—Shred a hard head of cabbage which has been allowed to crisp in cold water. Drain well and add sweet cream, using enough to moisten the cabbage, a few tablespoonfuls of sugar, a little salt, and just enough vinegar to give zest to the dressing.

Grated carrot, chopped celery with a few minced nuts, mixed with a good salad dressing makes a good salad or sandwich filling.

Central Europe Sorry It Imported Muskrats

Recently hunters shot a muskrat near Salzburg, Austria. Other muskrats have been seen near Vienna. Before 1905 this North American animal was unknown in Europe, but during that year a pair was brought from America and released on an estate near Prague. The progeny of these rats multiplied so fast that they soon spread to the Bohemian lakes and forests in spite of efforts to exterminate them. By 1913 they were all along the Moldau and along the Elser river in Bavaria. In 1914 they reached lower and upper Austria to the south and Saxony to the north. Soon they crossed the Danube but seem to have been stopped by the Austrian Alps. When the first muskrats were brought to Bohemia it was thought that they would furnish fur, but the climate of Europe does not seem to develop a suitable growth. Central Europe suffers the damage caused by the rodents without the compensation of being able to use the skins.

Sovietizing Gypsies

Soviet Russia is attempting to tame the gypsies. Recently representatives of these wanderers—who are of East Indian origin and have been roving through Europe since the Fifteenth century—formed an association, obtained recognition from the Soviet as a juridical body, and announced their intention to win their brethren away from nomadic habits and induce them to give up fortune-telling and horse-trading and settle down on farms or in industrial communities. In printing this report from Moscow a Budapest paper notes that a similar experiment with Hungarian gypsies was a failure.

Flying Into Matrimony

A young Swedish couple were recently married while flying through the air on board an airplane. When the machine, carrying a full complement of passengers, had risen to a height of 1,500 feet an altar was erected in the cabin, before which a Swedish clergyman performed the marriage ceremony, with a lawyer and his wife as witnesses. A wedding breakfast was then served, and the health of the couple drunk in champagne by all the passengers. The clergyman and the lawyer left the machine at Hamburg, but the couple continued their honeymoon trip to Amsterdam.

FARM POULTRY

WINDOW GLASS IS HELP FOR POULTRY

A short time ago scientists found that animals do better when they can be in the open at least a few hours each day exposed to the direct rays of the sun. This has been demonstrated to be especially true of hogs and chickens. The reason is that ordinary window glass acts as a filter to the direct rays of the sun. Glass filters out the so-called ultra-violet rays—the rays that have a great deal to do with invigorating the animal.

Recently Prof. L. V. Crum, physicist of Iowa State college, has completed some tests that are of interest in this connection.

Professor Crum took 24 chickens that had been kept under ordinary glass for three weeks. The birds were divided into three groups of eight each. One group was housed under glass cloth. The second group was housed under celo-glass, another product that does not exclude ultra-violet light, and a third group was housed under ordinary window glass. All were given the same feed and general care. The experiment continued for four weeks. Two of the chickens kept under ordinary glass died of rickets. The remaining six gained 180 per cent in weight during the four-week period. All of the eight chickens kept under the glass cloth remained healthy and made a gain of 250 per cent during the four-week period. The group kept under the celo-glass did not do so well as that under the glass cloth. In this group two birds also died, but it appears that one of them died from an unavoidable cause, for which the celo-glass could not be blamed. The other, however, died of rickets, but is was not a healthy bird when the experiment began.

While this test is not reported because it is conclusive, we refer to it merely to remind our readers that ordinary window glass is not as good a product as we have been in the habit of thinking, because it screens out some of the most active rays of the sunlight, says the Wisconsin Farmer. No doubt the open front houses that have come into such general use in recent years owe their beneficial effect upon the flock at least partly to the fact that the ultra-violet rays of the sun pass freely through the curtain fronts.

Many Poultry Diseases Are Easily Preventable

Though most poultry diseases are curable, they all require more time and work than the average farm flock is worth. Therefore, it may easily be seen that prevention should be the first and most important rule in poultry sanitation and disease control. Roup, tuberculosis, chickenpox and fowl cholera are the most dangerous diseases affecting chickens.

Most farm poultry houses lack a simple and effective method of ventilation. In many houses the fowls are overcrowded, and when this is the case and there is no good method of ventilation, the air is sure to become damp, and we all know that it is in just this sort of an atmosphere that roup thrives. To avoid this condition, see to it that the front of your poultry house has an open space that equals at least one-fourth of the floor space of the building. And allow at least three square feet of floor space for each fowl.

Poultry diseases spread through the droppings of diseased birds. Most flock owners have dropping boards under the roosts, and if they haven't they should have by all means. If a part of the flock is diseased, millions of germs may be removed through the droppings instead of leaving them in the litter to contaminate the other birds. Much of the surplus moisture is also removed through the droppings.

Keep the drinking water pure and clean, and sterilize the vessels every two or three days so long as disease is present in the flock. A teaspoonful of permanganate of potash may be dissolved in all the water it will make purple for drinking water whenever the birds seem in need of a tonic.

Poultry Notes

Separate the cockerels and the pullets.

Give plenty of feed to growing stock.

Each duck yields about two ounces of marketable feathers.

Houses must be sprayed frequently with a good disinfectant to keep down mites, lice, and disease germs.

Rations for the laying hens should be compounded so that the hens will eat at least one-half as much mash as grain.

Soft-shelled eggs may be caused by a lack of shell material, which may be the case if the hens do not have access to oyster shell.

It is profitable to keep hens comfortable. Keep the coop free from draft, still well ventilated and dry. The coldest coop is the tightly closed, ill-ventilated one.

Woodchucks Easy to Exterminate

Calcium Cyanide and Carbon Bisulphide Put the Rodents to Death.

"Woodchucks, or ground hogs, are found on nearly every New York farm, and they always have a 'coming' appetite for cabbage, clover, alfalfa, beans and grains," says M. D. Pirnie of the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca.

"In woodlots and hilly pastures they are usually kept in check by their natural enemies, dogs and foxes," Mr. Pirnie says, "but in the open fields, and around vegetable gardens, there is much food and so few natural enemies that measures must be taken to guard crops and prevent the 'chucks' from digging holes in the meadows and cultivated fields."

Farmers Must Co-Operate.

Because woodchucks may travel considerable distances in the spring and fall, neighboring farmers must co-operate to clean up an area. Woodchucks like to dig in railroad embankments, and these should be watched as distributing centers for nearby farms. The college is glad to help farmers with eradication campaigns, and in many localities county agricultural agents are planning demonstrations of clean-up methods.

Shooting, trapping, and poisoning are unsatisfactory ways of handling the woodchuck problem, as they take too much time and trouble. A substance that gives off poison gas provides the best and most economical way to kill them, according to the college.

The gas from liquid bisulphide kills the "chucks" in their dens. "In using it, plug all openings but one," says Mr. Pirnie; saturate a small wad of cotton with about three tablespoons of the liquid, and shove it well into the burrow. Then plug the last opening.

Some persons claim that exploding the carbon bisulphide gas gives surer results, and they reopen the hole after about half an hour and set it off with a torch fastened to the end of a pole. Carbon bisulphide is very explosive and inflammable. Mr. Pirnie cautions so that it is unwise to smoke while placing it.

Gas Kills Woodchuck.

Calcium cyanide in flakes or granules may be used in a similar manner, he says. A tablespoonful placed deep down in the burrow gradually gives off a poisonous gas and kills the woodchuck. In extensive holes, with several openings, it is best to place some cyanide in each of them, of course closing all the openings. In May and early June, before the grass gets high, it is easier to see the woodchucks and locate their dens. Before the cyanide or bisulphide is placed, the person using it should make sure only woodchucks use the holes so that no skunks will be killed. Skunks are valuable fur-bearing animals protected by law, and also are of considerable value on farms, because they feed on injurious grubs, cutworms, and mice.

Mr. Pirnie emphasizes several precautions: carbon bisulphide is explosive and must be kept from flames and heat; calcium cyanide is very poisonous and must never be scattered where poultry can find a single particle. Cyanide fumes must always be opened outdoors, for a concentration of the gas from it can prove fatal to humans as well as to woodchucks. The hands should always be washed after using cyanide

Ice House Is Desirable for Production of Milk

An ice house on every dairy farm where natural ice can be harvested is highly desirable for the production of milk having a low bacteria count, and no time is better than early winter for constructing one, for it is at this period when work on the farm is less pressing. The department of dairy husbandry at the New Jersey College of Agriculture, New Brunswick, reports that it will be glad to answer any questions relative to ice-house construction.

In building the storage house allow space for at least 1½ tons of ice per cow. This will cool the milk, allow for melting, and provide a margin for the household.

If no river or lake is at hand an ice pond can sometimes be constructed. Whatever is used, the water should be of unquestioned purity. Old ponds should be cleared of the vegetable matter and refuse which often collect around the edges.

Stable Manure Is Quite Beneficial to Gardener

Stable manure has really a trinity of values in plant food, humus and beneficial bacteria. While conditions may make it very difficult or impossible to obtain, at the same time the wise gardener will never willingly do without it. A ton or two, or a load of manure will not be one whit too much for a garden 30 by 60 feet, although a much smaller amount will give good results, if supplemented by compost of leaves, lawn clippings and the like, by green manures and commercial fertilizers.

Stable manure is rich in nitrogen and well supplied with potash, but the phosphoric acid can be increased profitably by about 50 pounds of acid phosphate for every ton of manure.

Farmers Have Own Nitrogen Factories

Plant Is Available Where Legumes Are Grown.

"In clover and alfalfa New York farmers have a nitrogen factory on their own farms of greater practical value than any one could ever develop at Muscle Shoals," says Prof. E. L. Worthen, of the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. He advocates the "farm fertilizer factory" to the limit of efficiency whether it be on a dairy, vegetable, or fruit farm. By the farm fertilizer factory, he means growing more clover and other legumes in the rotation, conserving and fully using farm manure, and producing and returning to the soil organic matter as green manure, through catch-and-cover crops.

"Where clover or alfalfa is produced and farm manure is well used, acid phosphate will suffice," he declared. He further stated that the New York grain and hay producer must meet the nitrogen and potash needs from his own farm so that he need purchase only acid phosphate as a fertilizer, if he is to compete successfully with the western farmer.

In intensive vegetable crop production, Professor Worthen says, a mixed fertilizer can be used to advantage. Under these conditions, high analysis mixtures such as the 5-10-15 and 4-12-4 should be purchased or home-mixed. When vegetables are grown under field conditions manure and acid phosphate may to some extent replace complete fertilizer.

"Most nitrogen from the inexhaustible supply of the atmosphere through more and better clover, additional nitrogen and potash from the farm manure supply, and a larger proportion of the feed for livestock produced in acid phosphate, together with straw, silage, and hay on New York farms."

Fattening Turkeys for the Thanksgiving Trade

Turkeys allowed to range without confinement are usually about as far from home about the middle of the forenoon as they will get. Wherever they may be, they seek out cover or pasturage with shade when they remain during the hotter part of the day. It is best to range turkeys during the night. It is an advantage of this fact that they are confined until the latter part of the morning and their ranging area thus reduced.

By adding corn to their ration and giving increasing amounts as the turkeys fatten, the turkey hens which are to be put on the market may be prepared for the Thanksgiving trade. Usually it is more difficult to fatten the toms at this time, as they have larger frames, and it requires more feed to cover them with flesh. Thus it is usually found best to supply the Thanksgiving trade with turkey hens and to supply the Christmas trade which comes late in December with turkey toms which have had a longer fattening period.

Right Time to Destroy Weeds Is on Sunny Day

The best time to kill weeds is right now, and the worst time to let them go to seed is also right now. That is within certain limits, of course, but any sunny day is a good time to give Mr. George W. Weed a blow beneath the belt. And the more unscrupulous and vicious the blow, the better. For weeds that go to seed are the ones that really count, say gardeners at the state college. Different weeds have from a couple of dozen to a couple of thousand seeds, with the majority running toward the latter classification, and the fly with a million offspring has nothing on the weed with a million seeds. It's true that the seeds may not all grow, but killing the weeds is the best insurance. If necessary the dead weeds may be burned to get rid of the seeds. At any rate, take no chances with weeds—they're bad characters.

Treat seed wheat with copper carbonate for smut prevention.

Weed seeds planted are paid for at the price of crop seeds. Know what you sow.

A few pounds of poison bran mash makes an ideal farewell banquet for the grasshoppers.

Where soil fertility is a problem the absence of a legume in the rotation hastens the date of the sheriff's sale.

There is only one rule to go by in the case of trying to thicken a thin stand of alfalfa. That rule is, "Don't try it."

Many of the poultry losses are caused by spoiled grain and decomposed animals being allowed to remain around the farm.

Rats kill a surprising number of chickens, and very often the cause of the loss is not discovered for a considerable length of time.

Corn is the most practical crop for ensilage and also makes the best feed, especially so when soy beans are planted along with the corn crop.

Possibly Terrier May Become Musical Critic

A tenor, letting his eyes rove over the audience as he waited for the accompaniment to get through the introductory measures, was astonished to see a brindled bull terrier occupying one of the best seats in the house. So great was his wonderment that he sang that song directly to the dog, which cocked an alert head inquiringly to one side in an attitude of rapt attention.

After the concert, the tenor asked the manager of the hall to explain the presence of the dog.

"That's all right," soothed the manager, "at dog's seat was paid for."

But why was the dog there. I'm asking?" persisted the tenor.

"Well, it's this way: His owner, one of the rich women of this town, hates to be disturbed during a concert by having some restless person sit in front of her, so for the course she buys two seats, tandem, assigning the one in front of her to the dog; and blame me, mister, that terrier is beginning to enjoy the music!"—Borden Sparks in the Saturday Evening Post.

Many people have a lot of good in them, but, unfortunately, they keep it there.

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

How Much Are Poor Roads Costing You?

5,000,000 of America's 18,000,000 motor vehicles are recognized as an economic necessity on the farm.

Is your car giving the full efficiency of which it is capable—and at the lowest cost per mile possible?

Not if you are jolting over bumps and ruts. Not if you get stuck in the mud.

In addition to the time you thus lose along the way, you also pay from one to four cents a mile more in gasoline, tire and repair bills than you would pay on permanently paved highways.

Think, too, how many so-called improved roads have gone to pieces within the past few years, thereby piling up huge maintenance and rebuilding costs.

Contrast all this with the record of Concrete Roads—the roads that have repair built out and maintenance built in. Firm, rigid and unyielding, free of bumps, ruts, holes, mud and dust, they are, in every way, the most economical roads.

Tell your highway officials you want more Concrete Roads. Such an investment will pay you big dividends year after year.

Dr. W. C. Rountree
Texarkana, Texas.

Dear Doctor:- I had Pellagra six years, I was very nervous, had stomach trouble, lost weight, hands blistered and peeled off, very despondent and thought that I would lose my mind. I took over 700 hypodermics and got worse all the time. I heard of Dr. Rountree's Wondrful Remedy. I got three treatments and am now sound and well. The last treatment was taken 18 months ago and I have had no recurring symptoms.

Dear Doctor:- I had been having stomach trouble and losing weight; my skin had turned brown. I had a general weakness all over my body, felt tired all the time and could not sleep well at night. I had changed my diet often trying to get rest, as I was very nervous. One of my neighbors had Pellagra and told me possibly I had it. I did not believe at that time that I did have Pellagra, but I tried one of your treatments and got immediate relief. My nervousness was at once relieved; my stomach cured and I am now a well man. I only took two ten dollar treatments which cured me.

STATE FORESTS HAVE ESCAPED DISASTROUS FIRES DURING DRY SEASON

Montgomery, Sept. 16.— Thus far during the current drought the Alabama forests have escaped the severe fire damage sustained by some of the other southern states, according to the state commission of forestry. This is almost entirely due, says the commission, to a general carefulness on the public. A number of fire have occurred, some of considerable size, but in nearly every instance they have been successfully controlled by the local residents and the forest rangers.

The general situation, however, is to be regarded as very acute, since in spite of all odinary precautions fires are certain to occur through accident or from natural causes. The effects of brief thunder showers usually disappear within a day and sometimes within an hour or two leaving the forest leaf fall due to the severe drough, the litter almost as inflammable as before amount of debris on the floor is constantly increasing. With the first frosts this will be further augmented and conditions will be ripe for serious conflagrations.

The fact that burning of the forest worps great injury to the various communities is becoming generally appreciated throughout the state, as is also the fact that conrol of forest fires is a strictly feasible undertaking. The result has been that thousands of citizens during the past year have turned out to fight fire on their own initiative, chiefly from a sense of civic duty. It is impossible to estimate number fires have been prevented from starting. A survey of the situation shows that carelessness on part of local resident and transients easily could have started hundreds of fires to date. However, in view of the very high hazard, only increased efforts at prevention and prompt action toward suppression of such fires as may occur can prevent a recurrence of destructive fire conditions comparable in severity with those of last fall.

PASSING OF A GOOD MAN

We are saddened over the going away of Marshall B. Pounds of Pletcher. And in making a note of his death, I know that a more fitting and worthy menior should be written than can be jotted down here. He was born in Chilton county, Feb. 19, 1893, and died at Montgomery, August 2 1925, in St. Margaret hospital. He lived a few years at Clanton. For the last eight years of his life he has been a M. and O. station agent and operator. Most of his work was in Mississippi and Alabama. He was widly known as a loyal citizen. His maral and blameless life compelled the esteem and respect of everybody. He knew hardships by its first name. His mother died when he was four and left to his father care five small children many hardships have come before them since that time. He had suffered from heart trouble all his life and at times it seemed as though he would not live another hour. In his last illness he suffered a great deal, but he bore it with patience. He told his father a few hours before he died he was goin gto die and did not mind it. He died happy.

He married Miss Gertrude Kllinner December 29, 1917. They lived together happily for seven years, seven months and three days. They had a happy home and it was a pleasure to be in their home He leaves a devoted wife, and three precicus little children an aged father and a host of sorrowing friends. He was laid to rest in the Sardis Cemetary. His funeral was conduced by Bro. Till Deason.

May we cherish his memory and keep his principles all our lives.

PLANT NOW FOR YOUR WINTER GREENS

Now is the time to plant seed for producing winter greens. Plant kale. The Siberian Curly is one of the best varieties for sowing at this time of year. Put in a liberal supply of mustard. Plant some Dwarf Esex rape. Although this is commonly thought of as being a food for animals, it really produces excellent greens.

Spinach, of course, is the leader of the winter greens. It has a more delicate flavor and is better liked than any other. Plant it in the upper part of the south early in September; in the middle south about the middle or latter part of September; and in the lower south the latter part of September to early October.

A liberal supply of turnips should be planted in early September. The Seven Top variety is the one to plant where turnip salad is wanted. The seed of this variety are quite scarce this year and high priced, and while no other variety of turnip is equal to it for salad, the others will produce greens that are fairly good.

Right now every home gardener should put in some lettuce and cabbage. If set now and properly handled, these will mature in time for use during late fall and early winter.

Of the root crops, there is still time to put in carrots, beets and turnips.—Progressive Farmer.

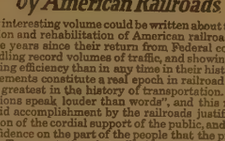
5 Years of Wonderful Progress



by American Railroads

A very interesting volume could be written about the reconstruction and rehabilitation of American railroads during the five years since their return from Federal control.

Handling record volumes of traffic, and showing greater operating efficiency than in any time in their history, their achievements constitute a real epoch in railroad progress—the greatest in the history of transportation.

"Actions speak louder than words", and this record of splendid accomplishment by the railroads justifies a continuation of the cordial support of the public, and a feeling of confidence on the part of the people that the provisions of the Transportation Act afford an excellent working arrangement between the Government and the carriers.

Notwithstanding their failure to realize the fair return on their investment, as permitted by law, the railroads of the United States have, during the past five years, spent nearly three and a half billion dollars for modern freight cars, more powerful locomotiv s and roadway improvements. They have appropriated nearly a billion dollars during the current year for similar betterments.

Of this gigantic five-year total, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad has authorized approximately one hundred and twenty million dollars for new improvements, representing nearly 38% of the property investment at the end of Federal control. In other words, during the past five years this Railroad has appropriated, or spent, practically 38% of the total amount of money invested during the first seventy years of its existence.

The railroads are think in progressively and working efficiently. This accounts for the wonderful record described above.

VOLUME 5. CLANTON ALABAMA, THURSDAY, OCT. 1, 1925 NO. 3

Democratic Executive Com. Met on Monday Afternoon

The Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton county met at the Wilson hotel Monday afternoon at two o'clock with a large number of the committee present. Several vacancies on the committee were filled in the several beats of the county.

Judge S. M. Adams, chairman, presided, and W. B. Corley, secretary. In opening the reason for the call, Judge Adams gave an account of the previous campaigns and of work necessary to be done for future campaigns.

Hearty responses were heard from different ones present on the democratic outlook in Chilton county. All expressed themselves as highly pleased with the situation and pledging to do more for the party's cause than ever before. Organization will be perfected to cover the county for an aggressive campaign next year.

Prospects are the brightest in the history of the county for democratic success next year. It was pointed out that the biggest democratic vote in history of the county was polled in the last two elections, and with a proportionate gain next year the county should show a good size democratic majority.

Each committeeman present promised his effort to see that his beat made the best showing next year, and with this spirit among democrats, those present could see nothing but democratic gains next year.

A few democrats around Clanton who "lie" with one crowd and lick salt with the other were roundly condemned for their political two-facedness and political weakness.

Our Good Farmer Friends Are Coming in Often

Several of our good farmer friends are calling to see us every day and wishing us well in Chilton county. Nothing pleases us better than to have one of our old brother Parrishs, Marlar, Keel and others ((I mean young men), to call on us give us good advice, remind us of our errors, admonish us to look on things worth while, and to avoid the pitfalls of many. We wish we had a week to sit down with these men and study the world as it has been, to live it as it is, and to plan for the future.

To mix and minvle one with another enlightens and lifts up the ideals of those who are downhearted, or think in an adverse light of things of this life. Talk to your neighbor.

ALABAMA STATE FAIR OPENS IN BIRMINGHAM ON OCT. 19 TO RUN FOR SIX BIG DAYS

Concrete Grandstand Seating 10,000, New Half Mile Track and Renovated Poultry and Cattle Building Among Improvements Made

With a multitude of new features promised and everything on a larger and more modern scale than ever known here, the Alabama State Fair will open in Birmingham Monday, October 19, and continue through October 24.

Scores of workmen and builders have been busy in the meantime with the construction of new buildings and the reconstruction and remodeling of others. Special attention is being given to the new grandstand which will be entirely of concrete and steel, with a seating capacity of 10,324 persons. The mezzanine floor, 45x432 feet, is being equipped with womens' rest rooms and other accommodations, as well as for use for the educational and womens' department. On the lower floors, also concrete, will be found three exhibit rooms, occupying 10,000 square feet, the whole being well lighted and ventilated and suitable for the finest exhibits.

It is expected to prove of special interest to farmers and livestock men to learn that the horse barns as well as the cattle and hog barns will be fitted up with suitable pavilions so that the show can be continued at night as well as in daytime. It is believed that this will prove a considerable advantage over the arrangement of former state fairs when the barn and livestock exhibits were in out-of-the-way and somewhat inaccessible locations.

Agricultural and poultry buildings are also being remodeled, and a half-mile race track is being constructed on scientific lines promising to the the fastest south of the Ohio River.

Premium List Heavy

"We have added to our list of premiums in many directions for this year's Alabama State Fair," said R. A. Brown, president. "County agricultural premiums include prizes of $500 $400, $300, $150, $100 and $50, while the community premiums include amounts of $200, $150 and $100. Individual premiums offered are in the amount of $250, $200, $150, $100, $50 and $25.

"But aside from these inducements offered to encourage industry and agriculture, the Alabama State Fair is a comprehensive exhibition of what the ambitious boy or girl may achieve in agriculture, livestock raising, dairying, horticultural, home gardening, domestic, an exposition of the marvelous improvement in farm machinery and agricultural implements. It is an object lesson in the great part which improved machinery plays in the development and cultivation of the farm and the increased prosperity of the farmer," says President Brown.

"The chief educational value of our fair lies in the fact that it is demonstrative in character. The eye is a more convincing instructor than the ear. We are slow to accept and believe in any new method until we have had optical proof of its superiority over the old.

"Often it is difficult to secure the attention of the busy man or woman long enough to give such a demonstration. Not infrequently it happens that farmers who would be most benefited by better methods of farming are not sufficiently interested to be present at any special meeting called for the purpose of discussing the subject."

Why not exhibit something you have grown, or made, or designed, or some of your cherished heirdoms at the Alabama State Fair. Most everybody has something worthy of being entered Send it along. Oct. 19 to 24.

Attractions Feature Alabama State Fair

The many attractions that will be offered at the Alabama State Fair in Birmingham, October 19 to 24, will be among the features of that big annual event. Vaudeville acts, which include performances by the outstanding entertainers of the day, will be presented a number of times each day. Horse racing, with some of the fastest steppers on the Southern circuits, will be featured on the new half mile track, while all the farm, cattle, dog, poultry, mining and manufacturing exhibits will be free after the admission fee has been paid at the entrance gates. A special effort, so fair officials say, is being made to give the public a big show at the lowest cost possible

The biggest men in Birmingham are officials of the Alabama State Fair Association They believe in bringing the farm and the town together. They think that the town has the right to know what the farm is doing. They want the people who live in the modern American beehive that is called city to see just what the inhabitants of the rural districts are doing and the progress they are making. If they believe that this bringing together is worth while and sink their money into the project for the mutual good of everybody, what do you think?

Outstanding people in the life of the State of Alabama will be at Alabama State Fair in Birmingham from October 19, to 24. Senators, congressmen, state officials, leading ministers, farmers, manufacturers, scientists, teachers, lawyers, doctors and every-day citizens will all take advantage of this opportunity to see what the state is doing. For the exhibits will depict in startling form the town and farm life throughout Alabama

One of the best bands in America will furnish the music at the Alabama State Fair in Birmingham, October 19 to 24. Skilled musicians who have been blended into pleasing harmony by one of the greatest bandmasters will play throughout the afternoon and night. Jazz tunes just from Broadway, as well as those melodies that live in the memory of man, are to be included on their program.

One of the greatest one-piece concrete and steel grandstands in the entire South is rapidly nearing completion at the Alabama State Fair grounds at Birmingham. And during the annual state fair there October 19 to 24, 10,000 people will sit in it comfortably and see the horse racing and other features that are a part of the big state fair to be presented there.

The fastest horses on the Southern tracks will race at the Alabama State Fair. Already October 19 to 24 has gone down in the books of the trainers of well known stables and they have announced their intention of bringing their strings to Birmingham to try for the big purses that have been offered.

Side-shows, [illegible] free acts, racing, fun in [illegible] a glimpse of life a la 1925 in t[illegible] all a part of the [illegible] which is billed for Birmingham Oct. 19 to 24.

S. S. CONVENTION HELD AT SAMARIA SUNDAY

The Sunday school convention of Unity and Chilton county associations held with the Samaria Baptist Church, Sunday was a great sucess. Each subject was ably disussed and in the discussions during the day there were some excellent ideas advanced and it is hoped that the same will prove a boomerang so that great good may be accomplished thereby.

The Convention is greatly indebted to Rev. W. J. Armstrong and E. A. Norris and Dr. S. J. Ezell for the splendid deliveries made by them as well as to other speakers of the day. The writer does not believe that he ever saw a more attentive crowd than one Sunday.

At the hour a bountiful dinner was spread for the comfort and sustanance of the entire congregation with much to spare.

On recommendation of the nominating committee, H. A. Harris was elected President and J. W. P. Murphy vice President with J. Z. Mims Secretary and treasure, for the ensuing year.

The Committee on resolutions made the following report which was unanimously adopted;

Resolutions of the Unity Baptist churches:

Resolved, 1st: That we express our appreciation of the good rendition of the excellent program in this session of the convention.

2nd, That We commend Bro. E. A. Norris for his good sermon.

3rd, That we endorse the agitation for trained officers and teachers for our rural Sunday Schools.

4th, That we thank Bro. E. R. Johnson and through him the Sunday school Board for the splendid and helpful lecture which he delivered.

5th, That we extend hearty thanks to the Samaria church and community and especially the ladies for their generous hospitality shown in their excellent entertainment of the convention.

6th, That we remember with pleasure our chairman in his arduous and continuous labors through the Associational year.

7th, That we hereby offer and pledge our full cooperation with the work for the ensuing year.

Respectively submitted; A. E. Davis, B. J. Session and S. M. Yates, Committee.

Really there was nothing short about the Convention except the representation of the various schools. There were but 27 schools out of 48 present. Those not present can't realize what they missed

Chilton County News Extra Pleased Patrons

The folk are very apreciative of the extra paper we published last week and have spoken kind words to us Several of our country readers wanted to know why the News came out so early in the week. It was no more than one's duty to do everything to the town in which it is ublished and the county it serves. We decided the effort worth while, and all those who read the advertisements of those merchants will be more than repaid for their efforts. To tell whether Clanton is progressive is to look through the columns of the Chilton County News and see what the own is doing and of what it is thinking. Her business men are wide awake and when all the work is completed on our streets, an awakening of what we really possess will dawn upon our citizens.

The News is bulging in this issue with the live messages from our merchants telling you of what they have in store for you. These are as much a part of our news as thi sstory, and if you fail to read them you are missing something good.

Let's hitch our town to a star and watch it climb.

MR. ARLEDGE CALLER AT NEWS OFFICE LAST WEEK

Mr. S. L. Arledge, one of the News' oldest subscribers, was a pleasant caller last week. Judge Arledge is a very plasant man to listen to and is active for a man 79 years of age.

Mr. Arledge has the distinction of having served as justice of the peace in his beat from 1876 to 1924, a term of 48 years, and that without having been reversed on any decision he made. This is a record to be proud of.

Crop Reporting Board Defends Its Crop Reports

The United States Crop Reporting Board, answering criticism of its September 25 cotton report, announced today that it stands fairly and squarely behind its reports and accepts full responsibility for them

"The Board realizes at all times," the statement says, "the magnitude of this responsibility and the necessity always to act upon the evidence before it. It calls attention to fact that critics are free to make any estimate they wish based on as much or as little evidence as they may have. Statements that the board erred in certain reports are frequently merely expressions of opinion based upon scant evidence and superficial observation."

The complete records of the Board are on file at the department, the Board pointed out, and member of Congress and others have frequently been invited to inspect them. These records contain data upon which the September 23 and earlier reports were based and "refute the insinuations which the Board is affected by outside influences in arriving at its forecasts."

The Board declared in connection with its report issued September 23, that every source of information available to the Board, including reports of township and county correspondents numbering many thousand, which are received direct at Washington, the reports of the thousands of field correspondent who report to the State statisticians, the reports of the state statisticians, themselves based on personal field observations and inquiries, as well as estimates from key men in hundreds of counties as to the number of bales of cotton likely to be produced in their own counties, showed material increase in the probable crop outturn as of September 16 compared with the previous report. Furthermore, the Board added, a careful analysis of the ginning report which the Board had before it in making its last estimate, combined with estimates from the correspondents as to the percentage of the crop picked and ginned to September 16, fully confirmed the date received from other sources.

"Contrary to some of the statements which have appeared to the effect that the crop was going to pieces, many correspondents and State statisticians reported that the yeild was turning out much better than expected in some States and that the recent rains had helped the late crop in some sections, the Board said. "When the September 1 report was issued excessive drought and threatened invasion of numerous insects in various sections gave a definitely pessimistic tone to many of the reports received. This pessimism was largly missing from the reorts received for the September 16 report, except in North Carolina, Tennessee, Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma where decline in crop prospects occurred."

The function of the board, it is pointed out, is to review carefully all of the evidence before the board and to arrive at the best possible estimate of the crop as it appears from the date available. A majority of the Board which makes the cotton report arrive at Washington from the cotton belt the day previous to the report, while the other members of the Board make frequent trips to various sections of the belt where conditions seem to be uncertain. Every member of the Board is thoroughly familiar with the methods used in estimating the crop, the board said, and most of them have had many years' experience in the work.

"The King's Business" Put on at the Baptist Church

"The Kings Business" a mission program was rendered in the Baptist church auditorum on last Sunday morning during the Sunday hour, before a large and interested audience. The program was executed by a number of officials and pupils of the Sunday School.

It was notable that the collection for mission-work was a generous one.

The Baptists of Chilton County cherish a pardonable pride in the fact that they have a representative in the mission field in China

Our own J. Toy Williams born and reared in Chilton County is giving valiant service at point near Shanghai.

The Baptist Sunday Schools of Chilton County have for some time been "backing" their representative in China in a most substantial way: they have been and are yet paying his salary The special mission collection for this purpose on Sunday was altogether gratifying

Many Chilton County friends will note with interest that a recent letter from Brother Williams is to the effort that the giving of material service in his vicinity is next to impossible on account of the upheaval caused by the war that is raging near by.

CHILTON COUNTY BAPTIST ASSOCIATION MEETS OCT. 15-16

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Salt Used by Mankind From Earliest Times

Salt has been used in all ages and all civilizations. Some of the oldest of trade routes came into use for the traffic in salt. It was probably first used as an ailment when man was in transition from the nomadic stage to the settled, agricultural life.

The Indians, though no such salt users as the civilized races, felt the need for it as all animals do and obtained it, like the wild beasts, at the licks and salt springs found in many places. In the constal regions they usually got it from the sinks and ponds of the tide lands.

The first salt works of the white settlers of Ohio was established in 1798 at an Indian source of salt, the springs on the banks of Salt creek, a tributary of the Scioto river, in Jackson county. The settlers, to increase the supply, sank wells to a depth of 30 feet, and for many years the fires burned beneath the salt kettles at this location. These salt springs had been indicated on maps as early as 1755, and before the settlement of the region the Indians used to come from long distances to make salt there. Daniel Boone, as an Indian prisoner, spent some time at the salt works.

Youngster Set Value on His First Ticket

It was Paul's first ride on the railroad with a ticket of his own. True, it was only a half-fare ticket, but it was an honest-to-goodness ticket nevertheless.

Mother wanted to put it in her pocketbook along with hers, but Paul would not hear of it. He clutched it tightly in his hand and sat up very straight, as becoming one of so much importance.

The conductor came along soon.

"Ticket," he said, holding out his hand toward Paul.

Paul just looked at him in pained surprise.

"Ticket, there, sonny," the conductor insisted.

"No, sir," Paul spoke up. "If you want a ticket go buy you one where I got this. This one's my very own!"

Story of Mary's Lamb Brought Up to Date

Mary was the proprietress of a diminutive incipient sheep,

Whose outer covering was as devoid of coloring as congealed atmospheric vapor,

And to all localities to which Mary perambulated,

The young Southdown was sure to follow.

It tagged to the dispensary of learning,

One diurnal section of time—

Which was contrary to all precedent— And excited the cacchination of the seminary attendants,

When they perceived the juvenile mutton at the establishment of learning.

Consequently, the perceptor expelled him from the interior.

Which precipitated Mary into a lachrymose condition.

But he continued to remain in the immediate vicinity without fretfulness.

Until Mary once more became visible.—Judge.

WARRIOR SERVICE TO BE RELIEVED

TWENTY-FOUR NEW BARGES EXPECTED TO BE DELIVERED EARLY IN OCTOBER

EMBARGO SHOULD BE LIFTED

Upstate Shippers Greatly Concerned. —Had Hoped to Have Embargo Lifted in Time to Move Cotton Crop

Mobile.—Delivery of 24 new steel barges to the Warrior river barge line is expected early this month, according to information received in Mobile, and it is expected that the embargo on shipments of freight to several upstate points, which has been on several months will be lifted.

The barges have been under construction for the past few months and officials of the barge line have predicted that when they are delivered the service will not only be greatly improved but that the line will be put on a paying basis.

Shippers are greatly interested in the lifting of the embargo on the up river points. An effort was made some time ago by Alabama shippers to get the embargo lifted in time to move the cotton crop.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Failure is, in a sense, the highway to success, inasmuch as every discovery of what is false leads us to seek earnestly after what is true, and every fresh experience points out some form of error which we shall afterward carefully avoid.

SEASONABLE FOODS

As the venison season is soon upon us, the following recipe is one which will be enjoyed:

Chestnut Sauce.—Fry one small onion and six slices of carrot, cut into small pieces, in two tablespoonfuls of butter five minutes. Add three tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well-browned; then add one and a half cupfuls of soup stock, a sprig of parsley, a bit of bay leaf, eight pepper corns and a teaspoonful of salt. Let simmer twenty minutes; strain, add a cupful of boiled chestnuts, a tablespoonful of butter and two tablespoonfuls of orange juice.

Vegetarian Mince Meat.—Take eight medium-sized apples, one-half cupful each of almonds and walnut meats, one-fourth cupful of dried figs, one-eighth cupful of citron, one-half cupful of currants, one cupful of raisins, one teaspoonful of salt, two cupfuls of brown sugar, the juice of two lemons, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful each of mace and cloves and one cupful of sweet cider or fruit juice. Chop the apples and nuts, put the dried fruit through the meat grinder, mix all the ingredients and cook until the apples are soft. Seal and keep for some time in glass jars.

Quick Dessert.—To a pint of whipped cream add one and one-half cupfuls of cream cheese, a cupful of walnut meats and a cupful of dates cut into quarters. Serve in sherbet cups, garnished with a cherry.

Cabbage With Veal Balls.—Cut the center from a firm head of cabbage and boil the shell in a cloth to keep it from breaking. Drain when tender and season well with salt and pepper. To the cabbage taken from the center chop and add half as much minced veal, one chopped onion, one cupful of cooked rice, one-half cupful of butter, mix and form into balls the size of a walnut, dip into crumbs and egg and fry in deep fat until brown. Serve the balls in the cabbage shell, steaming hot.

Potato muffins are prepared by filling well-greased gem pans with seasoned mashed potato. Brush with beaten egg and bake until brown. Slip from the gem pans and use as a garnish for fish. Add a bit of parsley for green. This is a good way to use left-over mashed potato.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

A good baked potato is always enjoyed at any meat. At supper time on a chilly night it is a dish both nourishing and appetizing. Serve with drawn butter, white sauce or with codfish, or with plain butter.

Jellied Prune Whip.—Wash and cover with cold water one-half pound of prunes, simmer slowly until tender. Add one-half cupful of sugar and simmer five minutes longer. Drain, saving the juice; remove the pits and cut the prunes into very small pieces. Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-fourth cupful of water and stir into the hot juice. Add the juice of one large lemon and cool until it begins to thicken, then whip until light and fonmy. Fold in the prunes and the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Pour into a mold or serving-dish and serve very cold.

Prune Pie.—Bake a pastry shell and fill it with the following: One-cupful of stewed prunes with some of the juice, sprinkle thickly with chopped pecans, add another layer of prunes and nuts. Cover with a meringue and bake brown or cover with cream whipped, sweetened and flavored.

Oyster Bisque.—Cook a pint of chopped oysters in three cupfuls of milk, strain and reserve the milk. Rub the oysters through a sieve, add two tablespoonfuls of flour mixed with two tablespoonfuls of butter; add milk, salt and cook eight minutes. Add a beaten egg and serve at once.

Spong Pudding.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of milk, four tablespoonfuls of flour, a pinch of salt and cook together until thick. Add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and when cooled a little, add the yolks of three eggs well beaten. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and bake in a well-buttered baking dish until well puffed. Serve with a hard sauce—softened butter, powdered sugar well mixed, and a little whipped cream with flavoring.

Chicken Custard.—A good dish for an invalid and one that is dainty, too. Take one and one-half cupfuls of bread crumbs from the center of the loaf, add to them two tablespoonfuls of chopped chicken breast. Beat the yolks of two eggs until well mixed, add to them a dash of celery salt, a pinch of salt and a cupful of milk. Pour into a custard dish, set in hot water and bake until the custard is set.

Lesson for November 1

THE FIGHT AGAINST STRONG DRINK

(Temperance Lesson)
LESSON TEXT—Eph. 4:13-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might."—Eph. 6:10.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Loving and Obeying Our Parents.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Be Strong.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Strong Armor for a Hard Fight.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Fight Against Strong Drink.

This is not a temperance lesson in the usual sense that it deals with intoxicants, but in the sense that it has to do with the believer's walk in conflict with the devil. Perhaps there has been no time when the evil one has made such a terrific fight as he is now doing in his attempt to nullify the Eighteenth amendment. The Christian has been saved by grace. Though his redemption is free, between its beginning and consummation there is a real, severe and protracted conflict. This conflict is most difficult and dangerous because it is not with flesh and blood, but with principalities, powers and spiritual hosts of wickedness in high places. Though the conflict is severe and painful, we should bravely battle on because the issue is sure if we go forth in the panoply of God.

I. The Source of the Believer's Strength (v. 10).

It is in the Lord. Only as the branch is united to the vine, or as a limb is united to the body, is there strength of life. We dare not attempt this conflict in human strength and wisdom.

II. The Enemy (vv. 11-12).

The enemy is the devil, a personal malicious being, with his many subordinates. His personality is proven by the names given him, and actions predicated of him. He has an exalted position, and is mighty in power, and all unsaved men are under his power. He is the original sinner, and is extremely cunning. He has power over death; enters into men; blinds their eyes; lays snares for them, and sifts God's servants. In carrying on his work, he has his churches and ministers. However, he is resting under a curse. Now as he was given on the cross, and he will receive his doom in the lake of fire.

III. The Christian's Armor (vv. 13-17).

This means that his weapons of offensive and defensive warfare are not of man's devices. Just as his strength is from the Lord, so is his armor. The believer dare not act merely on the defensive. He must attack his spiritual enemies as well as resist their spiritual attack.

1. A Girdle of Truth (v. 14).

The truth of God, sincerely and honestly embraced, alone will avail in this conflict. Reason, tradition speculation and even orthodoxy will fail in the crucial hour.

2. The Breastplate of Christ's Righteousness (v. 14).

As the metal plate covered the vital organs of the warrior, so the righteousness of Christ protects us from the enemy's assault.

3. Feet Shod With the Preparation of the Gospel of Peace (v. 15).

This suggests the firm foothold of the soldier and his alacrity—readiness to proclaim the message of peace.

4. Shield of Faith (v. 16).

By this he is able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. Christ is the object of that faith.

5. The Helmet of Salvation (v. 17).

Consciousness of salvation enables a man, knowing that he is a child of God, and fellow-citizen with the saints, to lift up his head with confidence and to vigorously assault the enemy.

6. The Sword of the Spirit (v. 17).

This is the Word of God, the Christian's offensive weapon; with it he can most effectively put his enemy to flight. This Christ used in the temptations in the wilderness, Matt. 4:4, 7, 10, 11. The church of Christ has won all her triumphs by the Word of God. Where she goes on using this, she goes on conquering, but when she falls back upon reason, culture, traditions, science, or the commandments of men, she goes down in defeat before the adversary.

IV. The Way to Get Strength to Use the Armor, and Courage to Face the Foe (vv. 18-20).

This is by prayer—and prayer alone

1. Every Variety and Method of Prayer Should Be Employed (v. 18).

2. He Prays for His Comrades, "All the Saints" (v. 18).

He sees all the believers standing shoulder to shoulder against the enemy.

3. He Is Persistent (v. 18).

Some Things to Beware Of

Beware of idle moments! Beware of the beginnings of evil! Above all, and more than all, beware lest you once admit the fatal intrusion of evil thoughts. In solemn and awful earnest I would say to you, "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation."—Farrar.

Eloquence

Eloquence is the appropriate organ of the highest personal energy.—Emerson.

Had Lost All Hope of Ever Being Well

Read story of the fight for health and final victory as told by Mrs. James A. Hall, Box 31, Norris City, Illinois.

"About twelve years ago my health failed. I could not eat anything without suffering. I had heartburn, sour stomach, palpitation of the heart, smothering spells, pains in my back and sides and a cough almost like consumption. Nothing helped me. I grew worse and was able to sit up only part of the time. I had lost all hope of ever being any better when someone gave me a Pe-ru-na book. The book described my case so truly that I began to take Pe-ru-na. After two and a half bottles I could eat without suffering and improved from then on. I took eight bottles and felt like a new person. That was fourteen years ago. So many diseases are due to catarrh that I think Pe-ru-na the greatest family medicine in the world."

For more than half a century Pe-ru-na has been doing just such work as this.

THE HUGABLE BEAR

Nothing very much had happened lately and Polly was wondering what she would do when down the street came the sound of a man singing.

"Ah-duddy-ung-duddy-ung-dung-day," was the way the song sounded to Polly.

She rushed out into the street, and turning down the next block she saw a man with a performing bear, and a crowd of people following.

Polly hurried after until she caught up with them. Many of her friends were there. In fact, almost all the children were following along, and a few grown-up people, too.

The bear stood on his hind legs while the man again sang the song.

"Ah-duddy-ung-duddy-ung-dung-day," and the bear danced slowly around with his paws up before him, just as though they were two hands, Polly thought.

Everyone gave the man pennies. Then the bear climbed a tree.

But the man seemed to want more than pennies.

"If anyone will give me fifty cents, I'll let him ride my bear."

No one seemed to want to accept the offer.

"He is muzzled, he will do no harm," the man said.

Polly longed to ride the bear. He was very big and brown and handsome. Polly thought it would be beautiful to ride on his back just as she had ridden on the back of the big Newfoundland dog when she was a little girl.

"If only I had fifty cents," she said aloud, "but I've only four cents."

"Four cents!" the man exclaimed. "Four cents to ride my bear! Such a chance—the chance of a lifetime and the kid says 'Four cents.'"

One of the grown-ups came up to Polly.

"I'll give you fifty cents to pay the man if you'll ride the bear."

Another grown-up had said:

"Don't let the child do such a thing. The bear might hug her and crush her to death."

But the first grown-up said:

"Oh, he looks too old and too sleepy to do any harm."

And before they could do any more talking the man who owned the bear

Polly Loved It.

had come forward with a fine bow and had said:

"The kind gentleman will pay the fifty cents so the kid can ride my bear."

"Oh yes, please let me," Polly shouted. All her friends were looking at her. They looked as though they thought she was very brave.

Polly was glad they thought she was brave. It was nice to be thought a heroine. But she knew she wasn't brave—because she wasn't in the least nervous.

She got on the bear's back and held onto his huge shaggy coat.

It was too slippery—too wabbly—to hold on this way, so Polly put her arm around the bear's neck.

With a sudden bound he had broken away from the man and was rushing down the street. No one had ever seen a bear go so quickly. But Polly loved it! She held on, talking to the bear all the time.

"Darling big bear, oh, you darling big bear," she said.

The bear turned into a back yard, through a garden and then walked right in the side gateway of Polly's own garden. The bear was going very slowly now, and Polly thought she would get off and walk beside him. It was so hard to hold on.

She she got off and walked beside the bear, through the garden, up the hill. She put her arm around the bear, and the bear seemed to like it. The people had been left behind some time before.

Suddenly Polly heard a frightened voice crying out to her:

"Polly, Polly, come here, run, my precious, run to mother."

It was her mother hurrying after her. Someone had just come with the news that Polly had gone off riding the bear, while everyone had chased after them, though they had missed seeing where they went at first.

Polly went back to her mother and the bear went back to his master.

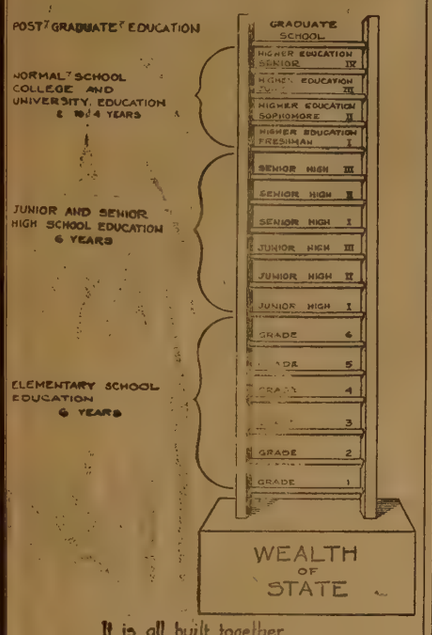
What a beautiful ride she had had. And the bear had been so hugable, though he hadn't hugged her.

"Promise me," her mother said later, "that you will never again ride any wild animals."

It was too bad mothers were nervous. Polly thought, but she promised her mother. Only she was very thankful to have had that one splendid ride.

Alabama's Educational Ladder

R. W. Cowart, Secretary Alabama Education Association



It is all built together.
One climbs rung by rung.
To be effective it must be sound in all its parts.
Every child has the right to climb to the top.
All the Wealth of the State should support it.

See Alabama's Educational Ladder! Study it. Get its full significance. It will appear in The Alabama School Journal for some time, because we want to get it thoroughly ingrained in our minds. We want it to be a part of our professional thinking, as we are engaged in our several tasks about some part of this ladder. Interpret it to your people. Let them feel and know the scheme of education as outlined for Alabama

There are some things about this ladder that we should know. It is all built together. There are no disjointed units. Elementary schools, junior high schools, normal schools and colleges are all designed to fit into one complete scheme of education for the youth of this state. Each is important to the other. Without the one the others could not be. Our higher institutions of learning supply the men and women who become our teachers, in all types of institutions; they supply our captains of industry, our business men, our leaders in agriculture, in manufacturing, in commerce, in professional life, in all things that convert the raw natural resources of our state into wealth for the support of life and our educational institutions. Even denominational colleges are included in this scheme of education. While they are not supported by public funds, they are supported almost wholly by the people of this state. If we did not have them, the young men and women who attend those institutions would flock to the state schools. Our high schools feed those higher institutions and they are in turn fed by the elementary schools. Without our high schools the large mass of men and women who carry on the business of the state would be deprived of that necessary training for successful participation in the affairs of life. Hundreds of occupations could be named where the equivalent of a high school education is necessary for the successful performance

Our elementary schools must meet the needs of the vast majority whom we, from experience, know will not seek an education beyond these grades. These grades cannot supply their own teachers. Stagnation would be the result. The institutions above must supply them. If the instruction given in elementary school is weak and in the high school will be weak because the foundation is not properly laid. Weakness in any part of our ladder will cause weakness in the whole. We are bound together in a manner such that the strength of the whole depends on the strength of one part.

We cannot say that one part is of greater importance than another any more than we could say that the tree was more important than its roots. Each gives life to the other. Cut the tree and the roots die; cut the roots and the tree dies.

In an educational system we cannot starve one part of the system to feed the other without doing a great deal of damage to the whole. If the support of the lower schools were cut down to provide support for the higher institutions of learning, the effort at economy would be ineffectual, for then to those higher institutions would come weak products of the lower schools, unprepared for the work of higher education. These institutions could not then meet the object of their existence, because they would be compelled to do the work of the lower schools, which is essential before advanced work can be undertaken.

Our higher institutions cannot be starved to supply funds for our lower schools for many reasons. First, our high schools are turning out, and will continue to turn out, increasing thousands of boys and girls seeking a higher education. Their needs must be met, or college work reduced to a veneer and a sham. We cannot say to them, "You cannot enter here; we pick our students." Who is to be picked? Your boy or mine? If one has done the work do to the doors of college and seeks to enter there, a democratic country and a democratic state cannot deny him admittance. Those who would propose such a method of reducing the cost of higher education are not the friends of all mankind and not believers in a democratic government. Second, we could not starve them to support the so-called "common schools" because to do so would weaken the college product which returns to teach in the lower schools. We would not gain anything by this but loss. Third, we could not afford to cut down the number, nor reduce the quality of training of the men and women who are to be our leaders in converting our potential wealth into realth wealth. College men and women are in demand for the success, happiness and prosperity of the whole people.

Thus we see that the whole must move together. Our financing scheme must take care of the whole. So long as our people are demanding an education for their children and so long as an education is essential to the successful participation of the individual in the affairs of this life, we must maintain all our schools adequately to meet these demands.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK HAS BEEN SET FOR OCTOBER 7-10

Since it is to his home that every man instinctively goes in quest of absolute safety there is grim irony, more than a little, in the revelation that somebody's dwelling suffers attack by fire every three minutes, approximately that the average yearly destruction of homes approaches 66 million. Plainly, safety that he seeks is not to be found around the average American hearth.

It appears from the published record that four of six leading causes of fires in the home are defective chimneys and flue; sparks on roofs; stoves, furnaces, boilers, can be prevented.

The August issue of Safeguarding America Against Fire presents complete plan for community observance of national fire prevention week. The national board of fire underwriters, New York, stands ready to do everything within its power to facilitate the campaign and will welcome communications from fire chiefs, local agents, municipal officials, school authorities, the membership of business organizations and others who will patricipate in the event.

Surely a people virile and far-sighted enough to found a nation can muster sufficient intelligence and strength of will preserve it from the wasting of fire-starting with their homes.

BEST PLACE TO PLANT FIGS

No farm or home in the lower two thirds of the South where there is a limited amount of space available, should raise a few figs. This delicious fruit is comparatively easy to grow, provided a few precautions are taken.

The nematode, which is a small worm like insect, infests the soil in many sections of the South and seems to especially like the fig tree roots. There fore as far as possible, avoid planting figs or any other fruit tree on soil that is heavily inflested with this pest.

Usually the deep sandy soils of the South are more heavily infested with nematodes than are th heavier clay soils and while the fig will grow well on these sandy soils, yet in order to avoid this nematode trouble it is advisable wherever possible, to select a soil that is not so sandy, and if possible has a clay subsoil near the top.

Where one is planting just a few fig trees about the house for home use, it is a good ida to set them close to the house or barn. It is a surface feeder, the roots being very near the top of the ground and therefore when planted near the rear of the house or near some of the outbuildings where there is moisture, these roots will be found most abundant under the house or outbuilding, and rarely if ever are nematodes found in soil under houses. Therefore when planting just a few trees, one can often avoid damage by this pest, by planting close to a house or outbuilding

While the fig likes much moisture yet it will not do well on a poorly drained, wet and cold soil It likes warmth and sunshine and in planting next to buildings, put on the south side if possible

In the southeast the celestial and Brown Turkey are the two leading varieties. In Texas, the Magnolia is the leader, although the Celestial also does well there.

Feed the fig trees well. If stable manure is available, scatter it around them in the winter. If not, use commercial fertilizer in the spring about the time growth starts. Like other fruit trees, good attention in the way of giving an abundance of plant food will pay handsome returns.

Miss Beverly Hester left during last week to spend some time in New York City.

Miss Hester will continue the study of music and will likely find some time for professional accompanying.

Mrs. Marcus Polk and children of friends at that time predicted an enviable career for the child.

Miss Hester was graduated from our city and high schools and received her certificate for completion of the music course from our high school.

Miss Hester completed the prescribed music and literary courses of Judson college Marion and later continued to be more atively engaged in bringing [illegible] to pass in the music City.

Teaching music in several schools of Birmingham, Miss Hester summond the courage to pursue the higher course in music under guidance of local artists. The congregation of the Independent Presbyterian appreciated their magnificent pipe organ the more on account of the inspirations of Miss Hester

Many friends over the entire state are entertaining the best wishes for Chilton county artist and Clantonians are fully expectant that she will certainly do her part in putting Clanton on the map of the world. Chiltoncounty folks wish Miss Beverly Hester—Bon voyage over life's treacherous seas.

Misses Elizabeth Duncan and Alma Robinson were registered as students in that time honored institution of leaving.

LITTLE MISS DOROTHY NELL JONES HAS A BANK ACCOUNT.

Little Miss Dorothy Nell Jones, one year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Jones has a bank account.

The habit of thrift on the part of her parents may revert to the child's good fortune later in life.

One day during last week Mrs. Jones happily displayed a box full of brownies, beside other money given to the child and that which her mother was preparing to deposit in a local bank to Doroty Nell's credit.

Dorothy Nell is a winsome lassie; she laughs and coos like other children and is unmindful of the fact that se is unlik the majority of other little ones in one particular: Dorthoy Nell has a bank account

Mr. J. A. Duncan, a local taxi man was badly hurt in an automobile accident near Montgomery last week. Mr. Duncan had several parties in the car on his way to Montgomery. In passing a car it is not known whether the cars hit or whether the Duncan car got too far out of the road and over at the side of the road. Mr. Duncan was badly lacerated about the face and neck, and it was thought at first he was dangerously hurt. The passing car made no halt and it is not known who it was. Outside of a good shaking up the other people in the car were not hurt.

RIGHT ATTENTION TO MOLTING HENS

One of two things should be done with hens around molting time, says a raiser in an exchange. One is to let the older hens go before they fairly get to the time for shedding their feathers. They have now laid out their litter and must have some time to get through their "sick" period, during which they bring in nothing and keep eating. Every hen that is getting along in years should walk the plank, right now, unless she is specially valuable as a breeder. If we would sort our flocks over and do this early, we would be a good deal better off at the end of the season.

For the younger birds a different course must be followed. The one great thing is to get the hens back to laying after the molt as soon as we can, and have them in good physical condition. For that reason our treatment must not be so radical, as some advise, but natural and steady. If you watch a molting hen you will see that she is inclined to be weak and less vigorous than formerly. If she is not really sick, still she is "under the weather." This is because of the drain while losing the old plumage and growing a new crop of feathers.

Begin the treatment by cutting down on the food, especially the heavy, hearty food, for a few days. Meanwhile give the hens all possible chance to roam around at will. It may take some coaxing to get them to do this, but it is better for them than to dump about in the houses. The more the hen stirs around, the healthier she will be.

About the same ration may be given during the period of molting that is used when the hen is laying eggs regularly. But as the molt goes on, it is a good plan to add some oil meal, which enters into feather construction quite largely. Ten per cent of oil meal in a mash mixture, increasing to twice that, will do nicely. Watch the droppings and act accordingly. Don't give drugs; they are dangerous and may lead to trouble. Sunflower seeds are better than medicine. Be kind and patient with the molting birds.

Market Demands Plump, Well-Fattened Turkeys

The market demands plump, well-fattened turkeys and prime birds bring the best prices. In order to get the benefit of this extra price it is necessary that the turkeys intended for market be fattened by generous feeding for a period of three weeks to a month before marketing them. Experiments with confining turkeys at fattening time have not proven very satisfactory. By feeding the flock on good, sound, preferably old, corn sparingly at first and gradually increasing the amount until the birds are getting all they will eat along with all of the sour milk or buttermilk the birds will drink, it will be found that the "finish" put on, as well as the weight added, will more than pay for the extra effort required.

Before deciding upon which birds are to be selected for fattening, select and mark those that are to be kept for breeding stock. To sell the biggest and best is sure to result in a falling off in the vigor of the flock and consequent losses.

Tell Sex of Guineas

The male and the female guineas fowls differ so little in appearance that many persons have considerable difficulty in making a distinction. Usually the males can be distinguished by their larger helmet (comb) and wattles, also by a coarser head; but to be positive one should listen to the cry made by each bird. That of the female resembles "buckwheat, buckwheat," and is decidedly different from the one-syllable shriek of the male.

Sanitation Plays Important Part

Despite Progress Already Made There Is Room for Improvement.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Though the influence of sanitary surroundings in preventing disease is widely recognized, the very direct part it plays is illustrated almost daily in federal veterinary activities. One of the most important lines of this work is the eradication of tuberculosis from live stock. Owing to the systematic manner in which the testing is conducted, together with retests of infected herds, definite records now take the place of casual observations.

In one herd tested annually for a period of three years, each test disclosed at least two tuberculous animals. The premises and stable were in such condition that thorough disinfection was virtually impossible, and rather than improve conditions the owner finally quit the dairy business. In contrast to this experience are scores of cases in which infected herds, kept in sanitary barns, are soon freed of tuberculosis and kept so for long periods.

Striking Example.

One of the most striking examples reported to the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, was that of an Eastern dairyman who had an excellent herd which he kept in a very old dank barn. The herd numbered between 30 and 40 animals, mostly pure bred, and the owner paid several thousand dollars apiece for some of his sires. This was some years ago when public enlightenment concerning tuberculosis was just beginning. Frequent deaths occurred in the herd and finally the dairyman decided to have his cattle tuberculin tested. The first test showed a large proportion of reactors, and later tests took still more, indicating that infection was still on the premises. Ultimately his herd, representing years of breeding work and a large investment, was practically wiped out. The cost of a few good cows used in the construction of a modern, sanitary barn would have protected the large investment in the herd and prevented the inroads of the disease.

So important is the sanitary condition under which cattle are kept, with reintion to their health, that the United States Department of Agriculture now pays federal indemnity for tuberculous stock only after the premises have been properly disinfected. This is a new ruling based on an interpretation of federal laws and regulations and on many of the state laws. A thorough clean-up is necessary, of course, before disinfection can be properly performed.

The ruling is expected to be helpful in reducing the number of reactors found on retests of infected herds. Unless disinfection is promptly and thoroughly done following the removal of tuberculous cattle from a farm, there is serious danger of continued lurking infection which may mean reactors to pay for at a later time. Such a practice is contrary to good business methods and the program of federal economy.

Room for Improvement.

Practical live stock sanitation includes such matters as good drainage, removal of manure at frequent intervals, foundations of concrete or other material that does not rot or harbor infection, good light and ventilation, and smooth walls, floors and ceilings that can be easily cleaned and disinfected. The trend of progress is plainly in the direction of better care and housing of farm live stock, since sanitation pays both in a business way and from a health standpoint. But in spite of the excellent progress already made, department officials point out that there is abundant opportunity for more attention to this important subject.

Commercial Fertilizer Helps to Keep Up Humus

If you are short of stable manure and are using vegetable refuse of various kinds, and green manure, to keep up the humus supply in your soil, you will need a commercial fertilizer.

A 5-10-5 fertilizer is recommended. It should be used at the rate of a pound to every 30 square feet. If you cannot get the above formula, get a 4-8-4 or some other high in the middle and lower at the ends.

The numbers, which sound like a football signal, refer, in alphabetical order, to the percentage of fertilizing material—ammonia, phosphoric acid, and potash.

Where poultry manure is available, it may be used on the garden at the rate of a pound to 10 square feet. Acid phosphate at the rate of a pound to 50 square feet helps to balance it.

Wood ashes are good fertilizer but coal ashes are worthless except to loosen heavy soil. They should be sifted before being used for that purpose.

Nitrogen in Oak Leaves

Oak leaves contain but a little less nitrogen than stable manure, but this nitrogen is not very available, and the leaves are quite sour. They should be mixed with lime and well worked over. Then a combination of three parts by weight of fine bone and one part of muriate of potash mixed with the leaves will give a fair substitute for manure. If you have but a few tomato plants use one of the mixed goods. If the acreage is large it may pay to buy the chemicals and mix at home.

Look Into Value of Unknown Materials

Farmer Should Go Slow Before Buying Marl.

"Farmers should go slow and compare prices before investing in 'lime marl' and other questionable values in lime and fertilizers," says the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca.

During the past few months salesmen have been offering farmers "lime marl" at prices approximately $12 a ton, and claims have been made that it is at least half again as good as limestone.

Marl is unsolidified limestone. The marl and limestone both contain lime in the same chemical form; both are of satisfactory fineness; both correct soil acidity, and make soil conditions favorable for growing red clover.

This marl, says the college, is a good liming material when sold at a fair price, as analyses show it to have practically the same amount of calcium carbonate as good limestones, with practically no difference in "availability." Experiments at Cornell show marl, on the whole, to be slightly less valuable than a good, fine limestone.

Difference in price must be the deciding factor in choosing between the two products, say soils men, and compared on that basis, the marl loses in one locality the marl costs $12 a ton delivered, when good limestone costs $5 to $7 a ton delivered to the same station.

The local farm bureau or the agronomy department of the State College of Agriculture at Ithaca is always ready to help farmers on soil, fertilizer, and lime problems.

Fattening Turkeys for Market Requires Grain

The marketing season for turkeys is very short. The best market usually runs from the middle of November to the latter part of December.

Turkeys should be started by feeding night and morning, just enough feed at a time so that they will go away still a little hungry. The feed may be gradually increased in quantity until they are given all they will clean up three times a day during the week before they are to be marketed.

A good feed, and one that most turkey feeders find satisfactory, is equal parts of wheat and oats during the first part of the fattening season, gradually changing to corn as the weather becomes cooler. It is a common mistake made by most raisers to begin feeding about November 1 with corn only. But since no preliminary feeding has made the birds accustomed to such heavy feeding, scours often result, especially if new corn is used. Old corn, which is free from mustiness, is a much better feed than new corn.

The wild turkeys put themselves in prime condition on a diet of nuts and acorns, and where these feeds are available, as they frequently are, they may be used. Best results, however, are obtained when a grain ration of oats, wheat and corn is fed.

Flushing Ewes Previous to Breeding Is Favored

As breeding time approaches for the ewe flock it is well to consider the practice of "flushing." This consists simply in increasing the feed to a point sufficient to insure liberal gains in weight throughout the breeding season. It matters not whether the increase be fresh, rich pasturage, or a light grain ration, the important point is that they be gaining, and in a normal, healthy condition. The advantages of putting the ewes in vigorous condition before mating—"flushing," as it is commonly termed—are so well recognized by successful shepherds that they cannot be ignored. It invariably results in a larger and more vigorous lamb crop. It may safely be depended upon to increase the percentage of twins born at least 10 per cent and the number of lambs raised 20 per cent or better. This means pretty good returns on a little extra feed. Experience shows that the ewes should not be in high flesh, but gaining. This practice of "flushing" will not give so satisfactory results with ewes that are in high flesh to start with, as with those that are in thin or moderate condition.

MAKE VINEGAR OF UNEXCELLED QUALITY

Apples Are Commonly Used for Making Vinegar.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many fruit juices are well suited to vinegar making as they contain sugar in the proper proportion and other necessary or desirable substances, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Vinegar is the result of two distinct fermentation processes—an alcoholic fermentation, followed by an acetic fermentation.

Apples are most commonly used in the United States, but vinegar of unexcelled quality can be made from grapes, and very acceptable vinegar is made from oranges, peaches, persimmons, pears, berries and watermelons. Vinegar made from red raspberries will retain indefinitely the odor and flavor of the fruit, which makes it desirable for flavoring foods and beverages.

Much Material Wasted.

Fruit enough to make all the year's supply of vinegar is wasted in many homes. Surplus or inferior grades of fruit not desired for immediate use or for canning may often be turned into a useful product at a merely nominal cost. The best receptacles for making vinegar in the home are stone jars of three to six-gallon capacity. These should have straight sides and open tops and should be provided with covers. With most fruits used it is impossible to separate the juice from the pulp before the alcoholic fermentation has taken place, so a yeast inoculation is made in a mash of the fruit. The juice only may be used if it can be extracted easily. The following method, which calls for peaches, may be used, with slight variations, for any fruits.

Ripe fruit is selected. Overripe fruit may be used if decayed portions are removed. Enough peaches are used to fill a four-gallon jar about two-thirds full after they have been cut in two and crushed with a pointo masher. The stones need not be removed. Mix a cake of compressed yeast with a small portion of the juice and add it to the mash. Cover the jar with a double layer of cheesecloth to keep out insects, and a cover to exclude light. Stir the mash daily. In four to six days alcoholic fermentation will be complete.

The juice is then separated from the mash by straining it through a cheesecloth, or using a hand press at the last. Return the juice to the jar with a starter in the form of vinegar. Use one part of the vinegar to four parts of juice. Cover as before. Within a few days a thin coating or film will appear on the surface. This "mother of vinegar," which is composed almost entirely of acetic bacteria, is essential for a successful fermentation. Great care, therefore, should be taken not to cause it to fall by stirring or agitation.

To Determine Acidity.

During the acetic fermentation frequent tests should be made to determine the increase in acidity. As soon as this has reached its maximum the vinegar is filtered and bottled. Canton flannel is a good material for filtering vinegar.

The strength of the vinegar can be determined roughly by tasting. When the vinegar reaches a point where it is comparable in taste to that of a good, strong vinegar, it may be regarded as complete. For accurate results a vinegar tester, in which the strength of the vinegar is determined by the volume of gas given off when bicarbonate of soda (baking soda) is treated with a measured quantity of the vinegar to be tested, should be used Farmers' Bulletin 1424 on "Making Vinegar in the Home and on the Farm," gives a full description of this apparatus.

PIECE THAT DON'T SPOIL APPETITE

Child Is Fortunate Who Has Been Brought Up to Like Milk.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Is your child hungry between meals or has she merely formed the habit of eating at all hours? It is easy to find the answer to this question by checking up on the kind of food she wants between meals or by observing whether or not she eats a full meal at the table without fussing. A rapidly growing child who is very active may well have food in the middle of the forenoon and afternoon if it does not dull the appetite for regular meals, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. But the patronage of the ice-cream-cone vendor and the everlasting munching of candy, half-ripe bananas and pickles forms a vicious habit to which American children are particularly addicted. The nickels given to children for concentrated sweets might better be thrown away; they ruin appetite, digestion, disposition and good teeth. That child is fortunate who has been brought up to enjoy without question a glass of milk and a simple bread-and-butter sandwich while the neighbor's children are eating all-day suckers. An apple, orange or other fruit in season or a glass of cool fruit juice is especially desirable because it provides a part of the vitamin and mineral content of the diet needed for proper growth and good health.

Orange Juice and Bread and Butter.

French Fried Onion Has Very Mild, Sweet Flavor

French fried onions have a very mild, sweet flavor. They may be served hot or cold, and like potato chips, they may be kept for several days. If they are to be used when cold they should be fried in oil, since lard or fat which is solid at room temperature will cause them to look cloudy when no longer hot enough to keep the fat melted.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for making them:

French Fried Onions.

Shave the onions crosswise into very thin slices and separate the rings from each other. Dip these rings into the batter given below, place the dipped onions in a frying basket, keeping the rings well separated, drain thoroughly, and fry in deep fat at 400 degrees Fahrenheit until crisp and browned. Drain on soft paper, salt if necessary, and serve.

Thin Fritter Batter.

1 cup milk	1 cup flour
1 or 2 eggs	½ teaspoon salt

Beat salt and eggs well together, adding the flour and milk gradually and continuing to beat. This is a pop-over batter, and should be of the consistency of cream. The amount given should be sufficient for frying from one to two pounds of onions of medium size.

Fruits and Vegetables Prevent Liver Troubles

Spinach, onions, rhubarb and other foods are sometimes said to be especially good for the liver, because they will "stir it up." It is a common belief that many ills are due to a sluggish liver and that these ills can be overcome by eating certain foods. The apparent beneficial effect of these foods is probably due to the fact that they are mildly laxative, and nutrition specialists now believe that many of the ills ascribed to a disordered liver are really due to intestinal disturbances. Most of these ills would be avoided if the diet were well chosen and if various health habits were established which would do away with constipation. The United States Department of Agriculture has published much information on the rational diet and how to choose it. Such facts can be found, for example, in Farmers' Bulletin 1313, entitled "Good Proportions in the Diet," which describes the five food groups, and recommends that the diet include some food from each group every day, the proportion indicated. When vegetables and fruits occupy so important place in the diet, many of the supposed liver troubles disappear.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 5. CLANTON ALABAMA, THURSDAY, OCT. 8, 1925. NUMBER 4

EX-STATE SENATOR IC ABDUCTED AND LASHED BY GANG

Prominent Clanton Attorney Taken To Woods And Whipped

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 3.—Special.—Three unmasked men overpowered T. A Curry, prominent attorney here and former state senator from this district, while he was seated on his own porch, whisked him away to a woods and, two other men who joined them, severely flogged him Sept. 18, according to Mr. Curry's story to a representative of The Birmingham News Saturday.

Secrecy had shrouded the affair, Mr. Curry having been threatened by the men with another flogging if he disclosed it, he said. Curry laid the blame to the Ku Klux Klan, declaring he had been bitter in his opposition to it.

It was admitted at the office of Sheriff T. J. Littlejohn that the flogging had taken place.

"We are working on the case," said the sheriff. He would not disclose, however, if warrants had been sworn out by Curry and refused to discuss the matter further.

Here is Curry's own story of the flogging, as related Saturday to The News representative:

Friday evening, Sept. 18, about 9 o'clock, I was seated on my porch when three men came up in a car. One of them came up on the porch and introduced himself at "Mr. Zeigler." As he did he called to the other men, 'Grab him.'

I was put in the back seat of the car and one of the men sat partly on me. I got my right hand free, took my knife and cut one of them across the arm. I cut another one across the throat twice.

They partially blinded me by putting their hands over my eyes, and I didn't know in which direction they were taking me.

Two Men Wield Lash

"They drove around for about an hour, it seemed, when I noticed another car following. Then it seemed for about three hours, when both cars stopped somewhere and I was taken a short distance from the road. 'One of them asked, 'Shall we kick him down there or tote him?'

"And the answer was, 'We'll tote him.'

"They threw me down on the ground and one of them took a leather strap and gave me 12 or 15 licks. Another one did the same.

"I asked them what it all meant and one of them said, 'We'll teach you not to run off your wife.'

"They instructed me how to get home and told me not to look back. They said not to tell what had happened and said if I did, another flogging was ready for me.

"I came to the highway, about a quarter of a mile from the scene, and hailed an automobile that was coming along.

"The man who took me to the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway near Lomax, two miles from Clanton, walked home, arriving there after midnight."

Mr. Curry admitted he and his wife separated eight years ago and had separated again a short time before the flogging, he said.

Mr. Curry said there were five in the group that administered the flogging, the three who carried him in their car and the two in the car that followed.

Mr. Curry is between 50 and 60 years old and has been a prominent attorney here for a number of years. He served as state senator about 10 years ago.

UNIVERSITY HI LOSES HARD FIGHT TO CHILTON COUNTY

Clanton, Ala., Oct 3. Special.— University High lost to Chilton County High here Friday afternoon in a stubbornly fought battle in a drizzling rain, 12 to 0. The Gamecocks of Birmingham put up a great fighting defense but were unable to get their offense started against the locals, who outweighed the mby a wide margin.

Hammonds rammed the first touchdown over in first period, while Cox plowed through the University line for one yard and touchdown on the fourth down of another march toward the goal line in the third quarter. Most of the game was played near the middle of the field.

The Gamecocks showed well against their heavier opponents, who averaged well over 175 pounds to the man. Chilton has been going good, having held Sidney Lanier to a 6 to 0 decision last week, this touchdown coming on a forward pass and fumble which the Lanier converted into a touchdown.

Beadle, charterback, was the big star of the backfield for Clanton, the big field general running the team in fine style and gaining in fine style. Hammonds and Cox also stood out. Mann, tackle, played a great game in the line for Chilton, as did the entire forward wall of the locals.

Brasfield, Reilly and McNally were the statellites of the Gamecocks's play. Brasfield's offensive and defensive work stood out, as did the play of Reilly on the defense. Capt. Wood, Douglas and Matthews also shone to advantage. McNally's play at tackle and end was a bright feature Chilton has the best team in their history, and should make a fine record this year.

THE WIDOWS OF THE CONFEDERACY—WHAT OF THEF?

Editor The Advertiser:

Much has been said and sung of the old soldiers of the Confederacy, and many honors paid them for their bravely fought battle achievements at the cost of empty sleeves, wooden legs and many have, also, received their share of homage for their devotion to the "Lost Cause," shown in donning the homespun dress, palmetto hat and home-knit stockings. And now, as advancing Time has reduced these remaining representatives to a very small number, our legislature of the State of Alabama has gallantly come to the front in behalf of the old soldiers, and increased their pension allowance to about four times as much as they have been receiving in the past. Noble legislative body of Alabamians! Three cheers for the compliment paid our old heroes of the Confederacy!

But let us take a peep for a moment at the old widows of the Cause. Where are they who have "tarried by the stuff" while the battles were fought and sacrificing husbands, and home comforts, bravely met the emergency at the spinning wheel, the loom and the wash-tubs; and some of them even in the corn fields behind the plow. Why should the American legislature overlook her rights, and fail to pay her a compliment by an increase of pension allowance.

Does not the Old Book say that they who "tarried by the stuff" should share equally with those tho went out to battle? And where are the honors paid her? It is true she is esteemed a weaker vessel, but the Old Book says again, that even more honor should be paid to the weaker vessel. Then why should our Christian government set her aside as a heathen nation would—leaving her to yick up the scraps from a scantily supplied pantry furnished by the meagre pension allowance of a fraction over six dollars a month? Shame upon the legislature of Alabama, that it should so forget these silven-haired old heroines, who, with tottering feet, are nearing the end of their pilgrimage here, whose pathway has not by any means been strewn with roses, nor their heads crowned with laurels.—Advertiser.

EXTRA SESSION IS URGED ON BRANDON

Rogers Tells Governor State's Highway Funds Will Be Out In 1926

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 3.—Special.—Chairman John A. Rogers of the state highway commission, has recommended to Gov W W Brandon that the chief executive call an extra session of the legislature to submit to the voters a proposed amendment to the constitution authorizing issuance and sale of $75,000,000 of bonds to provide additional funds for continuation of the building of highways and bridges in Alabama.

The recommendation is contained in a letter from Chairman Rogers to Gov. Brandon under date of Sept. 29, submitting in detail the activities of the state highway department since its organization in 1911. Stating that the time has long passed to argue the benefits of good roads, Chairman Rogers says also: "I do not believe that you, as governor of Alabama, could perform a greater service to your state than to call the legislature in extra session and recommend that it submit to the voters this amendment to the constitution." The text of the proposed amendment is thereafter set out, section by section.

All of the $25.000.000 of orad funds authorized by the bond issue amendment already adopted, Mr. Rogers states, will be expended in 1926 before the expiration of Gov. Brandon's term of office. He says also that it will take not less than $75,000.000 to give Alabama "anything like an adequate system of road and bridges.

LOOK BEFORE YOU CROSS

Drivers of automobiles should be doubly cautious in crossing railroad tracks where the highway parallels the railroad.

No railroad crossing should be crossed without looking in both directions and it is particularly necessary to safety that this be done when crossing where railroad and highway parallel each other.

Carelessness on the part of the driver at such crossings is attended by great danger.

Bear in mind that gears should not be shifted on or near the track. Many machines stall when shifting gears. If necessary to shift gears do so not less than 75 feet from track, then look in both directions before crossing.

A railroad crossing is dangerous only when made so by careless driving. No prodent person would run over a red light in the highway for it is there as a warning, yet motorists frequently not only run over a crossing flagman and breaw down crossing gates warning them of an approaching train, but with scarcely less frequency run into a train from on to five cars back of the engine, and then ask taxpayers to tax them-elves for grade changes to eliminate the danger, when the danger is not in the crossing but in te driver.

SURTAgES AND THE EXEMPTS

"Income tax reports show that many of our wealthiest people pay little or nothing to the government. That is because in a majority of instances, the income is derived from investments in tax-exempt securities, such as those issued by states, districts and cities which cannot be taxed without constitutional amendment. There are from twelve to fifteen billions of such securities issued, mostly in the hands of wealthy people.

"These securities bear lower interest than industrial or other investments, but many times the loss in interest is saved in income taxation, which through surtaxes, takes as high as half the income. As a conequence, capital that should be invested in industry and developement is withdrawn for exempt securities.

"In this way the high surtax defeats its purpose for the government is by it, losing the revenue it would otherwise have which would reduce taxation. The direct effect of cinching the rich has been to scatter and conseal wealth, with the result that tere are fewer big taxpayers, each year, despite the increase in wealth.

We believe the farmers could vrow a good deal more wheat and make it a paying crop if they would prepare their lands and fertilize it as they do their cotton.

LET FARMERS ALONE

Roundly scoring the "legislative drama which has turned our heads and depleted out pocketbooks," in a message to visitors to the grange community exhibit recently held at Snohomish, Wash., Governor Roland H. Hartley declared that the greatest factor to be taken into consideration by the farmer is to "get out of his back and leave him free to about his unhampered by an army of regulators, investigators, inspectors, advisers and dictators."

The farmer Governor Hartley declared, is no different in his relation to the state than any other citizen, since the state is the product of the cooperative effort of all citizens, regardless of vocation or profession. Hedepolred any tendency toward "group government." Participation in governmental affairs is as much the business of the farmer as his purely agricultural pursuits, Governor Hartley pointed out, as all government activity vitally affects the farmer.

ROAD MATERIAL TESTS ON LINCOLN HIGHWAY

Three thousand lineal feet of the Lincoln highway immediately west of South Bend, Indiana, is to be used for the first real test of road building materials on this great national thoroughfare. Equal sections each of asphalt concrete, sheet asphalt emulsified asphalt, Kentucky rock asphalt, penetration macadam and reinforced concrete will be laid down. Careful check will be made as to the wearing quality of the different materials.

Contracts have been awarded as follows: 500 feet each of asphalt concrete and sheet asphalt at $1.43 and $1.57 per square yard respectively; 500 feet of emulsified asphalt at $1.15 a square yard, 500 feet each of Kentucky rock asphalt and penetration macadam at $1.40 and $1.10 per square yard respectively; 500 feet of reinforced concrete at $2.15 a square yard.

Taxpayers demand a road that will give a maximum amount of wear for a reasoanble expense, as there are tens of thousands o fmiles of road awaiting paving in this nation.

Dairy Cow Efficient Food Producer

Properly built stalls cut down work and bacteria.

With increasing rentals and values of farm lands, dairy farming is rapidly replacing other types of live stock farming. A dairy cow producing 8,000 pounds of milk a year furnishes 1,000 pounds of dry matter, all of which is edible and digestible. A two year old steer weighing between 1,200 and 1,300 pounds furnishes about 550 pounds of dry matter, not all of which can be used for food. In other words a fairly good producing dairy cow furnishes twice as much edible dry matter in one year as a good two year old steer when he is killed for meat. A cow can be kept for additional years of service, while to replace the steer, another animal must be fed for a period of two years.

The United States consumption of milk per capita has increased from 42 gallons of whole milk in 1919 to more than 54 gallons in 1925.

With increasing use of milk as a food has come an increasing knowledge of the proper care of milk on the farm. Because odors from foods and animals in the cow stable are easily taken up by milk, injuring its flavor, they must not come in contact with the milk. Removal of the milk from the stable as soon as possible reduces the amount of dust and dirt entering it and keeps down the bacterial growth in the milk.

Bacteria increase rapidly in warm milk causing it to sour quickly. Removal of the animal heat from freshly drawn milk by lowering the temperature to that of cold well water (approximately 50° F.), greatly aids in preventing bacterial growth. A well drained, well ventilated milk house, separate from the stable, is also very helpful.

Cleanliness in the stable is vitally necessary. The well plank floor should be just [illegible] for the cow to stand [illegible] to keep [illegible] clean. The [illegible] should be wide and deep. A good gutter is 16 inches to 18 inches in width and 9 or 10 inches below the platform. Bedding should be clean and plenteous.

Long hair on the flanks, udders and tail above the switch of the dairy cow should be removed at regular intervals. Removing this long hair removes the clinging places of dirt which otherwise will fall into the milk pail in quantities. Keeping the hair short on these parts of the cow permits cleaning in much less time and more thoroughly. Brushing should never be neglected. It removes loose particles sticking to the body. When one hour is short, wiping the udders with a damp cloth just before milking, is an easy and important aid in securing clean milk.

It is generally recognized that most of the [illegible] getting in milk, finds its source in dirt clinging to the cow and dropping into the pail during milking time. Simple precautions will practically eliminate this source of bacterial growth and dairymen find themselves well repaid for the little time necessary in taking such precautions.

AN OPPORTUNITY to become associated with

The Most Conspicuous Success in the Motor Car Field

During the past twelve months the Nash Motor Company made records unequalled in the motor industry, and Nash dealers enjoyed extraordinary prosperity. Yet the 1925 statistics represent only a continuation of an uninterrupted eight year period of high earnings made by the Nash Motor Company and its dealers. The whole history of the Nash organization shows that year after year, those associated with Mr. Nash have been among the foremost money makers in the automobile business.

Today, to the right man, or group of men, the opportunity is given to secure a perpetual association with this conspicuous success. The franchise does not cost a cent. The stock investment required is extremely limited and is absolutely safeguarded.

The profit possibilities are remarkable. Behind the man who secures this valuable connection all of the resources of the Nash organization will be solidly placed.

The millions of dollars that have been, and are now being so judiciously invested in advertising will give him a wealth of Sales opportunities. The reputation of C. W. Nash as America's foremost motor car manufacturer will lend its stabilizing effect to the new business. From the start the local dealer will be assured of soundness, permanence, and profits.

There is available financial assistance to parties who can properly qualify from a well and nationally known finance company, which assistance renders possible maximum expansion of sales and more efficiency in collections.

In addition to fullest cooperation from the factory, the local Nash dealer will be given the special cooperation of the Martin-Nash Motor Company of Atlanta, Southeastern Distributors for the Nash. Special Sales Representatives will work with him in organizing his territory and following up his prospects. Service Representatives will assist in the installation of short cuts in shop practice. Further than this the Martin-Nash Motor Company will offer an unusually liberal arrangement with regard to sharing the local advertising expense. Thus, double backing and cooperation, with a line of cars of unsurpassed quality and popularity combine to create an opportunity that will surely spell success for the man selected.

We believe this is an extraordinary business opportunity and one which can be accepted with confidence of early and ever-increasing profits. Come to Atlanta or Jacksonville. Wire or phone either office. A representative will bring all the facts to you.

SUCH GOOD THINGS

Pears are a fruit that one may indulge in to the limit. They are especially good for desserts. Try the following: Remove the blossom end of half a dozen pears after washing well. Leave the stems also. Put to bake in a deep baking dish with brown sugar—half a cupful—the juice and grated rind of a lemon, half a cupful of water, three tablespoonfuls of butter. Baste and bake until the pears are well browned and tender. Serve with the sauce from the pan, with a little cream if needed.

Pears With Raspberries.—Cook fresh pears, or the whole canned ones may be used, fill the centers with chopped candied cherries and add a cupful of sugar sirup. When serving cover each pear with raspberries which have been put through a sieve to remove the seeds. Cover with whipped cream and serve with cherries as a garnish.

Drop Nut Cakes.—Take a cupful each of sugar and shortening, four tablespoonfuls of sour milk, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two eggs, cinnamon and cloves to taste; add one cupful each of nuts and raisins and flour to make a drop batter. Drop on baking sheets and bake in a moderate oven.

Fruit Juice Pie—Take two and one-half tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, add one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of butter, a pinch of salt and the yolks of two eggs. Cook all together, adding the whites well beaten for a meringue. Pour into a baked crust and brown the pie in a moderate oven.

Bird's Nest Pudding.—Any fruit such as sliced peaches, pears or apricots may be used, but sliced apples are especially good. Fill a small pie plate and cover with a rich biscuit dough. Bake and turn upside down on a large plate. Spread with butter, sprinkle generously with sugar and grated nutmeg. One may use cinnamon or any flavoring liked. Cut into pie-shaped pieces and serve. This dessert needs no sauce if plenty of butter and sugar are used.

Nut Cutlets.—Have ready half a cupful of chopped nuts, walnuts, almonds and brazil nuts; add to them a cupful of bread crumbs and a cupful of mashed potatoes, with a little chopped onion and parsley; beat two eggs, mix with other ingredients, add salt, pepper, and form into balls or cakes. Dip into beaten egg and crumbs and fry a golden brown.

Cabbage Salad.—Chop two cupfuls of cabbage very fine, add one cupful of rolled peanuts, crisp and fresh. Roll with a rolling pin on the molding board until like coarse crumbs. Add any highly seasoned salad dressing and serve.

TASTY FOODS

Kohl-rabi is not well enough appreciated as a dainty vegetable. When tender and not overgrown they are as delightful when cooked as the finest cauliflower. Peel off the thin outer coat and cut into thin slices, going round and round the vegetable. If any part seems tough or fibrous discard it, cover with as little water as possible to cook it and do not drain; add a little milk and butter and flour well blended with salt and pepper. Cream will be more delicious but prepared in this manner with plenty of butter it is a dainty dish.

When there is some chicken, but not enough to serve again, left over, take some of the chicken gravy, add more milk, and if there is any tried-out chicken fat thicken it with flour and add to the gravy; if not use butter. Shred the chicken after removing it from the bones and add to the gravy. Steam until soft and thoroughly hot as many slices of bread as will be needed, butter them and pour over the hot chicken gravy. If some pork chops or roast is at hand the meat may be added to extend the chicken or veal is even better.

Roast Hamburg Steak.—To one and one-half pounds of hamburg steak add two slices of salt pork finely chopped, one-half cupful of bread crumbs, one egg, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt. Shape into a loaf, dredge with flour and over the top place a few strips of salt pork. Roast forty-five minutes, basting every seven minutes, first with one-fourth of a cupful of hot water, then with the fat in the pan. To the liquid add water to make a cupful. Brown one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter with two tablespoonfuls of flour and add the liquid from the pan. Cook until smooth and serve with the steak.

Peppers are good in omelet, scrambled eggs, chop suey and as a garnish for cream soups. In French dressing with chopped onion they add greatly to any simple salad.

Tea is much better and more wholesome using a tea ball.

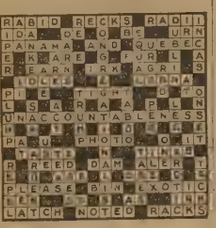
Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.



HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Just Wanted to Keep Promise to the Bairn

Judge Joseph Sabath, of Chicago, said recently that the increase in divorce is not necessarily a bad sign, but may be, on the contrary, a sign that woman, more emancipated now, insists more on a square deal.

"I have presided over 10,000 divorce cases," Judge Sabath said at a luncheon, "and I have seen more than one husband who was as impossible as Wully Dugan.

"Wully buttonholed the illusionist after the performance and said to him:

" 'Mon, could ye do that trick if ma wife was put in yer box?'

" 'Aha,' the illusionist laughed, 'so you want to get rid of your wife, do you?'

" 'Weel,' said Wully, 'it's not so much that, ye ken, but I promised the bairn a green parrot for Christmas.' "

Old Clock That Has History of Interest

The achievement of an officer of the British admiralty hydrographic department in resturring an ancient clock which had been unused for nearly 200 years sheds light on a long-forgotten romance.

The clock was the invention of John Harrison, the self-taught son of a Yorkshire carpenter, and it gained for him the government prize of $100,000 offered for a ship's chronometer which would accurately indicate longitude.

Comprising more than 500 parts, this remarkable clock weighs more than 100 pounds, and took two years to construct. Accurately, it is a clock within a clock, the lesser clock keeping time for four minutes only, when it is automatically rewound by the bigger clock, which itself requires to be wound once daily.

Another clock by Harrison, an eight-day wooden timepiece, is still working in the Patent museum at South Kensington.

Luxurious Tourist Camp

One of the most unusual motor tourist camps in the country, known as "Campo Grande," is located near El Paso, Texas, and is constructed along Indian mission lines of architecture. The picturesque entrance is so constructed as to accommodate stores and shops, with a gas and oil station in the center. There is also a restaurant, drug store, bakery and curio shop. Inside the camp is a large recreation hall and office, a laundry, public shower baths, cooking places and ample park space for guests. The recreation hall is fitted with writing desks and cozy lounging corners, and the tourists hold dances there thrice weekly.

Die at Heine's Grave

Heine, famous German poet, lies buried in Montmartre cemetery. His tomb is the mecca of many love-sick French people. Police records show that every year at least twenty suicides are committed at his grave by unlucky lovers. This year, the number having exceeded the usual average, the police have decided to station a policeman at the grave to prevent young people from taking their lives there.

Cartier, the Pioneer

The first effort to cultivate the soil of Canada was made by the discoverer, Jacques Cartier, who, in 1541, had an acre of land cleared near where Quebec now stands, and had it planted with turnips, cabbage and lettuce seeds. The first public garden was Adlam's garden in Halifax, N. S., established in 1753. The present public gardens in Halifax are the pride of the city and the admiration of all visitors.

In mythology, "Bellona" was the wife of Mars and the goddess of war. Her parents were called Bellonarii. On the 24th of March, Bellona's day, her votaries hacked themselves with knives and drank the blood of their sacrifices.

WILL LEAD SOUTH IN CONSTRUCTION

THAT BIRMINGHAM WILL LEAD ENTIRE SOUTH IN BUILDING IS PREDICTION OF CITY INSPECTOR

HAS REACHED $16,868,726

Says Last Year's All-Time Record Of $20,000,000 Will Be Topped By Over $2,000,000 During 1925

Birmingham.—Confident prediction that Birmingham will lead the entire south in new construction this year was made by City Building Inspector J. E Spencer, following the submission of his September report to the City Commission showing a total for the month of $1,580,428 and a total for the past nine months of $16,868,276.

Last year's all-time record of $20,247,709 will be topped by at least $2,000,000, in the estimation of Spencer and Clint Allgood, his chief clerk.

"The September total of $1,580,428 was the smallest of any month this year thus far, and even if we do no better during the next three months we will hit the $22,000,000 mark," Spencer said. He added, however, that the chances are excellent for a still better record.

Home building continued to predominate, Spencer's tabulation showed. In September new dwellings valued at $600,000 were erected in the city.

Totals for the past nine months are:

January	$ 1,733,815
February	2,276,350
March	2,027,725
April	1,748,745
May	1,765,611
June	1,777,201
July	2,929,825
August	1,725,566
September	1,580,428
Total	$16,868,726

Lesson for October 11

PAUL IN CORINTH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace."—Acts 18:9.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Protecting Paul.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul in Workshop and Pulpit.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul's Experiences in Corinth.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul Plants the Church in Corinth.

I. The True Missionary Method (vv. 1-3).

Paul came to Corinth a stranger in a strange city. He did not have an advance agent to do his advertising. His method in gaining a foothold in Corinth was as follows:

1. Finding a Home (v. 2).

This he found with Aquila and Priscilla, Jews, who were recently expelled from Rome by the cruel edict of Claudius.

2. He Toiled for His Daily Bread (v. 3).

He was of the same craft with them, being a tentmaker. Every child among the Jews was taught some trade by means of which he could gain a livelihood, should occasion require.

II. Preaching in the Synagogue at Corinth (vv. 4-8).

1. Though Compelled to Toil for a Living While Getting a Foothold in Corinth, He Did Not Lose Sight of His Main Work (v. 4).

He reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath, persuading the Jews and Greeks. While the missionary should not be above honest toil when necessity arises, he must not allow toil to interfere with preaching the gospel.

2. His Activity Was Increased When Silas and Timothy Came (v. 5).

This resulted from three causes:

(1) They brought good news from the church at Thessalonica (I Thess. 3:6).

To hear of the steadfastness of those who had confessed Christ under his ministry, put new vigor into his labors.

(2) They brought pecuniary gifts from the Macedonian church (Phil. 4:15; II Cor. 11:9).

Being relieved from the necessity of toiling for a living, he could now devote more time and energy to the preaching of the gospel.

(3) Silas and Timothy became assistants to Paul in the work.

3. Paul Opposed (v. 6).

His increased activity was met with increased opposition. As the Lord's ministers become more aggressive in their work, the ministers of Satan put forth corresponding efforts in opposition.

4. Paul Announces His Purpose to Turn to the Gentiles (v. 6).

Because of their blasphemy and opposition, he ceased to work among the Jews. There is a time when good judgment causes one to abandon work where efforts have been fruitless, but it is difficult to know just when to do it. Oftentimes lasting harm is done to the work by pressing efforts when people have turned against the truth. Paul's declaration, "I am clean," was a most solemn one.

5. He Did Not Go Far Away (v. 7).

He remained sufficiently near those whose hearts God had touched that they could easily find him. It is likewise true that although Christ is obliged to depart from the soul that refuses Him entrance, He lingers with yearning love around that heart.

6. His Success (v. 8).

Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, was converted. Perhaps Paul's severe action in turning away from them moved Crispus to act.

III Paul's Vision (vv. 9-11).

His experiences since coming to Europe were very trying. He needed encouragement at this time. It is just like the Lord to come at the time of the servant's greatest need. Note the Lord's words to him.

1. "Be Not Afraid." When one is executing the commission of the Lord, he need not be afraid.

2. "Speak and Hold Not Thy Peace." The one who has heard the voice of God cannot refrain from speaking. He cannot be still.

3. "I Am With Thee." The Lord is with every one who faithfully carries out His commission.

4. "No Man Shall Set on Thee, to Hurt Thee."

The one sent by the Lord to do a work is immune from danger and harm until his work is done.

5. "I Have Much People in This City." It is most encouraging to know that in the great cities the Lord has His own people, and that the one who goes in His name shall have fruit for his service.

ILDING PRETTIER SOUTHERN FARMS

s a sad sight to see the eroded, shed, and abandoned farms all over land whose former owners would e in most instances, been better off y had they remained and built up r farms instead of moving away some factory or other public job. do not advocate the cultivation of of our lands, this would be a serious take, but what we do cultivate uld be fertile enough to produce a ing crop and the wet, waste, and r parts should be in grasses and ers, or timber. This of course would to some diversification which all of hould practice. We will never prove he world that "the south is the garden spot of America" until we do some real soil building; produce our own food and feed and some to sell; and cooperate with our neighbors in marketing.

This is a good time to start.Do not select the poor spots to begin with; pic some of the best parts, the garden included so as to insure success. Green fields, or even a green patch this winter, and next spring will give us hope and encouragement and inspire our fellow farmers: and such green fields will impress the thousands of tourists who will pass back and forth along our railroads and highways, as nothing else will.

The cotton crop is about gathered and most of it sold.

NASH
Nash Leads the World in Motor Car Value

One of the Most Valuable Automobile Franchises in America Is OPEN!

This opportunity will appeal irresistibly to some aggressive business man, or group of men

For more than a quarter of a century, C. W. Nash has been a conspicuous figure in the automobile world. His career at every point has been marked by success. As he has progressed, the army of dealers who distribute Nash motor cars throughout the Nation have, month after month, and year after year, received their full share of the prosperity that has followed each new advancement of this foremost motor car builder.

As a result the Nash contract is rigidly regarded by automobile men as one of the most valuable and profitable. If you would ask an established Nash dealer to estimate the value of his franchise you would be amazed at the high price he would set as its fair earning power. As a Nash dealer, one man in a small Southern town is doing a $140,000 business with but $10,000 invested. Another Southern man does a $280,000 business on a $25,000 investment. Yet, despite the fact that the Nash franchise is so valuable the right kind of a man, or group of men, can obtain it in this community without a penny's cost. The opportunity is obvious and every ambitious man who is not irrevocably anchored will thrill to its promise.

If you desire to associate yourself with a powerful, strongly financed, most successful organization; if you desire to enter a sound, profitable, clean business, we would like to tell you about the Nash dealers' franchise. We would like to tell you how Sales opportunities will be built for you through the expenditure of millions of dollars in National advertising and how every year your franchise will be more valuable. We would like to tell you how others in far less promising communities than this have built splendid business.

The Martin-Nash Motor Company of Atlanta and Jacksonville, Southeastern Distributors, have an unusually liberal plan of cooperating with you in sales and service development, as well as a plan for sharing in your own advertising.

Get the facts now. The Nash Agency will soon be placed in your city. A moderate investment is necessary, plus energy and foresight, but the franchise provides safeguards that absolutely insure the invested capital.

Before you right now is a real opportunity. Come to Atlanta. Wire us. Phone us. Or sign the coupon, and a representative of this organization will bring ALL the facts to you.

Small Tract of Timber Is Worth Bank Account

Montgomery, Sept. 9. A small tract of timber is equivalent to a savings bank account with Mother Nature, making the deposits in behalf of the owner, says the Alabama Commission of Forestry. Many a farmer hard pressed for funds has suddenly discovered that a neglected corner of his land possessed value to timber buyers running into hundreds and thousands of dollars. When money could be [illegible] than the entire production in 1924.

Several factors have contributed to the unprecedented demand according to C. E. Dawson, assistant general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor company.

"The August 1 reduction of $40 to $50 in the closed model prices together with the announcement of the improvements on all models caused a still further increase in the unfilled order list," said Mr. Dawson. "The greatest demand at present appears to be for Chevrolet Coach. Increased popularity also has been gained by the new Utility Express one ton truck which has replaced the former truck of the same name.

"Another factor in car demand is the rapid economic recovery of the south and the southwest where purchasing power is now on a par with the remainder of the country."

NO UTILITIES

Within a decade, electric stoves, washin machines, ironing machines, water heaters, mixing devices, refrigerator and similar power appliances will be as much a part of a house as the modern bathroom, is the prediction of Earle E. Whitehorne, editor of Electrical world.

"While the modern office is filled with labor saving devices, only 18 per cent of the homes are thus provided The women are required to do the same kind of drudgery their grandmothers did all because the home is away behind the times.

"The development of the consumer-owned power companies which is real public owner-ship will bring about the further use of ele tricity in the home."

Both day and night shifts have been augmented to maintain the new schedule. The company shipped 4,284 cars to dealers on Aug. 31, establishing a new record 600 higher than the largest previous shipment for one day.

3 minutes Late on a 900 mile journey

This is the story of an actual happening aboard one of this Railroad's thru trains from Cincinnati to New Orleans.

Upon arrival at New Orleans, a passenger, with watch in hand, complained to his fellow passengers that "trains are always late". As a matter of fact, this passenger had left Cincinnati at 6:15 the evening before, had traveled in absolute comfort through six states, had enjoyed four splendid meals (served to him at a loss to the railroad), and had arrived at his destination, a distance of 921 miles from Cincinnati, three minutes later than schedule. This particular train has a very high "on-time" record though it is one of the heaviest in all the South.

Such complaints are, of course, very much out of the ordinary. Nevertheless, they afford an opportunity for considering the remarkable service being rendered to the people of this Nation by the steam transportation lines.

Remember that railroads are not always at fault when trains are late, and that the on-time record of railroads is very high. Seldom do the great trunk-line railroads of the Nation miss their regularly appointed schedules—an accomplishment which pays high tribute to their management and operation.

DR W B CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 63

Mother! It's Cruel to "Physic" Your Child

"In children's ills, a harsh, sickening 'physic' often makes matters worse by lowering the child's resistance."
—DR. CALDWELL

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every day or two was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

POULTRY

COST OF RATION IS BIGGEST ITEM

A very important factor in any ration is the matter of cost. The best ration is one that will give the largest returns, cost considered. This does not mean the largest returns or the cheapest ration. The biggest income may be secured from a ration that is so high in price that it is impracticable to use, while the cheapest ration might bring about such low production as to make it unprofitable.

From the farm poultryman's standpoint the question of feeding is largely a question of economically supplementing the home-grown feeds. Two general types of feeds come under this classification: Those that are supplied to the fowls and those the fowls pick up by ranging over the farm.

In the majority of cases there are two problems: One, the supplying of protein or flesh-forming foods, and the other of giving the proper variety to the ration. This is more particularly true when the fowls are confined than when they are picking up considerable of their feed by foraging over the farm. When foraging they eat more scratch feed and less mash than will properly balance up their ration if they are allowed to choose as they may. Therefore, they must be encouraged to eat the mash by making it as attractive as possible and also by limiting the amount of the scratch feeds which are supplied, especially during the morning feeds.

The cost of the ration is the biggest item of expense in poultry production. The greatest opportunity for a saving lies in the feeding. The big item that the majority of people need to pay more attention to is that of balancing up the food by the use of some of the animal proteins and supplying additional variety. Too much scratch grain and not enough mash to properly balance the ration is the mistake made by many flock owners.

Market All Fowls That Molt Early in Autumn

"Most hens stop laying when they begin to molt," says E. L. Dakan of the poultry department at Ohio State university. "A hen must be a consistent layer to make a high record, and an early molting hen is not a consistent layer.

"The time of the molt is the best indication of the past year's performance. This rule can be used in culling all breeds and varieties, but is of special importance with such breeds as the Orpingtons and Minorcas that do not have the yellow skin.

"The hen that molts early, under normal conditions, will not lay as many winter eggs as the hen that molts late. Neither will she begin egg production earlier in the spring. No definite date can be set as to early molt, but as a general rule the first hens in the flock to molt should be sold, and the last to molt should be kept for breeding purposes.

"Hens may be thrown into an early molt by starving while laying heavily, by irregular feeding, by roosting in a house that is poorly ventilated, or by anything which tends to check egg production."

Fattening on Range

Some feeders have tried confining the turkeys while they are being fattened, but with little success. When confined to a pen, they may eat heartily for a few days but afterwards lose their appetites and then begin to lose flesh. A certain amount of liberty and range is necessary to keep them hungry and in good, healthy condition. Where this is combined with a good feeding ground, as is the case when they are allowed to run in a cornfield that has been hogged off, results are more than likely to be gratifying.

Poultry Hints

Ducks or geese will eat all the grit they require without putting it in their feed.

Turkeys should not be fed at first. Growth should come first and fattening should not begin until in November if the birds are to be wanted for the Thanksgiving market.

A novel and easy way to make wet mash is to pour a little milk in the mash hopper at noon. Just enough liquid should be used to moisten what the birds will clean up.

Make a bred-to-lay hen's home life happy and comfortable with proper housing and feeding, as well as the other surroundings, and she will try to do the best justice and let you enjoy the profits therefrom.

Only a laying hen is worthy of her feed.

Whether or not it pays to raise capons depends very much upon the market. People who eat capons are very particular people and birds not only have to be well raised, but well finished.

* * *

Green feed increases the fertility and hatchability of eggs, it has been found. Hens should have access to pasture, or be fed silage, sprouted oats or some other good green feed.

Layers Do Better With Well Furnished House

"For the comfort of the flock and the convenience of the caretaker the poultry house should be completely furnished," says N. E. Chapman, poultry specialist of Minnesota university. "Dropping boards and removable roosts are essential to health," he says. "One nest, easy of access, should be provided for every four hens. Hoppers for mash and minerals, manger and troughs for green feeds and moist mash are needed.

"Water tables or shelves, with sanitary pans or pails for water and crocks for milk should be provided. A broody coop and a dust box are needed at certain seasons of the year. Burlap curtains before the roost chamber may be required in some sections of the state.

"Proper furnishings for the poultry house will save on the labor bill which, in instances, is about as large as the feed bill."

Wet or Dry Mash

The merits of wetting all or a portion of the feed for chicks, as compared with feeding all of it dry, is a question upon which all poultrymen do not agree. The practice of the majority of poultrymen points to the increased use of dry feed. One of the big advantages of dry-mash feeding is the fact that it may be hopper-fed. Aside from lessening the amount of labor, there is the additional advantage of avoiding mobbing.

Green Peas and Rye Flavor Milk

Both Feeds May Be Given Dairy Cows After Milking With Little Effect.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When for any reason silage is unavailable as a succulent feed for dairy cows a common feeding practice is to supply the succulence with soiling crops. Many of these crops fed green to dairy cows impart a disagreeable or abnormal odor to the milk, depending to some extent on the amount consumed and the time that elapses between feeding and milking time.

Green Rye and Cowpeas.

Tests by the United States Department of Agriculture to determine the effect of feeding green rye and green cowpeas on the flavor and odor of milk have been made. These tests showed that when dairy cows consumed as much as 15 pounds of green rye one hour before milking only slightly abnormal flavors and odors were produced in the milk. Increasing the amount to 30 pounds, however, increased the abnormal flavors and odors to a slight extent, but not enough to be objectionable to the majority of consumers. Feeding as much as 30 pounds immediately after milking had practically no undesirable effect on the milk.

When green cowpeas were consumed in amounts of from 15 to 30 pounds an hour before milking there was a slight increase in the abnormal flavors and odors in the milk. A like amount immediately after milking, however, had but little effect on the milk.

Avoid Flavors and Odors.

While the abnormal odors and flavors produced by these two feeds were slight in both cases they were more pronounced in the case of green cowpeas than in that of rye. These experiments show that to avoid all disagreeable flavors and odors caused by the feeding of green rye or green cowpeas they should be consumed in amounts not exceeding 15 pounds if fed within an hour before milking. Both feeds may be consumed after milking with but little unfavorable effect.

Profitable to Hog Off Green Corn if Done Early

That green corn can be marketed profitably through lard or bacon hogs has repeatedly been shown by experiments at the North Dakota Agricultural college the past few years.

This method of fattening pigs has met with much opposition principally because the method of procedure in most cases has been wrong. A few years ago some eastern states argued against this system of feeding on the grounds that it produced hog cholera. It is now a well established fact that this is not true. The trouble as it existed at that time was due to pigs becoming sick by turning in on green corn without their being hardened in to its feeding gradually. In some cases cholera developed but was not due to the green corn. It got a foothold because the pigs were sick as a result of improper management.

Some breeders argue that it does not produce heavy gains. This is because green corn must be hogged off early and as a rule pigs do not weigh over 100 pounds at that time. It is a difficult problem, as most breeders know, to fatten 100-pound pigs. To successfully hog off green corn, pigs must be farrowed early in March so that they weigh 135 to 175 pounds when turned in on the corn since it is a fattening feed as is matured corn.

Where flint varieties of corn have been used at the North Dakota Agricultural college, heavier gains have been realized by hogging off soft rather than to wait until it is matured. It seems that matured flint is hard to chew and the hogs do not consume sufficient to make heavy gains.

FARM NOTES

Soy beans are a satisfactory protein supplement to corn or other grains.

Nature's tonic for growing pigs is pasture and the exercise, sunshine and clean surroundings it affords.

Winter quarters for the breeding flock need not be elaborate unless the lambs are to be dropped early.

Probably no other piece of farm equipment has more fully demonstrated its value than has the silo.

More honey bees are needed in many apple orchards to adequately insure cross-pollination, entomologists have proved.

In spite of the haphazard management they receive, farm woodlands of the United States produced $304,321,828 worth of forest products in 1919.

Saving sometimes means losing: eggs held only a few days develop watery whites on the way to market and thereby bring a lower price.

The common brown rat breeds six to ten times a year and produces an average of ten young. The feed rats consume on many farms would more than pay taxes. Ask your county agent about barium carbonate poison. It's inexpensive and effective.

Standards for Beans Have Been Issued

Will Tend to Encourage Better Market Preparation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Tentative standards for beans have been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture following a series of public hearings in leading bean producing sections of the country. The standards include nineteen different classes of beans and are proposed for adoption and use by state and commercial agencies to demonstrate their practicability under commercial conditions before official standards are established.

The importance of standards for this commodity is emphasized by the department in a statement that the commercial dry edible bean crop of the United States returns to farmers over $50,000,000 a year. Beans are an important staple food, standards for which, the department says, would tend to encourage better farm preparation for market resulting in larger returns to growers, would reduce hazards incident to marketing, and would improve the quality of the finished product.

More than 1,600 samples of beans were analyzed by the department to determine the range and limits of various quality factors in making up the grades. The tentative standards are made up of seven sets of grades for as many classes or groups of classes, the specifications giving weight to local production and marketing problems, as well as to consumer requirements.

Copies of the report of the department's bean marketing investigations together with copies of the tentative standards may be obtained upon request to the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Importance of Keeping Winter Wheat Crop Pure

The importance of keeping winter wheat pure is emphasized by farm crops men of the Minnesota university. Since mixtures of rye reduce the market value of winter wheat by lowering grades, the planting of wheat on fields that have not produced winter rye for several seasons is the best way to avoid this difficulty.

The university men do not recommend winter wheat as a regular crop in the Red river valley. In the north central part it may be grown successfully if Minturki or some variety equally hardy is planted early in September. Minturki rye also proved satisfactory in central and southern sections.

Winter rye is a successful crop in northern Minnesota when a hardy variety is sown the first part of September. Swedish rye, Minnesota No. 2, is recommended for northern and central portions of the state. In the southern part Rosen rye may be grown successfully except on high exposed fields where the snow is likely to be blown off during the winter.

Grow Horse-Radish From Cuttings Set in Spring

Horse-radish requires a very deep, cool, rich soil and late season growth for the best results. It is propagated from cuttings of the small side roots. The cuttings are made from the roots when they are dressed for market in the fall and are stored in the cellar or in pits as other roots are during the winter. These cuttings may then be planted in early spring but since most of the growth is later in the season it is customary to hold them till later and plant with some other crop such as early cabbage or beets. When planted the top of the cuttings should be from three to five inches below the top of the soil. Horse-radish will grow until freezing weather when it should be plowed out, cuttings made for the following year and the desirable roots marketed.

Ask Dad— See If He Knows

Father and mother are always thinking of your welfare—there isn't a thing within reason they wouldn't do for you.

But they may unknowingly have been risking your life every day.

When you are at dinner tonight with dad, ask him this question:

"Dad, is our school firesafe?"

Perhaps he won't be able to answer—he may not know.

Ask dad if he knows that somewhere in the country a schoolhouse burns every day. Ask him if he knows that one-third of all the schoolhouses in the country are nothing better than firetraps — maybe your school is one of them.

Of course dad knows that buildings can be built that will not burn. They are being built everywhere, every day.

If your school is firesafe, you're lucky. If it isn't, ask dad what he is going to do about it. You have a right to know.

The highest type of firesafe construction is concrete. Our illustrated booklet "Concrete Schoolhouses" contains a wealth of information on firesafe construction with which every parent ought to be familiar. Write today for your free copy.

ALICE ALLIGATOR TALKS

"My dear Agnes Alligator," said Alice Alligator, "men and women and boys and girls flatter themselves. [illegible] do."

"Do they, indeed?" asked Agnes Alligator, as she swam about the big [illegible].

"Yes, they do, indeed," said Alice, "and I know, for I heard them talk the other day when they came to the zoo.

"They knew that we hadn't nice dispositions, all right.

"That was correct.

"They knew that the only reason we put up with the keeper was because he gave us food.

"They knew that we didn't care for him in the least and that we would never allow ourselves to become pets—no, not in a thousand years.

"But they thought that we always wanted to grab one of them whenever we could, whether we were free or not."

"Did they not know we were frightened of them?" asked Agnes Alligator.

"No," said Alice, "and so I say they flattered themselves.

"They seemed to think that we wanted to eat them whenever we could, and you and I and all alligators know that we will run for the water if we're on the land in our free state when we see grown-ups or children.

"They didn't know that we were wild and angry with them only when they bothered us and that then we put up a terrible fight with our strong jaws and tails.

"We can knock them down with our tails if they get near us, and we can't do so much with our fat necks.

"Our necks aren't so easy to turn around as one might think."

"The way you talk about necks," said Agnes, "one would think that necks were on wheels and some turned more easily than others."

"You know what I mean," grinned Alice.

"But the very idea of people thinking we would always go for them when we like fish and birds and little animals and insects for our food.

"If they fed us something we might bite off an arm in our hurry to get at the food.

"But they shouldn't flatter themselves that we want to eat them.

"In fact we don't flatter people by wanting them every time we see them and they should not be so conceited about nothing at all.

"But one thing makes me particularly angry about people—and that is that some of them hunt for us down South for no reason at all except to be mean, and they think they're having fun getting dumb creatures to be their prey.

"That is the meanest of all—to attack us for no other reason than just to attack us—and to call it fun.

"That seems the worst thing about it—to call it fun. That seems terrible."

"Oh, that makes me so angry too," said Agnes. "I'm really quite glad I'm in the zoo.

"Of course we're cranky and we don't care about anyone and we're not friendly and we are greedy, and many of our ways are hard-hearted, if one can speak of alligator ways in that fashion.

"But that is no reason for making sport of us. People don't show us they're so fine when they do such things."

They decided then that they would comfort themselves by a little nap, while Charlie Crocodile from his tank nearby was saying:

"Yes, as I've said before I'm a contented crocodile, but I would not be contented as a cow is contented.

"A cow is contented chewing her cud all day, but I am contented because I can be fierce and angry and powerful whenever there is any need of it."

So contented Charlie Crocodile and his brother and family swam around happily with their flat tails helping them along, while the Alligators slept and had a peaceful rest.

MODES IN YOUTHFUL FROCKS; KNITTED COSTUME POPULAR

WHEN the feminine world grows restive in its search for something new to add zest to even the most satisfactory modes, stylists always recommend a journey into new fields and a decided change of scene. This fall they took woman-kind firmly by the hand and led her to the realm of fuller skirts, higher and more defined waistlines and greater elaboration, in frocks—this is all they can do. The question now occupying their minds is—"Will she or will she not take kindly to these innovations?"

The edict of fashion for fuller skirts has been generally accepted but in tailored and utility dresses this greater fullness is not allowed to interfere with straight, slim lines. Therefore it is introduced by means of plaits that lie flat and are pressed or stitched down. There is considerable enthusiasm for greater fullness in afternoon and particularly in evening dresses, where it is introduced in many ingenious and graceful ways. But the utility dress has not said good-by to the simple, straight line and has not been introduced as yet to the high waistline. As for elaboration, it has developed an acquaintance with varied new neck treatments, but remains loyal to extreme simplicity in other details. A very good example of the youthful, everyday dress, such as the college or business girl will rejoice in, is shown here. It is developed in navy blue twill or rep, or in plain flannel or other dependable wool cloths, with vestee and collar of ecru crepe de chine. A bit of filet lace on the sleeves and belt, and a tie of velvet ribbon, in a bright color, complete its engaging but simple story. It has little points of difference in its construction from the frocks of yesterday. Greater fullness is introduced in the front of the bodice, giving the skirt portion a little extra width, the sleeves are long and the skirt is lengthened by several inches.

Is there a hint of frost in the air? A prophecy of winter in the cool autumn breeze? Summer frocks and furbelows but a memory? Too early for winter-weight cloth and fur? Why be cast down with "betwixt and between" season perplexities, since nowadays knitted costume so handsomely answers the question "what to wear?"

It is a fact when it comes to the problem of suitable attire, the knitted arts are proving equal to every demand of time, occasion and the elements. Just now interest is divided between elegant knitted ensemble costumes, two-piece suits, two-piece jumper frocks, one-piece dresses and crowning glory of all, wondrous full-length coats than which nothing more attractive in the way of wraps has ever been devised.

To enumerate all the lovely garments created by knitted stylists for the present and coming season's wear, is impossible, but here are a few items to be had for the buying, and that at an astonishingly small outlay of money considering their chic, charm and general practicality.

For early autumn wear what more satisfying and apropos than one of those simple one-piece knitted frocks such as are so conspicuously a part of the advance fashion program? There is that fine simplicity about these correctly styled dresses which bespeaks refinement and gentility. They come in such interesting colors, too, such as pencil blue, navy, mellow greens, and the new wine, fuchsia and red shades.

Colorfulness coupled with novelty patterning characterize both suits and coats. There is a trend toward gay futurist designs such as the knitte suit in the picture stresses. Another note of luxury is expressed in lavish fur trims, wool fur being one of the most interesting decorative features. Just now, in knitted coats there is a movement toward Indian blanket designs with novelty fur, either of sheared wool, or animal pelt, this blended to the grays, browns or tans predominating in the color scheme of the garment. When it comes to knitted ensemble suits, they serve not only when the thermometer registers low, but with coat removed, the one piece or two-piece frock to match is just the thing to wear on glowing autumn days.

STEP-SAVING ARRANGEMENT FOR KITCHEN

The China Closet Opens on the Dining Room Side as Well as Into the Kitchen—Used Dishes Are Passed Directly to the Sink.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The arrangement of the wall space between the kitchen and the dining room, shown in these two pictures, provides several exceptionally good features in each room, says the United States Department of Agriculture. In the dining room a built-in sideboard occupies the recess between the door leading into the kitchen and a two-way closet.

Has a Dutch Door.

The pass closet has a Dutch door on the dining room side. The lower part thus affords a convenient place for storing the electric toaster and grill, and other pieces of equipment occasionally used in the dining room. The upper part opens through to the kitchen, thus making it possible to put clean dishes and food in from the kitchen side, to be taken out on the dining room side, and to return soiled dishes with equal convenience. China and glass in frequent use, such as cups and saucers, vegetable dishes, tumblers, and the water pitcher, are kept on these shelves, but part of the space is purposely kept clear for passing things from one side to the other.

On the kitchen side they are then stacked on the right-hand drainboard, ready for washing. A dish-draining basket on the left-hand drainboard receives the dishes as they are washed. Only a few steps are needed when clean dry dishes are taken from the drain basket and put in the two-way closet. In fact, if the entire drain basket is moved to the right-hand side of the sink, even fewer steps are required. In some cases it might be desirable to reverse the arrangement of the two-way closet and the passage door.

Proper Height of Sink.

The height of the sink has been considered in relation to the height of the person who is to do the work. The worker in the illustration has added to her comfort by sitting on a high stool for the first half of the task. A shelf above the sink provides a place for various cooking utensils which are filled with water before they are put on the stove, and small implements needed at the sink are hung on hooks below it.

On the Kitchen Side Used Dishes Are Taken Directly From the Two-Way Closet to the Sink and When Washed Put Away at Once.

CARROTS ARE GOOD IN SEVERAL WAYS

Most Notable Feature Is Plentiful Supply of Vitamins.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Carrots will make you beautiful," is a bribe used by parents of small children since time immemorial. But probably few realize how true the story really is for children and grown-ups alike.

Carrots may be cherished by those wishing to reduce because of their comparatively low caloric value and satisfying effect, but they need not be avoided by others. In fact, they serve us an excellent means of adding calories to the diet of one who is malnourished, for an extra 100-calorie portion of butter may disappear with very little effort when put on a serving of carrots. The bulk furnished by carrots is very useful in any case as it helps to regulate digestion.

Carrots are also an excellent source of mineral matter, which is used in regulating the body processes and building tissues. They contain an excess of the elements necessary to maintain the normal neutrality of the blood and tissues, and are especially rich in calcium which is essential in the building of bone structure, and in which the average American dietary has a scant margin of safety. Carrots cooked in milk are a calcium-rich combination especially adapted to the needs of growing children.

But the most notable feature of the carrot is its plentiful supply of at least three vitamins—A, B and C. Vitamin A is found in both raw and cooked carrots. Vitamin B is soluble in water so that the cooked carrot may contain only part of its original supply if the cooking water is discarded. Vitamin C is not only soluble in water, but it is also easily destroyed by heat, so that its power may be lost almost entirely by prolonged cooking in an open vessel. Fortunately the food specialist has worked out new methods of cooking carrots with special reference to preserving their vitamin C content. Carrots cut fine and cooked by a short process may be a good source of vitamin C, as well as of A and B.

Carrots may therefore be served with beneficial results to both children and adults, for they will furnish bulk to promote intestinal hygiene, mineral to regulate the body processes, and furnish building material for good teeth and bones, and vitamins to make possible normal growth and promote health and vigor. One eating carrots for the sake of her good looks may expect to become more beautiful, not through the acquisition of curly hair, but by the attainment of a more perfect state of physical fitness.

Paper Saves Scrubbing of the Sink or Table

Old newspapers, catalogues, or magazines, cut into pieces of convenient size to place under kettles and pans in the kitchen, will save much scrubbing of the sink or table. Spread newspapers over the gas range when you want to use it for a working surface; use them to receive potato and other parings, and the feathers when picking a chicken. They will save the freshly washed kitchen floor until it has thoroughly dried, and the bathroom floor, too.

A good way to keep these papers easily is to hang up a bag extended flat by a rod, with its sides open. Another way is to attach a rack for them to the back of the woodbox. Light brown paper or tissue paper should be saved for use in cleaning greasy pans and kettles.

A roll of grocer's paper on its frame will prove useful. This is cleaner than using paper that has been wrapped around bundles for such purposes as draining fried foods, lining cake tins, or even lining drawers and shelves, the United States Department of Agriculture points out. A narrow roll of white wrapping paper, fastened up on the wall, makes a handy place to jot down things to be ordered.

Paraffin paper should be on hand for covering food, for wrapping up sandwiches, and for cooling candies and cookies. Crepe paper napkins are also useful, especially when lunches are carried to school or work.

A HOME WITHOUT CHILDREN

Lacks the Greatest Joys of Life

Many Wives are Childless Because of Ill Health. Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Mrs. Benedict

MRS. MARY R. BENEDICT
313 PAYSON STREET, KEWANEE, ILLINOIS

Kewanee, Illinois. — "When I was married about a year and a half I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because of ill health. I did not have any children. I now have two healthy little girls and I am sure I would not have had them had it not been for your medicine. Last spring and summer I got all run down, irregular, and I had awful headaches, and my back and side hurt me so that I could stay up only a short time. My limbs would get so tired and ache till I could cry. I started to take the Vegetable Compound again and used the Sanative Wash, and it was not long till I was relieved. Now I do all my own work and help others. I sure praise Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines to any one I meet that is suffering from similar troubles. I think if mothers with girls would give it to them when they come to womanhood it would make them stronger. People who have known me all my life are astonished to see me now as I was always sickly when in my 'teens until I started taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MARY R. BENEDICT, 313 Payson Street, Kewanee, Ill.

Has a Beautiful Baby Girl Now

Bridport, Vermont.—"In the first place I wanted a baby, but none seemed to come to me. I just love children and my husband is away all day, so I was not happy at all. A doctor told me I could not have a baby until I went to a hospital. But my sisters said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you will be O.K.' I was nervous, had organic weakness, with backache, sideache, headache and no strength. I had been in bed nearly a week when I began taking the Vegetable Compound. It was all that ever helped me and I just wish you could see my beautiful baby girl. I am fine now, and so is she. I am still taking the medicine as it keeps me well. You may be sure I am recommending the Vegetable Compound and always will."—Mrs. A. W. HOWE, Bridport, Vermont.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 5. CLANTON ALABAMA, THURSDAY, OCT. 15, 1925 NO 5

TO CHILTON COUNTY DEMOCRATS

Your Executive Committee wishes to impress upon every one of you the vital importance of seeing to it, that your registration and poll tax records are absolutely correct and that your name shall appear in your proper beat, on the qualified voters list to be issued next year.

Perhaps there is more personal importance to each of you to be a qualified voter now than at any recent period in your experience, for 1926 is going to be a momentous era politically in Alabama.

In the first place it is going to be a general election year and the people are to choose at the polls the following official servants:

United States Senator
Congressman from our District,
Chief Justice State Supreme Court
Governor
Lieut. Governor
Secretary of State
State Auditor
State Attorney General
State Supt. of Education
State Commissioner of Agriculture
Public Service Commission, and in fact, almost a nentire new outfit of State Officials.

Then in local matters we have to choose a Circuit Solicitor, State Senator, County Representative, Sheriff Members County School Board, Tax Assessor, Tax Collector, County Commissioners, Beat Committeemen. Another important matter (for you to remember is, that it is more than probable that the Governor will call an extra session of the legislature at an early day and that a special election will be ordered for the purpose of voting on a $75,000.000 Road Bond issue and, perhaps, several other matters of taxation that you are most certainly personally concerned in and that you will surely wish to express yourself either for or against.

The Committee is reminding you of these things now so that you will have ample time to arrange to meet them when they come up. It will be wise for you to make whatever sacrifice of time convenience and money it may require and have your name properly entered upon the qualified list in time to meet these issues that will mean so much to you next year.

Another thing we wish to especially call your attention to. If you are over 45 years of age, be sure to go to the Court House and get you a life time certificate. Thus you can always vote whether your name is on the qualified list or not. Don't neglect to do this.

Now Earning Money

In celebration of the event the entire house-hold where the young lady boards, from the matron of the home down to the cook, made merry. A big dinner was served in honor of the occasion. All heartily wish that the movie of earning money may continue diligently to serve her country, until her earning capacity may be increased manifold, and then that she may be enabled to "cash in" at frequent intervals for her full worth, throughout life.

Travelers In Accident

On Wednesday evening a little after midnight, Mr. T. M. Marshall and party of Tulsa, Oklahoma, who were en route to Miami, were approaching the bridge just north of Clanton, when they met another car with blinding lights. The Oklahoma travelers got slightly off the paving; the new foundation gave way and their car turned over the embankment.

Mr. Marshall was more seriously hurt than the others. He was rushed to the Central Alabama Hospital, where several stitches were taken in the upper eye lid. The party spent nearly twenty-four hours in Clanton recuperating, then resumed their effort to reach their destination.

MILT TOLBERT SHOWS COMING OCTOBER 26

The Management Keenly Alive to The Demands of Present Day Changing Tastes

Looking back at its many years of public service, during which the Milt Tolbert Shows have provided entertainments for millions of people, it may be safely stated that no former season has ever remotely approached the grandure and diversity of the years offerings The management of the show in all varied branches is keenly alive to the requirements of this rapid age. This is an epoch of evolution. What was seeming and fitting in the past would not fill the wants of today. World developments and changing conditions in our own enviorments have created an appetite for closer intimacy with up-to-date hobbies and pursuits. It is not enough that a dramma appeals to our various emotions, heart-pangs, laughter, love and mate—it must be imbued with a spirit of the present in which we live. So it is with music. It must conform to the trend of today, whether the classic or the syncopated variety. The same may be said of scenic realism—absolute fidelity must prevail The trend of today points strongly to merriment, music, dancing and the presence of the effeminate beauty. The Milt Tolbert Shows are profuse in these attributes this season.

The prices this year remain with in the reach of every one.

Dear Doctor:- I had Pellagra six years, I was very nervous, had stomach trouble, lost weight, hands blistered and peeled off, very despondent and thought that I would lose my mind. I took over 700 hypodermics and got worse all the time. I heard of Dr. Rountree's Wondrful Remedy. I got three treatments and am now sound and well. The last treatment was taken 18 months ago and I have had no recurring symptoms.

Dear Doctor:- I had been having stomach trouble and losing weight; my skin had turned brown. I had a general weakness all over my body, felt tired all the time and could not sleep well at night. I had changed my diet often trying to get rest, as I was very nervous. One of my neighbors had Pellagra and told me possibly I had it. I did not believe at that time that I did have Pellagra, but I tried one of your treatments and got immediate relief. My nervousness was at once relieved; my stomach cured and I am now a well man. I only took two ten dollar treatments which cured me.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are pinced in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Money Didn't Figure in This Transaction

Two old friends who had not seen each other for a long time met on Broadway. After they had exchanged greetings, one of them confided that things were breaking pretty well for him.

"I just sold my dog for $100,000," he added.

"You don't mean to tell me you got $100,000 for a dog?" protested the other.

"Absolutely," said the first one. "A rich oil man bought him and paid me on the spot."

His companion looked at him in amazement for a moment and then said: "You can do me a great favor. I need $2,000—my wife is in the hospital and an operation may save her life. If you got $100,000 for your dog, you can surely spare $2,000—especially to an old friend and for an operation."

"Sorry, old pal," said the other, "but I can't do it."

"But I thought you said the oil man paid you for your dog."

"He did, but I can't loan you $2,000. You see, he paid me with two $50,000 cats."—New York Evening World.

Experts at Work on New Potato Species

The homely Irish potato may soon lose its simplicity and adopt sophisticated foreign manners if experiments now being conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture succeed, according to a bulletin issued by the department.

Agricultural explorers have brought from the high Andes of Colombia and Peru rare varieties of potatoes that have a flesh as yellow as butter and a delicious nutty flavor. The tubers are of little smaller than the North American variety. Experts of the department now are engaged in crossing the new Andean potato with the common "spud." It is hoped that new forms will be developed that will combine the flavor and color of the Peruvian potato with the size and reliability of the North American tuber and one that will be readily adaptable to the climate of the United States.

Short Sessions Held by British Lawmakers

Parliaments come and parliaments go. Some are long and some are short, but the shortest parliament in English history was summoned to September 30, 1398, for the purpose of deposing Richard II, and was dissolved the same day after fulfilling this task. The parliament which Charles I summoned in 1625 failed to please the exacting monarch, and was dismissed after five months, whilst the Barebones parliament, named after one of its members, lasted a similar period. The parliament of 1701 lasted a month longer. The briefest parliament in recent times was the one elected under Gladstone's premiership in December, 1885, and which lasted only until July, 1886. The shortest since then was a parliament lately dissolved at the instance of Ramsay Macdonald.

Oil for Beauty

Attaining and keeping a beautiful complexion is simple enough, after all. Just take a dip in the surf every morning, and then massage your face with coconut oil.

That's what the dusky ladies of the Tongan islands in the South seas do, and they have complexions "unrivaled by any race in the world," according to W. C. McKern, anthropologist, who spoke recently at Milwaukee. Every woman carries a can of coconut oil with her just as the flapper here carries her vanity case, he said.

Vital Question

"I want a girl who will love me for myself alone." "What do you mean by that line of patter?" demanded the damsel addressed. "That you are never gonna spend any money on her?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Health in Lounging

The custom of oriental women of reclining on the floor on cushions or lying on couches, instead of sitting erect on chairs, often has a beneficial effect on the health, according to one eminent health specialist.

Ariadne

Ariadne, the daughter of Leo I, was married to Zeno, who succeeded as emperor of the east in A. D. 474. She was so disgusted with the intemperance of her husband and so much in love with Anastasius, a man of obscure origin, that she shut Zeno, when intoxicated, into a sepulcher, where he was left to die, and her favorite, Anastasius, was placed on the throne. Her death took place in the year 515.—Chicago Journal.

SIBERIAN TIGERS

"The winter is coming," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.

"Let it come," said Master Siberian Tiger.

"The people will shiver," said Mr Siberian Tiger.

"Let them shiver," said Master Siberian Tiger.

"They will wear furs and even then they will be cold," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.

"Serves them right," said Master Siberian Tiger. "Who ever asked them to wear furs?

"I'm sure I didn't."

"I know that is true," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.

"I know it is," agreed Master Siberian Tiger.

"We came from Siberia and so we are called the Siberian tigers," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.

"There is nothing strange or wonderful or interesting about that," said Master Siberian Tiger.

"We are used to cold weather and so here in the zoo they let us live out-of-doors," continued Mr. Siberian Tiger.

"They had better do so," said Master Siberian Tiger, "if they want to keep us, for we would not look so beautiful and handsome with our big bodies and our fine fur if they put us inside, where it is horrid and hot."

"People think we're strange when they see that we live out-of-doors during the coldest days of winter," said Mr. Siberian Tiger.

"Hearken to me," said Master Siberian Tiger. "It matters not what people think, for people aren't Siberian tigers and they can't understand our ways.

"So I don't worry about them, but I do my own way and I think my own way.

"Let me tell you, Mr. Tiger, we would be better off if we all did as I do and were quite without interest in what people think."

"Without a doubt you are right," said Mr. Siberian Tiger. "I'll take the hint."

So the tigers walked and paced and raced and growled and ate and slept.

They paid no attention to any one but thought of the beautiful winter ahead of them—just a little ahead of them, and they thought how much they would enjoy the cold weather out-of-doors when the zoo people let them enjoy because they knew what Siberian tigers liked.

And the next time Mr. Siberian Tiger talked about the winter which would be along so soon, he said:

"The glorious winter will soon be here, and I'm glad, and I don't care if people think I'm queer or not!"

It was a beautiful sight to see them, too, out-of-doors on the cold, snapping days of winter, their fur looking so handsome and their eyes looking as though they were more contented here at this time of the year than at any other.

But they were too indifferent to people and to the other creatures in the zoo to send a zoolet to the Zoolet society, which, as you know, is a society in which different creatures of the zoo make up little rhymes about themselves.

They were wanting a new rhyme just at this time and asked the Siberian tigers to do one, but they refused, so the Hippopotamus agreed to send one.

This was the zoolet of the Hippopotamus:

Said the good old Hippopotamus,
"Some children are so vain.
They worry over freckles,
They wish they weren't so plain.
But I'm above such nonsense,
I know my skin's not fine;
But you don't observe me fretting.
Nor going into decline!"

Her Face Her Fortune

"My sister is awfully lucky," said one little boy to another.

"Why?"

"She went to a party last night where they played a game in which the men either had to kiss a girl or pay a forfeit of a box of chocolates."

"Well, how was your sister lucky?"

"She came home with 13 boxes of chocolates."—Everybody's.

New Variety of Cow

Mr. Jones purchased a fine Holstein cow, of which all the family were very proud.

One day a visitor said to Mary, the three-year-old member of the household: "I suppose you have all the nice creamy milk you can drink, now."

"Yes," replied Mary, "since we've got our old steam cow."

COATS WITH DIGNIFIED APPEAL; SIMPLE COATS FOR CHILDREN

THE two types of coats mainly in demand, as the season advances, are those that are luxurious and rich looking, and those that have a flavor of sports styles in mannish, plain, sturdy garments. The latter depend upon cut and the right choice of pattern, in familiar materials, to give them their character, but dressier types call upon fabrics, furs and embroideries, the new silhouette and endless individual touches and variations, for the distinction to which they may rightfully lay claim.

All these elements that go to make up dressy coats are neat and drink to French designers, who fairly revel in soft, supple fabrics, intricacies of cut, splendor in embroideries and new style ideas. They are sending over rich coats, of dignified appeal, that rival fur coats in opulent but conservative styling. One of these, as sketched and shown here, is made of dark green cloth, with embroidered bands in green and gold and decorations of beaver fur. The oddity of fur emplacements on collars and sleeves and the long revers, is distinctly Parisian. The lower edge of the collar is scalloped, disclosing glimpses of embroidering beneath it, the deep cuffs leave a portion of the sleeves at the wrist uncovered and the revers is graduated in width. Embroidered banding emphasizes the flaring hemline. This model would make a good choice when velvet is used.

In a great many fur-trimmed coats the straightline silhouette has been refined, and on some of them fur is so lavishly used that it covers about half of the garment. Worth has sent warm interlining. Tucks are a favored decoration for the smaller coats, while machine stitching is popular on coats for larger girls.

Pile fabrics, including those of the needlepoint variety, suede and smooth-finished cloth, with velveteen make up a large part of the fabric list for children's coats. Colors, in addition to the usual dark browns and blues, include new shades of blue, the wine shades and rosewood, and velveteen is used for trimming the plain cloths. Fur collars are conspicuous by their presence on all sorts of coats and krimmer in collars and cuffs is the most popular choice on velveteen.

One of the most important style points in children's coats appears in the shoulder cape, which, in some instances, extends to the hipline. Usually, with these coats, a choker collar of fur carries out the military suggestion in the cape. Cape coats and one-piece frocks with shoulder capes have the support of French designers and are very becoming to children.

For All-Around Wear.

Besides the cape coat there are some striking new cloths in autumn coat styles for young misses. Strong color contrasts in blocked patterns, as red and black, are used for straight box coats, smartly collared and cuffed with long-haired furs. Such coats are fastened with three large buttons at the front. Chinchilla cloth, in a variety of colors, lined with bright flannel, makes a cosy and substantial garment usually boasting a raccoon collar. Unique, and very American, are novel coats with scarfs to match, made of Indian blankets. The native colorings and primitive, but effective designing in the figured patterns, make them conspicuous, but good looking.

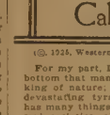
FOR THE CONVALESCENT

The feeding of those who are ill or just recovering, is a great problem.



The physician's orders should be carefully regarded as a patient's appetite is no guide as to the right kind of food. Many lives that might have been saved, have gone out because of wrong food.

It is well to bear in mind when dealing with people who are ill that they are weak mentally as well physically. They should be humored as one does a small child, using patience and firmness.

One who is ill from such fevers as typhoid, when recovering is ravenously hungry and will eat more and of such foods than is good for one. Liquid foods, because of easy digestion, may be given in larger quantities, but solid food must be given in small quantities.

Those who are ill tire of foods served in the same way. Even the manner of serving has a great deal in the appeal of a dish. Pretty dishes, a tray spotless and brightened by a flower, all add greatly to the eagerness with which the food is received.

Here are a few suggestions which may be varied as to the patient's taste or conditions:

Bisque of Clam and Sago.—Boil an ounce of sago in salted water—the water in which the sago has been soaked overnight. Cook perfectly clear, or transparent, then add one-half cupful of hot milk and a teaspoonful of butter. Put the clams through a meat grinder, bring them to the boiling point in their own liquor, add the sago, season to taste with salt and pepper, thicken with cracker crumbs and serve in a pretty bowl with thin toasted bread.

Pineapple Pudding.—Place one-half cupful of water in a double boiler. When boiling add a tablespoonful of sugar and stir in the yolk of an egg mixed with a teaspoonful of cornstarch. Stir until smooth and thick, then add one-half cupful of grated pineapple or pineapple juice. Heat to boiling, then fold in the stiffly beaten egg white and chill.

Something to Eat.

A most delightful salad combination is pineapple and tomato.

Tomato and Pineapple Salad.—Peel medium-sized ripe tomatoes, removing a slice from the top of each, and take out the seeds and pulp. Sprinkle the inside of the tomato cup with salt and invert; let stand a half-hour. Fill the tomatoes with fresh pineapple cut into fine bits, or shredded and a few nuts, using two-thirds of a cupful of pineapple to one-third of a cupful of nut meats. Mix with a rich mayonnaise dressing and serve on a bed of lettuce.

Mock Sweetbreads.—Chop one pound of veal, add two ounces of chopped salt pork and mix well. Then add two-thirds of a cupful of soft bread crumbs, two eggs, one-third of a cupful of flour, one-half cupful of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Form into eight cutlet-shaped pieces, dot with butter, using one and one-half tablespoonfuls, and pour around three-fourths of a cupful of chicken stock. Cover and bake one hour, basting every ten minutes. Serve with tomato sauce.

Stewed Chicken With Onions.—Remove the breasts and the second joints from two chickens. Cook in water to cover with one dozen small onions, until tender. Remove the chicken, reduce the stock to one and one-half cupfuls, by boiling; drain the onions from the stock. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add four tablespoonfuls of flour and the stock. Bring to the boiling point, add one half cupful of heavy cream, season with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Add the onions and chicken and bring to the boiling point.

When venison time comes try:

Roast Leg of Venison.—Lay a leg of venison in mild vinegar with one fourth teaspoonful of ginger, one sliced onion, six cloves and ten pepper corns. Turn once and leave two days. Remove from the vinegar, wipe, season well, dredge with flour and roast as usual.

Pineapple Dressing.—Heat one cup ful of pineapple juice until just warm. Blend two tablespoonfuls of butter with one of flour, add two beaten egg yolks and two tablespoonfuls of sugar, then the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour over the warm juice and cook in a double boiler until thick. Cool and add one-half cupful of whipped cream.

For those who do not enjoy olive oil, the corn oil, or the cotton seed oil, will take its place. Use for salad dressing just as if it were olive oil.

New Idea in Night Clubs

In the large cities where they have "night clubs," which are in reality only exclusive or semi-exclusive cafes for dancing and entertainment, a tiny baby grand piano has been placed on rollers and the player rolls it around the floor, playing particular pieces of music for the guests as they may request. The piano is small enough to be rolled in between the tables and its tones are eminently satisfactory, it is said.

Wall Street "Attacked" From the Air and Defended

When the bombs began falling someone turned in a fire alarm and the soldiers, firemen, police and curious crowds of spectators were all tangled up.

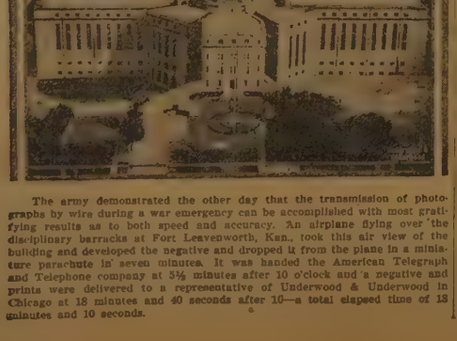
Quick Transmission of Photograph



The army demonstrated the other day that the transmission of photographs by wire during a war emergency can be accomplished with most gratifying results as to both speed and accuracy. An airplane flying over the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., took this air view of the building and developed the negative and dropped it from the plane in a miniature parachute in seven minutes. It was handed the American Telegraph and Telephone company at 5½ minutes after 10 o'clock and a negative and prints were delivered to a representative of Underwood & Underwood in Chicago at 18 minutes and 40 seconds after 10—a total elapsed time of 13 minutes and 10 seconds.

IMPROVED CROP IS LATEST FORECAST

ALABAMA'S INCREASED FORECAST IS NOT FROM IMPROVED CROP, SAYS F. W. GIST

IS MORE MATURE JUDGEMENT

Local Reports From Each County As Picking Has Progressed Increases Department of Agriculture Forecast for Alabama

Auburn, Ala.—The Forecast of 1,220,000 bales, issued October 1, by the government for Alabama, does not come from any improvement in the crop during the past month, but represents the more mature judgment of the local reporters in each county as the picking has progressed, according to a statement by F. W. Gist, agricultural statistician, following the announcement of the official figures from the Washington office.

Approximately 840,000 bales have been ginned to October, which represents about 69 per cent of the total amount of the crop as indicated. This is the largest production of any crop ever ginned to this date. The local reporters of the service in Alabama estimate the probable yield per acre at 170 pounds of lint, which is also the largest yield an average opinion of about 69 per cent of the crop ginned, the two estimates coinciding when the latter figure is computed into the amount ginned.

In the midst of the dry, hot weather of July and August cotton growers were feeling that it would be impossible to make a fair yield, but when the time came for fruit to set and to open, the prospect looked much brighter, and when the first picking was over the amount gathered was surprising and it was seen that the crop was turning out very much better than anticipated. The excellent yield is a direct response to the heavier fertilization used this season, which was also more carefully adapted to the various soil conditions than heretofore. Stands were poor in some sections, but the weather was conducive to the good growth of plants which had more room.

Rains, where accompanied by winds, have put some cotton on the ground, but pickers have taken it from the ground and no loss of bales has resulted. Some loss in value by damage to grade will result.

Reporters estimate the average number of bales per plow at 4.2, which will give a money return which has not been enjoyed for sore years.

The indicated cotton production by states as announced in the consolidated cotton report by the United States Department of Agriculture and the census bureau at Washington is as follows:

States.	Bales.
Virginia	48,000
North Carolina	1,150,000
South Carolina	850,000
Georgia	1,065,000
Florida	36,000
Missouri	240,000
Tennessee	465,000
Alabama	1,220,000
Mississippi	1,750,000
Louisiana	835,000
Texas	3,375,000
Oklahoma	1,640,000
Arkansas	1,400,000
New Mexico	60,000
Arizona	94,000
California	114,000
All other states	17,000

Lower California and Old Mexico (not included in United States), total, 75,000.

PAUL WRITES TO THE CORINTHIANS

LESSON TEXT—I Cor. 13:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."—I Cor. 13:13.
PRIMARY TOPIC—What Love Does.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Working Together.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Greatest Thing in the World.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love, the Hope of the World.

The occasion of the writing of this epistle was:

1. The existence of rival factions contending each other. Some were for Paul; some for Apollos; some for Peter, and some for Christ. This factious spirit was threatening the disruption of the church.
2. Their failure to carry out church discipline.
3. Their going to law with each other.
4. Indifference to gross immorality.
5. Letters requesting information as to:
a. Marriage and divorce.
b. Food connected with sacrifices and festivals.
c. The exercise of spiritual gifts.
6. Disorder in the public assemblies.
7. The presence in the church of certain ones who denied the resurrection of the dead.

I. The Pre-eminence of Love (vv. 1-3).

It transcends:

1. Speaking With Tongues (v. 1).

For men to possess the loftiest eloquence and be lacking in love is to be as booming brass or a clanking cymbal.

2. The Gift of Prophecy (v. 2).

To be able to penetrate the mystery of nature and Providence is good, but to love is better.

3. Faith of the Most Vigorous Kind (v. 2).

Even though one should have sufficient vital faith as to remove mountains it is of less value than love.

4. Philanthropy of the Most Generous Sort (v. 3).

Even though one should have such a spirit of altruism as to be moved to surrender all earthly goods for the sake of the poor, unless actuated by love, he would have no recognition before God.

II. The Attributes of Love (vv. 4-7).

1. It Is Long-Suffering and Is Kind (v. 4).

It means not only to bear long, but to be kind all the while.

2. It Is Free From Envy (v. 4).

Those who are controlled by love are entirely free from the spirit of envy because of the superior worth and success of others.

3. It Is Free From Boasting and Vanity (v. 4).

Love strives to do good to all without seeking admiration and applause.

4. It Is Decorous (v. 5).

Love is always polite and mannerly; knows how to behave at all times.

5. It Is Unselfish (v. 5).

It is always seeking the good of others while forgetful of self.

6. It Does Not Give Way to Passion (v. 5).

It is not quick tempered.

7. It Takes No Delight in Evil (vv. 5-6).

It does not impute evil motives to others and is free from suspicion. Love has no sympathy with that which is evil.

8. It Bears All Things (v. 7).

That is, it incases itself in the gracious mantle of love and shuts out all evil.

9. Love Is Trustful (v. 7).

It looks into the future with confidence.

10. Love Is Hopeful (v. 7).

It seizes the things of the future, brings them into the present and appropriates them for its use.

11. Love Is Firm (v. 7).

It intelligently sets its attention to things that are right, and with unvarying strength, holds fast.

III. The Permanence of Love (vv. 8-13).

1. It Outlasts Prophecy (v. 8).

Prophecy in the Scriptures means both a foretelling of events and the teaching of the Word of God.

2. It Outlasts Speaking With Tongues (v. 8).

The race once spoke the same language, but as judgment for sin and rebellion, God brought confusion and caused the people to speak many

3. It Outlasts Knowledge (v. 8).

The knowledge we now have is only relative, but the day is coming when the relative knowledge shall be done away by the coming in of a wider and nobler intelligence.

Seed Grain

Fear of Making Mistakes

Some of us know what it is to be miserably afraid of making mistakes in our work. How graciously He meets this with "I will direct their work in truth."—Frances R. Havergal.

Mother! Don't "Physic" a Child

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all the children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

WAKE up your sleeping youth! Look younger! Be younger!

Age has little to do with your looks or your feelings. It's the condition of your blood that counts!

And blood will tell! It tells in a hundred ways. If your system is starving for rich, red blood, you may look and feel old at thirty. But if you build up the red-blood-cells with S. S. S. you'll quickly see the wrinkles fade away—the sagging pouches give way to firm, solid flesh—and the fresh, glowing beauty of youth take the place of a skin sallow and disfigured with blemishes.

Rich, red blood means youth, vim and energy! S. S. S. helps Nature build red-blood-cells by the millions. For generations S. S. S. has been keeping people looking and feeling young.

Fresh, cleansing, purifying, rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build, nourishes every muscle, organ and tissue of the body. Pimples, blotches and blackheads disappear. Boils, eczema and rashes dry up. Your face—your body—your whole being takes on the look and power of youth.

Wake up your system with S. S. S. Build red blood and you rebuild youth! Get S. S. S. from any druggist. The larger bottle is more economical.

Dear Doctor:- I had Pellagra six years, I was very nervous, had stomach trouble, lost weight, hands blistered and peeled off, very despondent and thought that I would lose my mind. I took over 700 hypodermics and got worse all the time. I heard of Dr. Rountree's Wondrful Remedy. I got three treatments and am now sound and well. The last treatment was taken 18 months ago and I have had no recurring symptoms.

Dear Doctor:- I had been having stomach trouble and losing weight; my skin had turned brown. I had a general weakness all over my body, felt tired all the time and could not sleep well at night. I had changed my diet often trying to get rest, as I was very nervous. One of my neighbors had Pellagra and told me possibly I had it. I did not believe at that time that I did have Pellagra, but I tried one of your treatments and got immediate relief. My nervousness was at once relieved; my stomach cured and I am now a well man. I only took two ten dollar treatments which cured me.

APPLYING ONE'S KNOWLEDGE

You've been studying for a year how to ventilate this kitchen. You say you know how. I do wish you would apply your knowledge," said mother yesterday as she went to the door for a breath of air.

Dad glanced up at her, then looked again at the bulletin he was reading and broke into loud chuckles.

"Gone crazy?" said Mother with asperity.

"No. I was just thinking how much one of us husbands are like this boy of whom I was reading in the North Carolina State Board of Health Manual. Listen, dear, while I read it. Its a fine lesson to me."

A carlessly dressed youth once applied to the head of a big business concern for employment. As he entered the office the manager leaned back in his chair, bade him a friendly good morning and said, 'What may I do for you this morning?' The lad replied, 'I am looking for work sir, any thing you may have for me to do.'

"And then this conversation followed:

"Manager: 'What kind of work can you do?'

"Lad: 'Almost any kind of work, sir.'

"Manager: 'Can you sweep and dust?'

"Lad: 'Yes sir.'

"Manager: 'Then I suggest that you brush your hat and clothes.'

"Lad: I hadn't thought of that.

"Manager: 'Can you polish leather goods?'

"Lad: Yes, sir.'

"Manager: 'Your shoes would be a good place to prove it'

"Lad: (Embarrased) 'They would, sir, but I hadn't thought of them.'

"Manager: 'Can you scrub?'

"Lad: Yes sir, I can do that.'

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON HAVING MONEY ON HAND

"Aunty, why is it such a good thing to have cash in the bank?" asked Jane of Aunt Emmy. "Mr. Wilkins was talking to father yesterday and he said that every one ought to have a certain amount of cash on hand."

"He meant that if you keep some of your money in the bank where it can be had any time you might be able to use it to excellent advantage," said Aunt Emmy. "Every now and then a good opportunity presents itself to make a nice profit in some business deal if you only have the cash on hand so you can act quickly. Don't you remember about that quarrel the Brown brothers had over their inheritance and to settle it sold their house in Center Street? Old Peter Haskins bought it in for $3,000 and the next week sold it for $4,200. If he hadn't had the cash on hand he never could have made that handsome profit."

"Yes, Aunty, that's all right for Mr. Haskins, but I'm never likely to have $3,000 or $4,000 on hand."

"Well there are other little ways to make a profit," said Aunt Emmy. "For instance, you can always benefit by cash discounts. That is, if some one asks you to pay, say $100 for a thing you can usually get it for less, sometimes ten per cent less, if you pay at once in cash. You always should have some of your money in cash so that you can take advantage of golden opportunities and cash discounts."—A. B. Aymes.

BANKERS HELP

Mason County, Mich., bankers are backing the county move to replace scrub stock with purebred cattle. The plan as outlined by the county agent is to purchase young purebred sires and place them wherever a farmer is found who is willing to undertake the proposition. The bankers will advance the purchase price and take a note for one year without interest. The idea is to make it as easy as possible for the farmers to procure thoroughbreds.

The North Alabama Conference will soon meet in Huntsville. There will be many changes made in church factors.

The city and country people should be drawn nearer together. They both are just fools and should associate more together. Because some people live in town, that don't make them rich, but should appreciate the country people, for they are the ones who make your living. Get closer together and lets all be one people and serve our God, the Father of us all.

It would be a great thing if every body would attend Sunday school and church every Sunday. It would do your pastor good, and set a good and lasting example for your children to follow after, and would have a tendency to lead a better and higher life. Try it for a few Sunday's and note the difference of sentiment in your community.

It is reported that Mr. Musgrove, of Jasper will in the near future launch his candidacy for the United State Senator to succeed Senator Underwood.

Mr. Musgrove is well known over Alabama and will make a strong race.

With the entry of Mr. Musgrove there will be five in the race and all will make a strong campaign for the place.

We are expecting this to be the hottest Senatorial race ever waged in Alabama.

MAN OR MARS

Several scientists have come to the conclusion that Martians actually exist, and are a race not very different from our own. They are said to have proofs that Mars is in the condition that the earth is approaching—that is, a desert.

Wind erosion has removed the mountains and hills and the seas have disappeared. The canals are not ditches nor water-courses, but vegetation on each side of conduits of water used as routes of travel.

FRANKING PRIVILEGES

The privilege of sending and receiving mail free of postage was once enjoyed by the President of the United States, vice president, heads of departments, senators and representatives and other officials of the government during their official terms. For a time all former presidents also had this right, but by an act of 1873 the privilege was abolished. By later acts it was conferred on all officers of the government in the case of official correspondence. In 1895 members of congress were allowed this privilege in their official correspondence.

BUY IT IN CLANTON

The editor of this paper has been accused of being too enthusiastic in the matter of buying at home. If that statement is made in the nature of criticism, we accept it for what it is worth. In one instance it was made by a business man who said that the place to begin was with the business men themselves, for he said that he noticed that when other business men wanted something in his line they took advantage of the opportunities of their wholesale buying from department stores and supplied their household wants. They [illegible] the business man at home who specializes in a given line. The saving may be a few cents of the cost, but he thereby sets an example for the local merchant in that line to "go and do likewise." The retail business of the business men of [illegible] is a [illegible] item, and the buy-at-home campaign should start at home. If the business man wants a rug or a piece of furniture, a harness, auto accessories, radio, coats and suits, or anything else, why not give the local dealer a chance to supply those wants? Reciprocity is a splendid thing to practice. Let's be fair to each other and then we can, with better grace, ask the community at-large to be fair to us.—Selected.

FURNISHES FOOD FOR GOSSIP

The Springfield, Massachusetts, Union says: "Publication of income tax returns constitutes an unjust invasion of the citizen's right to decent privacy, encourages dishonest practices and sharp dealings by professional sharpers and among business competitors, fosters malicious gossip and slander and does not infallibly indicate the extent of a person's income. It thus gives rise to misunderstandings and worse."

BREAKING THE COAL STRIKE

Problems affecting the future fuel supply of the country will be discussed at the annual convention of the American Gas Association at Atlantic City, October 12.

Recent developments in the oil and coal industries are responsible for much of the interest in the deliberations of the country's gas men this year. It is recognized that with present high labor costs and rising prices for nearly all materials, manufacturers are demanding more economical as well as more efficient methods of [illegible].

Gas engineers believe that manufactured gas is the logical means to this need. The use of gas in industry has increased more than 1,000 per cent in the past ten years. The next step should be the development of the most efficient industrial appliances possible with special reference to particular uses, like non-ferrous metal melting, brick firing, vitreious enameling, glass hardening, varnish making and food drying.

As gas is used more extensively the menace of the periodical coal strike will become less, and coal will be used more efficiently in great plants which pipe the gas to the consumer.

AMERICAN HOMES STANDARD OF COMFORT

It has been said that the United States has no distinctive type of art, literature, archiecture and other things which the old world claims as its own. We will not argue this question but we would like to point out a step in progress toward human comfort which is distinctively American, namely, the age of electrical conveniences.

What American would want to live in the average European dwelling or farm house? Even the hotels, except the more expensive ones, have few or none of the conveniences or luxuries which in this country are considered necessities in the smallest homes. While we may not have developed a distinctive national type of architecture in the United States we have developed a standard of house comfort which will be referred to in history as "the electrical home" period.

TRACTION LINES ARE INDISPENSABLE TO PUBLIC

Every phase of the life of a community," says a recent bulletin of the United States Chamber of Commerce "is affected by the success or failure of its traction lines in its field in providing a service that is indispensable to the public. Careful regulation, combined with care for the business stability and success of traction lines, should prevail in every city of country.

"Adequacy of service at the lowest rate compatible with continued efficiency is paramount consideration from point of view of the public, and neither factor can be sacrificed to the other witaout public detriment."

The Chevrolet Motor company now has in production a larger and greatly improved Utility Express one ton chassis which sells at the sale price as the former chassis.

Besides an increase in length, strength and weight, the new truck has undergone a radical change in height of the frame from the ground. The frame which formerly was 28 inches in heigth has been lowered to 24 and nine-sixteenths inches. This change affords maximum convenience for loading.

The wheel-base has been lengthened from 120 inches to 124 inches and the over-all length o fthe chassis from 172 inches to 177 inches. This frame is made of 6 inch instead of 5 inch channel steel. The weight of the new chassis is 2,030 pounds against 1,950 pounds, the weight of the former model.

Only one or two minor changes have been made in the power plant.

The rear axle has been re-designed and strengthnd. It is of the semi-floating type with pressed steel housing and a large rear cover which makes the unit extremelf accessible for inspection. The differential carrier is in unit with the third member assembly.

The front springs now are semi-elliptic instead of quarter-elliptic and the rear semi-elliptic have been lengthened from 42.25 to 45 inches.

The steering wheel is the semi-reversible full worm type mountel on a bracket riveted to the frame.

All brakes now have centering and equalizing devices and the rear wheels carry heavy-duty 30 by 5-inch tires as standard equipment.

The price of the new Utility Express chassis remains at $550. An almost unlimited variety of bodies may be obtained. The price of the Commercial chassis also remains unchanged at $425.

WE TAKE IT FOR GRANTED WHY INVEST BLINDLY?

The public has been warned time and again not to buy stocks in companies about which it knows nothing. There is a large amount of money ready for investment this fall; profit by the following story before spending it:

A girl who had worked for years as a clerk in a store had saved $600. A smooth stock salesman met her and painted a glowing picture showing profits she could make in his company, enough to make her independent for life. As a matter of fact, the company was not even operating. The girl was so overcome by the story, however that she invested her entire $600 without making any inquiry as to the merit of the concern. Needless to say, she received no dividends and her capital was lost. Any banker would have gladly advised her free of charge.

KEEPING THE STATE OUT OF BUSINESS

In spite of much agitation, no progress is being made in creation of new monopolistic state workmen's compensation funds. Bills providing for such funds have been defeated this year in Illinois, Wisconsin, Nebraska, New York and Massachusetts. On the other hand bills to dissolve the state funds were defeated in Oregon, West Virginia and California.

These state funds have not been so successful as to justify any extension and business men are becoming aroused to the fact that their interest lies in keeping the government out of business instead of giving it control of it, as is the result where monopolistic state funds are created.

Any weakening of the state in favor of monopolistic state workmen's insurance would mean encouragement for other socialistic schemes.

EDITOR IN RESPONSIBLE PLACE

William Allen White, editor of the Emporia, Kansas, Gazette, classes newspapers as public utilities.

"A newspaper," he says, is effected with a public interest as much as the street car, the telephone, the gas or electric plant and all other utilities.

An editor is really a trustee entitled to his profits, if they are clean and decent, to the fullest extent that he can make them, but not entitled to make his profits at the communitf loss.

"Unless he can give the public some valuable thing-information, guidance to his profits."

He concludes that "a newspaper is certainly a public utility."

SECRETARY MELON'S POSITION JUSTIFIED

If the publication of income tax returns can be said to have been of any advantage whatever, it has been to aid the cause of tax reform and tax reduction by demonstrating the extent to which capital has flowed into tax-exempt securities to escape the rates in the higher brackets

This proves the position of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon that an exorbitant tax on income nets the government less revenue than a reasonable tax which would not discourage the investment of capital in legitimate enterprise. It also proves the folly of trying to collect taxes equally from everybody while our laws permit the continued issuance of tax-exempt bonds which furnish a lawful method of escaping all forms of taxation. Will the people ever learn.

POULTRY FACTS

FALL REMINDERS OF FARM FLOCKS

The past few months have been our dull months with chickens. About all we could do was to raise a flock of good pullets for winter egg production. Any man who has tried raising poultry knows that the last few months have called for extra effort on our part. But the time will soon be here when we are going to reap what we have been sowing, writes J. W. Recknor, Jr., in the Farm and Ranch. The pullets will shell out the eggs and the price will soar higher as cold weather comes on. Our dull months, you see, have been our hard-working months. But to reap what is due us we must not lay down on the job now as cool weather approaches. The thing to do is to get everything in the best shape possible to clean up some cash this winter. The merchant puts his store in the best shape possible, cleans up and improves as much as he can, so as to be prepared for the fall business. Here is where his profits pile up. During the dull season he gets by, perhaps, but he counts on the business this fall for extra profits.

Clean up the old store. That is, cull out the nonproducers from the flock. Get rid of the drones. Keep nothing on the yards except money-makers. Turn all the shoddy goods to the market man, and hit the fall and winter months with a flock of healthy, vigorous bread-winners that bring in the dough. If you have a large flock and you are afraid to do the culling, then get the assistance of some one who has had some experience. It pays to cull. You get the same number of eggs on less feed and house room. The nonlayers eat up your profits and crowd the producers. Get rid of them.

If you are not feeding the birds as you should, get them on a good ration at once, as the pullets must be in condition to lay. If you have bred-to-lay chickens and you have done your part in keeping the pullets growing all summer and you continue to give them the right kind of attention, you need not fear but what you will be rewarded this fall and winter with a heavy egg production. Feeding right has much to do with a laying hen. She can't lay unless her food contains all the elements that go to make up an egg, and in the right proportions at that. An egg ration will have to be fed through the winter. It might pay to look into your feeding methods. Sometimes, by doing this, a mistake can be detected before it is too late.

Handling of Pullets in Autumn Requires Skill

No one thing requires more skill than the correct handling of a flock of pullets so that a maximum yield of eggs may be obtained all winter. First of all, the birds must be fat, as this gives them the necessary strength and endurance. To have them fat, large quantities of hard grain must be fed. Three-fourths of the food they consume should be hard grain. It is not as important during the latter part of their development that they have as much mash as when ready to lay. If milk is fed, very little mash is necessary. They should have plenty of green food at all times.

When the first eggs are found on the range, at least one-third or one-half of the birds best developed should be placed in their winter quarters. If the birds are allowed to remain very long on the range after starting to lay, the change to winter houses is sure to check them and may cause a fall molt. When the remaining birds show maturity, they should be put in winter quarters also.

Caution in Culling Is Urged by a Poultryman

Practically every rule has its exception. "Early molting birds are poor layers," say experienced poultrymen. This is true in the main, but there are exceptions.

N. E. Chapman, poultryman with the agricultural extension service, University of Minnesota, points out that many farm flocks went into a premature molt early in June because of lack of feed, hot poultry houses at night, and depredations of mites. Egg production by these flocks fell off rapidly, but as sufficient feed is supplied and poultry houses properly ventilated and the mites exterminated, the flocks are gradually increasing production.

"When culling such flocks, each hen should be carefully studied for evidence that the molt is about to subside," says Mr. Chapman. "The best hens will come back and they ought to have their chance. The poorest ones will, of course, continue to molt and should be discarded."

Balanced Dry Mash

The use of a balanced dry mash containing 2 per cent ground limestone in addition to the hopper of oyster shells will usually prevent the production of soft-shelled eggs. A failure of the egg-making organs to function properly might cause soft-shelled eggs. Such hens have to be located by the trap nest or by observation in small flocks. Then they can be marketed and replaced with vigorous pullets which will probably be free from such trouble.

Suitable Way to Cure Seed Corn

Moisture Must Be Removed From Ears Quickly to Prevent Spoiling.

Ears of corn that are picked for seed usually have more moisture in them than is suspected. Thirty per cent or even more of the weight of an ear is water. In air-dried ears the moisture content will range from about 15 per cent and under. The surplus is removed through curing and the sooner it is removed from the ears the less will be the danger of the seed spoiling. Moist corn will mold very easily and then the vitality of the kernels will be very much reduced. Furthermore, there is the danger of freezing weather which entirely destroys the seed if it is frozen. When seed ears are once cured no amount of freezing can injure them.

Reduce Moisture Content.

The chief problem then connected with caring for the seed is to reduce the moisture content as soon as possible. Proper ventilation and the application of heat will do this. In many cases suitable ventilation is all that is required, especially when corn has matured early and the fall weather is warm and dry. But we cannot always take for granted that this is the case. If we could, ears selected from the crib would be satisfactory to use. To avoid all danger seed corn should be cured in a place where there is an opportunity to provide some heat in case it is needed.

Since ventilation, to carry off the moisture, is so necessary, the ears ought to be stored in such a way that no two ears touch. This will provide a free circulation of air about each ear and it will thus cure in the shortest time possible and at the same time all kernels will dry out equally. This will make seed that will have the most uniform germination. This may be termed the individual-ear method of storing and is always the safest to use. Seed ears should never be stored in sacks or in piles. It is even dangerous to pile one row on top of another, at least until the moisture content has been considerably reduced.

Useful Stringers.

There are numerous devices that one might think of that will accomplish this purpose. Corn stringers answer the best, and any boy can make them. Finishing nails driven into a piece of board will do very well. The ears may then be driven into place by shoving the nails into the pith of the cobs at the butts. Care should be taken to drive the nails far enough apart so that when ears are arranged no two touch, as already explained. One may drive enough nails into a post that has been fastened to a base so that it will stand upright to accommodate a large number of ears. Racks made out of lath will also do very well. In fact, any scheme may be used which does not permit the ears to touch each other.

If the space occupied by the ears during the curing process is not needed for anything else and if the corn is protected from mice and rats, it may be left where it is until testing and planting time comes. If it must be removed then it should be packed away in containers that are mouse and rat proof and stored away in a dry place. Air-dried corn will keep if stored in a dry place, no matter how cold it is. Any amount of freezing will not injure seed ears when they are once cured out.

Sunshine Best Agent for Sterilizing Utensils

In order to keep dairy utensils in a thoroughly sweet-smelling condition they should be kept out of doors where they have a chance to air out and become dry. Sunshine is one of the best agents for sterilizing utensils.

A convenient and practical way to do this is to use a rack with wooden pegs over which the utensils can be hung. This exposes them to the sun and air, both of which help to keep them in a sweet, sterile condition. Do not try to wipe the utensils dry, but simply scald them after they have been thoroughly washed, and then hang them over the pegs so that they may drain and dry. "A dishcloth is often a source of contamination and does more harm than good.

In washing the strainer cloth it is advisable to first rinse it out in cold water. Then soak it in a hot solution of washing powder and then rinse out in clean, hot water. When clean it should be hung out in the sun to thoroughly dry.

Value of Cowpea Hay

A ton of cowpea hay contains as much food value as does a ton of wheat bran. Still, the bran finds a ready market among farmers at from $30 to $40 per ton. Soy beans are very rich in nitrogen and consequently in protein since all protein must contain 16 per cent of nitrogen. Cowpeas and soy beans do not leave so much nitrogen in the soil as clover, but a considerable part of the nitrogen is left in the soil in the roots.

Time to Cut Alfalfa

A good time to cut the alfalfa is in late afternoon because the sun will not wilt the leaves too quickly and cause them to shatter. Hay cut in the morning will not cure right because the leaves will be quickly wilted by the hot sun; the stems will also be full of juice; and the leaves will be dry and may blow away before the stems are ready to stack.

Sod Ground Is Best Place for Manure

Top Dressing Increases Hay Yield From Meadow.

Where is the best place to apply manure, depends largely on the condition of the fields and the manure. In my experience the best place for well-rotted barnyard manure has usually been on sod ground intended to be turned under for corn. Sod ground is usually deficient in those elements found in good manure.

Manure from the horse stable, where plenty of bedding is used, is generally too dry and heating and not rotted sufficiently to be applied to sod ground just previous to planting time, writes J. A. Raiser of Ohio in the Indiana Farmers' Guide. However, I have found it practical and not injurious at all, but rather beneficial, to apply such manure to sod ground up to within a month of planting time. The spring rains and weather conditions in general fit the manure to be turned under with beneficial rather than injurious effect by that time.

I have also applied both barnyard and stable manures as a top-dressing for meadows with very pleasing results. It greatly increased the yield of hay from the meadow. I have never found that any appreciable amount of the unrotted litter in the manure gets into the hay by being raked up and brought up onto the wagon with the hay through the loader. Usually the manure is hauled out and applied to the meadow right after the summer's crop has been removed, which gives it practically a whole year in which to decompose and incorporate with the soil. I find that this practice will not only benefit the hay crop but also to a large extent the following corn crop. Manure as a top-dressing seems to reach the roots of plants most effectually.

To Secure Best Results Spread Manure Evenly

Manure should be evenly spread for best results. This is difficult to do without a manure spreader. In some places it is the practice to haul to the field, put into small piles, and then spread from these piles by hand. There is no advantage to this, but it does increase the labor cost.

The value of manure can be greatly increased by the addition of some reinforcing material. Gypsum or land plaster, rock sulphate and acid phosphate are commonly used. Acid phosphate is the best to use. Besides taking up much of the ammonia, which would be lost through fermentation and leaching, it adds an available form of phosphoric acid to the manure. This is important, for manure is low in phosphoric acid. When acid phosphate is used at the rate of 40 to 50 pounds per ton of manure it supplies plenty of available phosphoric acid for the average crops. Limestone may be used with manure but it will not have the same effect on the ammonia that acid phosphate does.

Trench Silo Bulletin Is Ready for Circulation

That it has been amply demonstrated that corn, sunflowers, and some legume crops can be preserved as successfully in trench silos as in pit or upright silos is a finding of the authors of Special Bulletin No. 100, "Trench Silos in Minnesota," just issued by the agricultural extension service of the Minnesota university. Farmers who have used such silos to meet emergencies are said to be well pleased with results.

The trench silo is inexpensive, easy to fill, frost, fire, and wind proof, can be packed by horse power, needs no roof and no elevating of cut silage. These are advantages. Of course there are disadvantages such as unsightliness, short life, danger from poor drainage, and extra expense in feeding if the silo is some distance from barns or live stock.

Copies of the new bulletin can be had by addressing the Office of Publications, University Farm, St. Paul.

Wellston, O.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make me strong. I was troubled with my back and sides hurting me till I could not do my work, and whenever I caught cold it made me irregular. Since I have taken the Vegetable Compound my side and back don't bother me and I can do my housework and care for my children now, where before I did not feel like doing anything or going around. After my first child was born about four years ago I saw an advertisement in the paper about the Vegetable Compound. I knew it would help me, but I was afraid to try it because people said it would help you to have children and I knew I was having children fast enough. But I thought if it would help me it would be better to have a whole house full of children and have good health. I became stronger from taking it and my husband says I look like a live woman instead of a dead one. When Spring comes I am going to take your Blood Medicine as I am very thin. Famous Crater Uncovered

At Petersburg, Va., General Grant ran a gallery 500 feet to plant a huge mine under the Confederate earth work, resulting in the death, it is said, of 5,000 men July 13, 1864. Recently this old crater was uncovered by the United States battleground commission and found intact. It is regarded as the "greatest battlefield work" in history. The tunnels runs 35 feet under ground and is shored up by timbers. It is expected to reveal evidences of heavy carnage. It has been closed up since the day of the explosion.

SERVE COTTAGE CHEESE IN MANY DISHES

Making Cottage Cheese for Market—A Farm Woman, Mrs. W. W. Bond of Jackson, Tenn., Who Sells About $13 Worth a Week.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Most people like plain cottage cheese, whether made at home or bought. It is especially pleasing in summer and can be used in a great many ways. It is often eaten, either salted or unsalted, with sugar and cream or whole milk. Rich sweet cream is usually blended with it when it is to be served in this way, but sour cream or melted butter may be used instead.

Flavor Combines Well.

The flavor of cottage cheese combines well with a number of other flavors. Berries, peaches, or fresh fruits served with it are good; also canned fruits, dates, raisins, or other dried fruits, brown sugar, maple sugar, honey, jam, marmalade, or chopped nuts. The European combination of gervais or cream cheese with "bar-le-duc" strawberries or currants can be closely duplicated by creamy cottage cheese and strawberry or currant preserves.

Broken nut meats, chopped pimentos, finely cut green peppers, diced cucumbers, or other crisp vegetables may also be mixed with the cheese to make appetizing combinations, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture. Horseradish, onion juice, parsley, and cottage cheese blend well in flavor. The dry cheese, when made, should be seasoned well, packed into buttered earthenware or enameled dish, chilled and turned out on platter to be served in slices. Ground suet may be used for seasoning, if liked. When put up for sale cottage cheese may be packed in cylindrical boxes made of waxed cardboard.

Especially Fine in Salads.

Cottage cheese lends itself especially well to salads. If enough is used, the salad may be the main dish of the meal. French mayonnaise or boiled dressing go well with cheese salad. The cheese may be formed into balls or slices, molded in small cups, or passed through a pastry tube. A small quantity of finely ground left-over ham or corned beef may be mixed with cottage cheese, mustard used as seasoning, and the whole served on lettuce leaves with dressing. Other foods that combine well with cottage cheese in salads are crisp, fresh vegetables; cooked or canned vegetables; fresh canned dried or preserved fruits, nuts, olives, rice, potatoes. With the last two some highly flavored and bright garnish like beets, pimentos, or green peppers should be used; and celery, cucumbers, green peppers, crisp lettuce, or cabbage may be added to give succulence. Ground raw carrots and onions combine nicely with cottage cheese.

Almost any of the foods that are used ordinarily with cottage cheese, either in serving in plain or in salad, can be combined with it for sandwich filling.

Home Canning Methods for Various Products

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture is frequently asked why the water bath method of processing may be used in the home canning of fruits and tomatoes, whereas nonacid vegetables must be processed under pressure.

The explanation given is that for successful canning the temperature applied should ordinarily be the lowest possible that will insure a safe product. While no growing, or so-called vegetative, bacteria will survive for any length of time at the temperature of boiling water (212 F.), some bacteria are able to go into spore form. These spores are killed only by very long-continued heating at boiling temperature, especially if the fruit or vegetable being canned has juice that is alkaline or only very slightly acid. When the juices are acid, as in fruits and tomatoes, all forms of bacteria are killed more quickly at 212 degrees Fahrenheit, which is the highest temperature possible in the water bath. A water bath canner is commonly understood to be any covered vessel of sufficient depth for the jars or cans to be completely immersed while processing, and equipped with a rack or false bottom which permits water to circulate around the jars or cans. A wash boiler frequently answers the purpose in the household.

Corn, peas, beans, and other vegetables that do not have acid juice need to be processed under steam pressure at temperatures higher than 212 degrees Fahrenheit, and for this reason, the steam pressure canner is recommended for canning them.

Coloring and Perfuming Soaps Is Not Hard Task

Various colors may be obtained by using aniline dyes. Dissolve a small quantity of dye in water and add slowly until the proper intensity of color desired is attained. The following are used quite extensively in coloring soaps: Red, rhodamine B., yellow, fluorescein, green, naphtol green B.

Various shades, such as orange, chamois, salmon red, can be obtained by mixing the fluorescein and rhodamine B. Your druggist can supply you with these coloring compounds. Saponification of the grease should be nearly complete before adding coloring solution, as an excess of lye will destroy the coloring.

Perfumed soaps are made by the addition of artificial perfumes known as essential oils. The following are suggestions: Lavender, geranium, rosemary, hyacinth, wintergreen, sassafras, cloves, almond and bitter almond, caraway, banana, rose, palmarosa. The perfume is added just before the soap is ready to pour, and worked in by stirring. The quantity to use for a batch of soap will depend on the strength of the perfume and the individual taste. This will vary from a fraction of a dram to several drams. Your druggist can supply you with essential oils.

NOON DINNER FOR A GROWING CHILD

Foods Considered Important for Well-Planned Diet.

Here's a good dinner for a child between the ages of three and ten or for anyone else, for that matter! Egg on toast, greens, milk, bread and butter and rice with jelly—each group of foods considered important for a well-planned diet is represented in this menu, selected especially because of its suitability for a growing child. Other combinations could easily have been chosen. For example, an equally good menu would be a broiled meat cake or a portion of fresh fish, baked or broiled; stewed tomatoes, creamed potatoes and custard with a cookie.

The United States Department of Agriculture believes that simple, clean, wholesome food of the right kind, served to children in proper quantities, cannot be overestimated as a factor in assuring them normal health and sturdy development. A child between three and ten years old is usually well fed if he or she has plenty of milk, bread and other cereal food, an egg or its equivalent in meat or fish once a day, a little butter, a small portion each of carefully prepared fruits and vegetables, with a small amount of sweet food after his appetite for other foods is satisfied. If any one of these, except perhaps the sweet, is omitted his diet is likely to be one-sided.

Meal Well Adapted for a Child.

In the feeding of children too much emphasis is often placed on the foods that they ought not to eat and too little on those that they need. The first thing to do, therefore, in planning a day's food is to arrange three attractive meals that furnish all the needed substances.

Pulp Through a Sieve

To rub apple or any other pulp through a sieve, try a flat-bottomed jam jar. It is far quicker to do it with this than with the spoon that most cooks advise.

Why That Bad Back?

Is backache keeping you upset? Feel all tired out—so nervous and dispirited you can hardly keep going? Then look to your kidneys! Your kidneys rid the body of poisonous waste. But if they lag, impurities accumulate and poison the whole system. Then one is apt to suffer backache, stabbing pains, headaches, dizziness and other annoying kidney irregularities. If your kidneys are sluggish, help them with a diuretic. Use Doan's Pills. They are praised the world over. Ask your neighbor!

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 5. CLANTON ALABAMA, THURSDAY, OCT. 22, 1925. NO 6

CHILTON HIGH DEFEATS HOWARD "RATS"

Scoring two touchdowns in the last half Chilton Hi defeated the Howard "Rat" machine 12 to 6.

The first half was a "nip and tuck" affair neither team being able to score, although the local outfit had the edge on the visitors.

The second half opened with a red hot fight, the Gold and black machine going back with determination to win. Howard kicks to Chilton Hi. Beagle receives and is downed on his 20 yard line. Several line plays fail to net a first down and Beagle kicks to Howard. Howard downed on their 22 yard line. A fake end run proves unsuccessful and Howard is thrown for 8 yards loss. 3rd down Howard kicks to Chilton Hi.

Chilton Hi's ball on her 45 yard line. Beagle hits line for 6 yards. Stanfle goes off tackle for 4 yards more.

Beagle hits line for gain after gain until the ball is on the 8yd. line. Champion hits line for 3 yds.

On fourth down 2 yards to go Beagle passes to H. Rutland who crosses the line for the first Touchdown. McCloud fails to kick goal.

Score Chilton Hi 6—Howard 0.

Chilton Hi again receives and Beagle returns ball 20 yds. After a series of line plays Chilton kicks to Howard. Harris receives, but fumbles, and Chilton recovers the ball.

Chilton's ball on 14 yard line. Beagle goes off tackle for 8 yards. 2nd down no gain. 3rd down 1 1-2 gain. 4th down 1 foot to go. Beagle goes through for touchdown. Beagle fails to kick goal.

Score, Chilton Hi 12, Howard 0.

Howard kicks to Chilton. Ball returned 10 yds. Fake end run looses 6 yds

On fake pass Beagle and Champion tackle for 10 yds.

Beagle kicks to Howard. Howard blocks kick. Howard ball on 14 yd. Fine.

A pretty pass—Dobbins to Dowell nets Howard 8 yds. Another pass—Dobbins to McDonald nets a touchdown. Howard fails for extra point Score Chilton Hi 12; Howard 6.

The game ended after a few more minutes of play with Chilton Hi still at the large end of the score.

Chilton Hi has a hard, fast, fighting team and we are looking forward to her to win all other games.

In Beagle, Champion, Cox and Sanford Chilton Hi has one of the best high school aggregations in the state. Beagle, the Florida flash, power the line with sledge hammer blows, and is a great factor to the team.

"Big Boy" Cox is a heavy smasher, and does credit to his outfit.

James the giant tackle opens holes at ease and is a star in the line.

The whole team is to be commended for its showing, and coach Quarles has certainly put the fight and pep in the boys. Beagle was the outstanding man on the offensive and practically the whole team on offense.

The Gold and Black is well on their way to a victorious season, and we all are behind the boys.

Coach Quarles is to be commended on putting out one of the best prep team machines in the state.

ISABELLA VOCATIONAL AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL

How many of the people in our county know just what Isabella Vocational Agricultural School and community has done and is still doing? Two years ago our people with State Aid built and equipped a four thousand dollar building. The building contains a large lecture room, library, wood shop, blacksmith shop, two tool rooms, and a teachers office. In addition to this we have an acre plot, which is used for experimental use with cotton, corn, vegetables, fruit trees, and everything grown on the farm. A teacher with a college degree is maintained by Federal, State, and county funds for twelve months in the year. He spends his entire ... the farmers with their problems, annimal husbandry, ...

Every school boy in the work carries a home project from which he pays the expense of the project and has a good deal left. Many of our boys are wise enough to bank their net proceeds. Some of the most wide awake boys are going to have almost enough money to carry them through college by the time they have finished the four year course. Understand that they take their other ... this ... recognized ... school diploma, which admits them to college.

A college degree lady will be maintained in the same way as our agricultural teacher. Her duty will be to train our girls in proper selections and making clothing selection and preparation of proper foods, and every phase of better homemaking.

There has been wonderful crop movement in our community since the introduction of this agricultural course. Our people never knew or tried to have fall gadens. Now you find peas, corn, snap beans, tomatoes, cucumbers, onions etc., looking just as flourishing as in the spring. Where we produced from fifteen to twenty bushels of corn per acre, we now see vetch planted in the fall and a yield of from thirty to forty bushels per ... the next year. Growing cotton was almost an abandoned idea. Many of our boys and some men are now getting a bale per acre. We find orchards ... cared for and a greater yield and nicer fruit. Poultry raising is coming to the front. Improvement in the breed of cattle and hogs is being made. More cars. Radios, and nice musical instruments have found their way into our homes. In fact our people have more pride, look and feel brighter and happier.

We cordially invite all ... county to visit us October 23, the day of our Community Fair, and see ... of our work. Then we hope ... come back next fall and see our improvements.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

If Economy Is Wealth, Skinner Will Prosper

President Arthur Williams of the American Museum of Safety, said to a New York reporter:

"One and a half billions a year are lost in America through disabled help. This vast loss is due to parsimony—stupid unwillingness to install safety devices. Such parsimony is more shameless than Skinner's.

"A man rushed Skinner into a cigar store.

"'Two good domestic five-cent cigars,' he said, and slammed down a dime. Then he lit up, shook Skinner by the hand and hurried off, for he had a train to catch.

"Skinner lit up in his turn. He stood at the counter and smoked thoughtfully for a few minutes. Then he said to the salesman:

"'These cigars, I understand, are seven for a quarter. Well, here's your extra 15 cents. Just let me have the other five, please.'"

Points of Interest in Bequest to Doctor

The layman is inclined to wonder if the bequest of £1,000 by a man who died recently to the doctor who should discover that he was not really dead but only in a trance, might not be void as against public policy, observes the London Morning Post in a recent issue.

One can imagine cases where expectant heirs or widows sitting for, from, might let it be known that in the event of the testator being found to be only in a trance they would be prepared to double the stakes in favor of the doctor who knew enough to let well enough alone. It recalls the story of the Irish farmer's wife who was being carried into the cemetery when the coffin bumped into a gate post and the woman, who was only in a trance, came to and demanded to be let out. A few years later she really did die, and was again borne to the cemetery. As the coffin bearers approached the bereaved husband exclaimed hoarsely: "For livin's sake, boys, mind that post."

Why Spring Cleaning

The idea of spring cleaning came to the moderns by way of the Dutch people, who borrowed it from the ancient Jews. Cleaning up was a custom associated with the celebration of the Passover, which falls about the same time as Easter. The first mention of spring cleaning in the English language appears to have been in the writings of Sir Thomas More, the famous lord chancellor, who was beheaded by Henry VIII.

Origin of Chapels

The word chapel comes from capa, a chest. The word was originally applied to the chest in which the relics of a saint were deposited, afterwards to the apartment in a church or cathedral in which the chest was kept. These chapels were dedicated separately, but were known by the name of the saint whose relics they contained.

No Argument at All

The attorney was setting up illiteracy as a defense for his client, accused of forgery. "Why, your honor," he argued, "this man could not have been guilty of this crime; he cannot write his own name." "Your argument is worthless," said the judge. "The prisoner is not charged with writing his own name, but that of someone else."

Precisely

Said an Irishman at a conference in London: "Gentlemen, this is a most insidious proposal. If you accept it, you will find it to be neither more nor less than the thin edge of a white elephant."—London Tit-Bits.

Bedlam

Bedlam is the old synonym in England for a lunatic asylum. The word is a corruption of Bethlehem, due to the British custom of shortening proper names arbitrarily, as in Boston, for St. Botolph's town, Harden for Hawarden, etc. The hospital of St. Mary of Bethlehem in London, originally a priory founded about 1245, was afterwards used for the detention of lunatics, and gave rise to the popular use of the name.

ADOPTS NEW STYLE POINTS; GOLD IN SHEEN OF FABRICS

ALMOST every new tailored frock presents itself as another good reason for clinging to simplicity in the matter of Winter's coming line. But, at the same time, it has some advance heralds; and where shows itself another good reason for this, the skies will soon be dark, the adopting graceful style points in the handsewing and streetscape dim-ed autumn skies. The minds of stylists spared. Among the tailored vet, that we have seen also dwell on the manish extend the glad hand of welcome to note in dainty clothes—it is there, but puts an accompaniment to dominating feminine tones. Therefore our fine exponent of this womanliness of the tailored frock is shown in the illustration, to demonstrate that regains points in millinery. It seems as with lines and the straight silhouette of with the golden pheasant tones to

The vestee and turn-down collar may be of crepe de chine or batiste, adorned with tucks and tiny buttons, with undersleeves to match. Milady may be a picture in many of her more frivolous clothes, but she will never command more valuable admiration than comes to her in her clean-cut tailored frocks. She looks so "fit" and capable in them and so much the gentlewoman. There are many dependable wool fabrics for frocks of this character—twill, flannel, charmeen, rep, and broadcloth.

Jumper dresses, in the softer unmussable cloths, as jersey, and bulbriggan, are usually as plain as possible. But in smart belts and neck treatments, decorative jackets and frivolous handkerchiefs, made to be worn—not used, the eternal feminine manages to include a few vagaries.

Pheasant-colored velvet and gold are combined in the rich hat that leads off the group pictured here. It begs loges to the family of winsome poke shapes. Gold cords and a scroll work of narrow gold braid furnish its adornment. It is narrow at the back. A somewhat smaller shape called the Hollywood poke is very handsome in dark-brown velvet with a wreath of silver grape leaves about the crown and an ostrich pompon at one side. The small hat at the left in black and gold has a prankish brim which widens and droops at the right and completes a brilliant performance with a jeweled pin at the front. Next to it a turban of draped velvet in the steep maroon shade called "Black Prince," needs nothing by way of ornament. Petals made of ostrich flues adorn the large velvet hat at the lower right and they are joined by tiny gold cord. A twisted collar and tie of moire ribbon completes the design, which is attractive in any color. The always handy small black satin hat finishes up the list, trimmed with wide folds of satin and a pearl and rhinestone pin.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

A jar of good, well-seasoned salad dressing is always acceptable and always needed.

Fruit Salad Dressing.—Combine two beaten eggs, four tablespoons of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper; when well beaten add four tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one tablespoonful of mustard and a few drops of [illegible] hot water and cook in a double boiler until [illegible] Remove from the fire and [illegible] this dressing will keep [illegible]

Chestnut Croquettes.—[illegible] to one pound of chestnuts, [illegible] the yolks of two eggs, one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of pepper and one cupful of cracker dust. Form into croquettes, roll in egg and cracker dust and fry in deep fat.

Chicken Chicken.—Wipe [illegible] pieces of spring chicken, season with salt and pepper and place in a well greased baking dish. Cover with [illegible] Remove the pan and rub over with the following: Cream four tablespoonfuls of butter, add one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, one teaspoonful of celery salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Spread this mixture on the chicken, add a cupful of hot water and bake in a moderate oven, basting frequently with the liquid in the pan. Add more water if necessary. Remove the chicken to a hot platter, thicken the gravy with a little flour, season to taste and pour around the chicken.

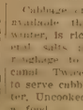
Savory Pork.—Cut two pounds of pork into one-half inch slices. Trim off the extra fat and fry for ten minutes in a hot frying pan. Add two slices of onion, one cupful of tomatoes, one shredded green pepper and cook five minutes. Add one pound of a cupful of flour, and just enough water to cover. Season and cook closely covered for twenty minutes. Just before serving add two cupfuls of cooked spaghetti. Arrange the ham on a platter with the spaghetti surrounding it.

If pork chops are parboiled in three or four tablespoonfuls of water, turning them until the water is evaporated then browned, they will be well cooked without being dry.

Cabbage is one of our good vegetables available throughout the fall and winter, is rich in vitamines and mineral salts and furnishes bulk for roughage to cleanse the alimentary canal. Twice a week is not too often to serve cabbage—the oftener the better. Uncooked it is more valuable as a food.

The Savory Rabbit.

Escoffier the famous chef, says the lack of enthusiasm about rabbits is a prejudice which he thinks is due largely to the lack of knowledge in cooking them. There may be true but this prejudice and lack of knowledge, troubles us not so much as the lack of the result. "First catch your hare" is the important step, then we will be glad to follow the recipes the chef recommends.



Curry of Rabbit.—Cut up the rabbit and cook in hot fat, seasoning well when the meat is well seared over. Add two medium-sized onions, chopped, and two teaspoonfuls of curry powder; cook fifteen minutes. Moisten with boiling water. Cover the pan and cook twenty-five minutes. Serve with a dish of hot rice.

Pilaff of Rabbit.—Prepare the rabbit and cut it into serving sized pieces. Into a saucepan place four tablespoonfuls of lard or butter, add two onions and when slightly brown season with salt and pepper and a medium sized onion, finely chopped. Cook ten minutes, then add six tablespoonfuls of clear consommé. Add one and one-half pints of boiling water and reduce by boiling. Cover the pan and cook over a slow fire for twenty minutes.

Rabbit Saute With Mushrooms.—Skin a young rabbit carefully, wash and cut into pieces. Put the liver inside and add the rabbit to hot fat in a frying pan. Season with salt and pepper and one onion, one clove of garlic chopped fine, three tomatoes, one dozen people's mushrooms, a few sprigs of parsley finely minced, with one-fourth cupful of sour fruit juice. Cover the saucepan and finish cooking over a moderate fire. Twenty minutes will be sufficient time for cooking if the rabbit is young.

—Rabbit Stew.—Cut up the rabbit into serving sized pieces, put to cook in boiling water to cover with one onion and a tablespoonful of vinegar. Remove the onion, add dumplings, a little cream or rich milk and serve as one does stewed chicken with dumplings.

When the age of the rabbit is indeterminate, parboiling is always best before cooking in fat or roasting. Parboil in water which has a tablespoonful of vinegar added; when tender brown in butter or brush with butter and broil or bake.

Under the date of March 6, 1902, Mrs. Maggie Durbin, 1[illegible] Avenue, Little Rock, Arkansas has the following to say about her experience: "I was troubled for five years with a chronic disease. I tried everything I heard of, but nothing did me any good. Some doctors said my trouble was catarrh of the bowels, other consumption of the lungs. The medicine I took did no good. A friend advised me to try Pe-ru-na. I did. After taking two bottles I found it was helping me. I continued. Am now well and strong."

A letter from Mrs. Durbin, dated December 1, 1923, shows that even after more than two years, she is in good health: "I still recommend Pe-ru-na to my friends who need a good medicine and everybody is pleased. I thank you many times for what Pe-ru-na has done for me."

There is nothing strange in this experience of Mrs. Durbin. It has been repeated thousands of times by sufferers from catarrh and catarrhal diseases.

Clean Ground Is Very Important

Sanitary Measures Have Been Found Valuable for Care of Swine.

The importance of sanitary conditions in the hog lot for the prevention of disease has been stressed for a number of years. When men first began to talk about sanitation in the hog pen they were laughed at—the idea that cleanliness could be of any value to a hog seemed incredible to those who were accustomed to seeing the old sow search out the filthiest mud-hole to be found for a sleeping place on a hot summer day.

After the United States Department of Agriculture had discovered the life history of the roundworm and had shown how the eggs of this pest hatch in barnyard filth, and how they are picked up by and infest young pigs, a different attitude has been developed among farmers who have come to clearly understand how the roundworm propagates itself and how the so-called filth diseases can be as easily avoided as they can be contracted by the pigs if their yards are kept clean.

Important to Poultrymen.

The sanitary measures that have been found valuable for the hog man are now considered of equal importance and value to the poultry man. A large majority of the average farm poultry flocks are suffering from filth diseases the same as our hogs. Coccidiosis is one of the diseases responsible for heavy chick losses every year. It is caused by a parasite, known as coccidium, with which old chicken yards invariably become infested and which can be avoided only by raising chickens on fresh ground every year.

The coccidium parasite is not kept off the farm through streaks of "good luck," nor does "bad luck" bring it into the yards. It is a natural parasite of chickens and wherever the latter are raised in large numbers the former invariably appears. The only way to hold this, and all other similar pests in check, so far as that may be possible, consists in preventing it from perpetuating itself. When a chicken yard has been used for a year, plow it up, seed it down to crops for a year or two and raise the chicks on other ground in the meantime. It is as important to provide fresh, clean ground for chickens each year as it is for the pigs, if the common ailments, responsible for nine-tenths of our chicken troubles, are to be avoided.

Use Clean Ground.

There is neither satisfaction nor profit in raising hogs or poultry in lots that have been in use for those purposes for a number of years consecutively. Get out of that habit. Raise all young stock on fresh ground each year. Lay out the land to be used for hog and chicken raising with the idea of having new ground ready for each season's work. It can be done. You may need a movable colony house or two for the chickens as well as some movable houses for the pigs, but the expense will be light compared with the losses ordinarily sustained when hogs and chickens are raised in lots that have been used for those purposes for many years in succession.

Proper Time to Cut Soy Beans for Crop of Hay

Soy beans should be cut for hay when the beans begin to harden and the lower leaves turn yellow. Hay that is cut before this time is rather too green and is more difficult to cure; if it is left much later than this stage, some of the leaves will drop off. They are the most valuable part of the plant, so far as feed is concerned, and they should be cured with the rest of the hay.

Soy beans are much harder to cure than clover or timothy hay because of the large amount of green forage per acre and the rather coarse, green, sappy stems. In good curing weather, it usually requires three or four days of curing before the hay is in proper shape to put into the stack or mow. They may then be picked up out of the windrow with the loader. In case of rain or poor curing weather, it may be necessary to turn the windrows over with a side delivery rake. Especially will this be true where the beans are very heavy.

Inspect Wheat Bins for Weevil and Meal Worms

Wheat bins at this time of the year may be harboring meal worms and weevil, declare specialists at the Kansas State Agricultural college. If the bins are inspected for these pests before cold weather sets in the worms may be found near the edges of the bins and on the top of the wheat. As the weather gets colder the worms go towards the center of the wheat.

Infested wheat can best be treated before the temperature gets lower than 70 degrees, the college officials warn.

Rye Pasture for Hogs

Rye makes a splendid fall, winter and early spring pasture for hogs of all kinds. Fall pigs that have access to rye pasture during the winter make much better use of other feeds than pigs that do not have access to it. Brood sows that have access to rye pasture during the winter farrow stronger and thrifter pigs. Rye should be planted for pasture as early as moisture conditions will permit.

Feeding Soy Beans to Poultry Flocks

Rich in Protein, but Lacking in Minerals.

Soy beans have a place in the poultry ration, according to poultry experts at Purdue university. A study covering a four-year period with approximately 1,000 birds of the White Leghorn and Barred Rock breeds shows that in general the soy beans need a mineral supplement to go with the beans if they are to equal tankage and other animal protein supplements.

Tankage carries about 60 per cent of protein and 20 per cent mineral. Soy beans are rich in protein, but carry only about 6 per cent of minerals. The Purdue investigation shows, however, that a mash mixture composed of 50 pounds bran, 50 pounds of middlings and 45 pounds of soy bean oil meal with 10 per cent of a mineral mixture composed of 22 pounds acid phosphate, 24 pounds limestone and 15 pounds of salt will give about the same results as 20 pounds of tankage mixed with the bran and middlings.

In the 1923 experiment the birds fed on the soy bean and mineral ration produced 137.6 eggs, the tankage-fed birds produced 121.9 eggs and the birds fed on soy beans without minerals produced only 27.2 eggs per bird. The Purdue standard grain ration, composed of 100 pounds corn, 100 pounds wheat and 50 pounds oats, was fed with these mash rations. This experimental work is described in Purdue bulletin No. 293, which can be obtained from the university at Lafayette, Ind.

Prevent Barn Drafts by Using Good Air Flues

Special provisions for the ventilation of dairy barns are important, according to observations made by the rural engineering department of the State College of Agriculture, New Brunswick.

Cracks or openings, even including open windows, do not provide controlled movement of air; hence, they do not provide good ventilation. They allow a change of air, but with it excessive cooling and drafts in cold weather. Since ventilation should be under control, a system of intake and out-take flues equipped with dampers is necessary. Such flues may be built by the owner or bought as a complete system.

Tests have shown that in order to maintain the proper standard of purity and to carry away the moisture which is given off through the cow's respiratory processes, 50 cubic feet of air a minute are needed. To supply this amount of air, about one-fourth square foot opening in both the intake and the out-take flues is required. This figure is based on flues about 20 feet high.

Flues should go as directly as possible from barn to ventilator cupola at the ridge, as any angle or slope of the flue retards the air. Since the flues must be airtight, they should be made of two layers of boards with building paper between. With such flues the movement of air may be regulated by means of dampers.

Intakes should be located on opposite sides of the barn, because of the changing direction of winds.

Solve the Silo Problem in Various Communities

Probably the strongest objection to the use of the silo is the labor necessary at filling time. However, records show that it requires practically the same amount of total labor to harvest the entire corn plant in any other manner. It is simply a case of mobilizing enough labor at one time, instead of using all fall and part of the winter to do it. Many communities solve the problem by working together with their available labor and in some cases hiring a few extra men. Of course the more help one has, the faster the job. In a few days' time the fields are cleared for wheat or rye seeding, and the feed is stored for the winter. The big advantage is larger feed value obtained from the silage as compared to any other method of harvesting.

How many colts have you seen on farms during the past few years? Indications point to high prices for horses during the next decade.

All sweet potato growers would greatly increase their yields if they would practice careful seed selection at digging time. This must be done before frost.

One farmer cut four seven foot posts from black locust that had been planted only eighteen years. Locust will help solve the fence-post problem now that chestnut is gone.

Grasshoppers deposit their eggs during the fall in the hard soil along roadsides, fence rows, and other undisturbed places. The disking of these areas will destroy a large percentage of these eggs.

A COMMON INTEREST

Many bitter arguments and much actual strife has been engendered by a discussion of the tariff. A common phrase is that "the tariff is wrong in principle and vicious in practice." That is easy to say but it is hard to prove

The tariff enables many lines of agriculture and manufacturing to exist in the United States which could not exist without it. It enables American workmen to maintain wage scales that would be impossible if industries which employ them were competing with foreign products produced with cheap labor which could enter this country duty free

Would the most rabid tariff hater advocate wage reductions in this country to foreign standards? Would he permit an unrestricted flood of Japanese, German, French, Italian or Belgian manufactured goods and farm products to be dumped on this market regardless of their effect on American industries and agricultural pursuits?

The tariff collected from goods shipped in here by foreign countries amounts to some $500,000,000 a year. Supposing foreign manufacturers and farmers could lop off the $500,000,000 tariff charge; could American industries stand this cut in price and maintain our standard of wages? If this $500,000,000 annual federal income was destroyed, government expenses would not be reduced one penny, but taxpayers would have to make up the amount in addition to their present tax burdens.

These are a few of the business questions involved in the tariff which have absolutely no political significance. They affect us all equally, whether we be Republicans, Democrats or members of a third party.

When a man advertises that he has money to give away he immediately betrays the fact that he has lived a secluded life and does not know a musical comedy producer.

Private Ownership of the Railroads

As a result of careful economies and improved efficiency—brought about by trained railroad men—the steam carriers of the United States have, since their return to their owners at the termination of Federal control on March 1, 1920, notwithstanding an increase of 46% in taxes, reduced their operating expenses by a total of more than one and a third billion dollars.

Such expenses, including taxes, for the year 1920 were nearly six billion dollars; whereas in 1924, notwithstanding the movement of approximately 7½% more carloads of traffic, they were reduced to four and a half billion dollars, or a reduction in four years of practically 20%—demonstrating conclusively the wisdom of railroads being operated by trained railroad men.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad reduced its operating expenses in 1924, as compared with 1920, $14,250,000. This large reduction was passed on to the public in the form of a fifteen-million dollar saving in freight costs, and was effected notwithstanding the actual increase in the amount of traffic, amounting to approximately 20%.

PERSONAL LIABILITY FOR FIRE CARELESSNESS

Personal liability for damages arising from fire on account of the alleged gross carelessness of another will be given its first test in the courts of Ga. as a result of the filing of one of the few suits of its kind, in the Bibb county superior court. The petition, instituted by the Macon Cabinet Works against the Southern Box and Basket Company for damages of $17,000, is of particular interest for the reason that insurance companies and officials and citizens of Macon are working in conjunction to reduce the normal burning ratio of Macon.

Mass meetings of civic bodies and citizens have been held to correct conditions are invoking fire insurance rates and assessing heavy fines for their violation.

When the public once awaken to the fact that property owners, who carelessly or wilfully permit fire hazards to exist on their premises, cause thousands of dollars of useless expense to other citizens in the shape of necessarily higher insurance rates, there will be a more general demand for fines and penalties to be charged against such property owners who are responsible for loss fires.

In the present case the defendants were notified to clean up their property. All notices were ignored and accumulations of trash were permitted to exist with resulting fire losses to adjoining property. This case deserves national attention and should form the basis for legislation relating to personal liability for negligence in maintaining fire hazards.

Keep the traffic SHRDLYSHRLD

WHY NOT PUNISH FIRE OFFENDERS

Traffic departments of cities and states can pass traffic regulations laws and ordinances until they are black in the face in an effort to curb automobile accidents. But so long as they fail to do the one most vital thing to protect the traveling public, namely, require of a driver an actual test as to his competency to drive a machine, accidents will continue to increase.

And so it is with fire prevention work. A city or state will talk fire prevention. It will spend thousands and tens of thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars buying fire fighting equipment, maintaining fire departments and state insurance departments. But the one thing which could be done at least expense to prevent fires, is entirely overlooked, namely, laws and ordinances which prohibit the accumulation of rubbish piles and fire hazards of a known character. If such hazards a cumulate and are permitted to remain and cause loss, why not fine the owner just the same as an automobile driver is fined for breaking traffic laws?

If half the energy was expended by fire prevention officials that is expended by traffic officers, the saving in life and property to the American public would be many times so great.

GET THE INDUSTRIAL IDEA

The West has three great primary industries, lumber, oil and mining. Many states have lumber or oil or mining, but few other than far West and Pacific Coast states combine the three in quantities sufficient to help supply a world demand.

These three great basic industries upon which hundreds of thousands of persons depend for a living, are vitally affected by economic conditions and political agitations. They must meet world competition in many forms. They must maintain sound labor conditions, as the bulk of their money is spent for labor, and it is a constant effort to operate theses properties in the face of increasing or new demands for local and state purposes.

If the public could but realize that in the long run it is the people and not great industries which are hurt the most by conditions that prevent their successful operation, it would be more active in its efforts to maintain conditions which would insure their steady operation with resulting employment for labor.

Every man should acquire the industrial idea to realize where his individual prosperity is hooked up with industrial prosperity.

The East and South have basic industries which correspond to those in the West and the same conditions apply so far as their ability to operate is concerned.

How The Drouth Helped Alabama

This advertisement appeared in the Birmingham News on September 20th. It is reproduced by Alabama Power Co. through courtesy of the Birmingham Trust & Savings Company, to which institution Alabama Power Co. is indebted for this recognition of its efforts to give Alabama industries continuous power service at all times.

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY
Thos. W. Martin
President.

Nothing has occured within the last few years in Alabama to emphasize more strongly her strategic location than the recent extended drought.

On account of low water and the shortage of hydro-power, plants in many of our sister states were compelled to curtail operations at a great loss to the industries affected.

Not so in Alabama. Not for a single day, nor even an hour, did the wheels of industry in Alabama cease to turn. Steam power plants, supplied with coal from Alabama coal fields, met the crisis.

And after meeting Alabama's every need they came to the rescue o four neighbors and supplied their deficiency.

Industrial enterprises want continuous power service. They know now where to find it.

Four Were of One Mind

By J. A. WALDRON

(Copyright.)

TESSIE and Bessie, Harry and Jack were a happy quartette and two blissful pairs among a multitude at Low-Neck-by-the-Sea. Other chaps and damsels were paired, in accord with summer usage, but none were as constant and satisfied with one another, with each other, and with everything about them as these.

The four had been together for weeks and had made up their minds that as pairs and as friends they should remain for ever and a day.

Bessie was Jack's fiancee and Tessie was Harry's; and their spirits were like the weather, which had continued glorious so long that local wiseacres shook their heads and predicted some atmospheric convulsion as to a sequel.

Up to a certain day Bessie and Jack had agreed perfectly upon diversion. No such thing as time-killing was thought of, for the hours flew magically, and moonlight evenings had charms that brilliant days could not surpass. And Tessie and Harry were as mutual. If it happened that Tessie wished to motor or golf, Harry coincided happily; or if Bessie expressed a desire to go out in a motor boat, Jack at once sent for his craft. And there were times when all four were of one mind. Jack and Harry each had a motor boat, a runabout, a motor car, and plenty of the sinews of joyous activity, vulgarly called money.

On this certain day, however, when Jack suggested motoring, Bessie said she wanted to play tennis. Strangely, Tessie also wanted to motor, while Harry was for canoeing. Long at even, they now were at odds. But proverbs presumed to have been based upon human conduct down the ages verify such things.

Jack still insisted upon motoring. At the moment it seemed that his insistence made Bessie determined not to motor. Harry stood aloof, having expressed his preference. Tessie caught more of Jack's mood, and declared that she would motor with him if Bessie remained of an opposing mind—and, of course, if Jack cared to have her along. That settled it. Bessie's eyes snapped, and Harry turned his back.

So Tessie and Jack entered the latter's long, low, rakish car, after due preparation, and shot away, never even turning their heads. Bessie, seemingly forgetting her tennis desire, strolled down toward the boat house, and Harry came after, with his paddles.

Jack drove his motor in silence, yet at speed, until the hotel vicinity was lost and something like seclusion was found. Then he slowed down

"Well?" he queried, peering into Tessie's eyes.

"Well?" she replied.

"Ripping! Wasn't it managed well? Your part of it, I mean. You're the cleverest girl I ever knew!"

"Is that all?" She looked at him with a tantalizing pout.

"Only the beginning. You're the dearest, the sweetest—"

"S-s-s-h! Not so fast! Am I not still engaged to Harry?"

"That's only an irrelevant formality. Engagements are made to be broken. Hello! I've got a sooted spark plug!"

He stopped the machine. He didn't have a sooted spark plug. He simply had an excuse. Before he got out, in line with his subterfuge, he looked up and down the road and found a clear right of way for the subsequent proceeding. He put an arm about Tessie and kissed her without ado. And Tessie kissed him back. After a bit, the spark plug being forgotten, the machine started slowly.

"I don't believe either of them suspected a thing!" said Tessie.

"No. I've been acting for days and days, just as I told you when we met alone for a moment last night. And I guess you have, too."

"You guess?"

"I know. And I'm tired of acting. I've pretended to be in love with Bess, but you—you—you!"

The machine stopped again.

"But weren't you . . . really . . . in love with Bess . . . once!"

"No. I thought I was. But how different!"

Jack and Tessie decided, before returning to the hotel, that Bessie and Harry had no rights whatever they were bound to respect. But they were nervous on their return, and debated as to whether they should look up the unfortunates and settle the matter above board—amicably if possible, but surely even if enmity should ensue—or run away forthwith without explanation. They decided to face the consequences.

Harry and Bessie could not be found, and for a very good reason. As Jack and Tessie entered the boat house in search of them, they were coming out of a cottage at Rockville, a hamlet down the coast.

In the door of the cottage, which adjoined a little church, an elderly man peered at them benevolently over spectacles, and two elderly women of the household, looking over his shoulders, watched them sympathetically. "Remember, now, my children," said the elderly man, "I should have married you without question if you had secured a license!"

HOW TO MAKE TOOTHSOME FRUIT BUTTERS

In Many Communities Apple Butter Is Made Over an Open Fire.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To many people fruit butter means apple butter and nothing else; but good as well-made apple butter is, that made from pears and peaches is equally good, and a supply made from different fruits will add variety to the preserve shelf.

The following recipes for various kinds of fruit butters have been tested in the laboratories of the United States Department of Agriculture, and are recommended as delicious and wholesome:

Apple Butter With Cider.

The peeled and sliced apples may be cooked in the boiled cider to make the butter in one operation or they may be made first into apple sauce, which is then cooked in the boiled cider. With apples of coarse texture the latter method is no doubt preferable; otherwise the method to be used is one of personal choice, as both make equally good butter. The cooking should be continued until the cider and apples do not separate, and the butter, when cold, will be as thick as good apple sauce. The thickness is determined at frequent intervals by cooling small portions.

It usually takes about equal quantities of sweet cider and peeled and sliced apples to make butter of the right consistency. In other words, 5 gallons of sweet cider should be boiled down to 2½ gallons, and 5 gallons of peeled and sliced apples should be added to it either uncooked or as apple sauce.

Two of the essentials of making good apple butter are long, slow cooking (4 to 5 hours) and constant stirring. If sugar is used, it should be added after the cooking of cider and apples is about two-thirds done. About a pound of either white or brown sugar is the usual proportion per gallon of apple butter, but more or less (or not any) may be used, to suit the taste. Apple butter is spiced according to taste, about half a teaspoonful each of ground cinnamon, cloves, and allspice being used for each gallon. These are stirred into it when the cooking is finished.

While still boiling hot, apple butter should be packed in hot sterilized glasses, glass jars, or hermetically sealed stone jars, with tightly fitting covers, and processed in a steamer, if it is to be kept for some weeks or months.

Apple Butter With Grape Juice.

If a grape flavor is desired in apple butter it may be obtained by the use of grape juice. To each gallon of peeled and sliced apples, cooked into sauce and strained, 1 pint of grape juice, 1 cup of brown sugar, and ¼ of a teaspoonful of salt should be added. These should cook slowly and be stirred often for two hours or until of the desired thickness, then stir in 1 teaspoonful of cinnamon and pack hot in hot containers and sterilize.

Pear Butter.

The pears should be ripe enough to cook up well. After being peeled they are cored and sliced, put in a preserving kettle with a little water, and cooked slowly until soft. The sugar is then added, 1 cup to 1 quart of sliced pears, and cooking is continued very slowly, with frequent stirring, for 1½ to 2 hours. The butter should then be smooth and of the consistency of thick apple sauce. A little lemon juice, with ginger, cinnamon, or other spices to taste, should be well stirred into the hot butter. Pack while hot in hot scalded containers and process with steam.

Peach Butter.

Put the peaches in a wire basket and dip them in boiling water a few seconds until the skin slips—test by rubbing the fruit out of the water and rubbing the skin between the fingers. Dip the peaches into cold water, peel, and pit them. Well-ripened freestone varieties are best. Mash the pulp, and cook it in its own juice without adding water. If it is rather coarse, put it through a colander or coarse wire sieve to make a butter of fine texture. To each measure of pulp add a half measure of sugar, cook slowly, and stir frequently until the product is of the desired thickness. The meats of several pits may be cooked either whole or sliced in each gallon of butter. While still hot pack in scalded jars or glasses with tight-fitting tops and process, or cover with hot paraffin

CAN AND SAVE ALL SURPLUS APPLES

Many of Early Varieties Do Not Hold Up in Storing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Storing apples fresh for later use is of course the best possible way of keeping them if it can be done. Many of the early maturing varieties, however, will not hold up in storage, and also there are oftentimes windfalls and imperfect apples that must be used at once if used at all. To prevent wasting these apples, the United States Department of Agriculture suggests "putting them up" in various ways.

The housewife may can her apples in any of the ways which will result in a canned product that is easy to use in the form she is apt to need it. For instance, if she makes apple pie often, she may prefer simply to pare, core, and slice or quarter the apples, so that when she opens a can it is ready to be made into pie. In this case avoid adding too much water. If the family likes apple sauce, some of the surplus and windfall apples may be cooked first and the hot sauce then canned. Green apples make a particularly good sauce with a taste of nutmeg or cinnamon for those who like spices. Another way is to can the apples whole, either boiled in syrup or baked as for serving. Canned baked apples may be dressed up for company use and special occasions, by being spiced and colored with cinnamon drops. These whole apples are canned hot.

The water-bath method of canning is recommended for apples by the department. A water-bath may be a wash-boiler or any covered vessel of sufficient depth for the jars or cans to be completely immersed while processing, and equipped with a rack or false bottom. The pressure canner at 212 degrees F. may also be used for apples.

When the apples have been cut in pieces, they are usually packed directly into the jars and covered with boiling hot medium syrup. This is made by bringing to the boiling point one part of sugar to two parts of water. The rubbers and tops are placed on the jars, and springs are adjusted halfway, or screw-tops placed on loosely. If the canning is done in tin, the cans are sealed completely. The jars or cans are then placed in the canner. Quart jars are processed for 20 minutes, pint jars for 15 minutes, and No. 2 or No. 3 cans for 10 minutes, counting the time as soon as the water surrounding the jars begins to boil actively.

Apple sauce is packed hot into the jars and processed for five minutes. Baked or boiled apples are covered with hot medium syrup and also processed five minutes. When the time is up, remove the jars from the canner, seal airtight at once, invert, and place out of drafts. Cool tin cans immediately by plunging them in cold water.

All jars and cans should be so marked that each lot can be identified. Keep them at room temperature for at least a week. Discard any showing signs of spoilage and watch others of the same lot until it is certain that they are keeping.

A COVINGTON, KY., WOMAN

Makes Remarkable Recovery

Mrs. Harry Ashcroft Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Her of Severe Illness and Pain

MRS. HARRY ASHCROFT
835 BEECH AVENUE, COVINGTON, KY.

Covington, Ky.—"I was so weak and nervous I could hardly do my housework as I could not stand because of the bearing-down pains in my back and abdomen. I sat down most of the time and did what I could do in that way—as washing dishes, etc. One day a book describing Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines was put in my mail box. I saw how the Vegetable Compound had helped others so I gave it a trial. I had to take about a dozen bottles before I gained my strength, but I certainly praise this medicine. Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine for poor blood. I was cold all the time, would be so cold I could hardly sit still and in the palms of my hands there would be drops of sweat. I also used the remedy for that and I recommend it also. You may publish this letter and I will gladly answer letters from women and tell my neighbors about these medicines."—Mrs. HARRY ASHCROFT, 835 Beech Avenue, Covington, Kentucky.

Mrs. Boyer Also Found Help

Gilman City, Missouri.—"I was in such a condition that I could not eat nor sleep to do me any good and I felt draggy all the time. My head ached, my right side and back would almost give me at times, and I could scarcely walk only a short while at a time. I was so nervous and so nervous, irritable and despondent that I thought I could not stand the strain much longer. I had been this way more or less for ten years, but the last two years was just terrible. I took medicines, but got little relief until I began to take the Vegetable Compound. I took three bottles before I could see any change at all. I have taken seven in all and am improving right along. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash also, take the Liver Pills. I can do most of my work now, and I live on a farm and there is lots of it to do. I have, now, two the garden, raise chickens and tend to the milk."—Mrs. T. M. BOYER, Gilman City, Missouri.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"Age is not the time for constantly whipping the bowels into activity. A lash can not be used every few days."
—DR. CALDWELL

If Past Forty, Adopt a Regulating Laxative

Most men and women past forty must give to the bowels some occasional help, else they suffer from constipation. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect a gentle aid to weak bowels.

Is your present laxative, in whatever form, promoting regularity for weeks and often for months—or must you "purge" and "physic" every day or two to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, colds, or sour, gassy stomach?

One dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even for those chronically constipated.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

BLACKHEAD MOST COMMON DISEASE

Blackhead is one of the most common diseases of turkeys. It is caused by a microscopic parasite that infects especially the liver and cecum (blind pouches of the intestines) of birds from six weeks to four months of age. Older turkeys or chickens, however, are not immune to the trouble. Chickens may be a source of infection and not show signs of the disease.

The term "blackhead" is misleading, as any disease which causes a decrease in the oxygen supply of the blood may cause the head to become darkened in color. The characteristic symptoms are drowsiness, a tendency to lag behind the flock, loss of appetite, diarrhea and sulphur-colored droppings. The dark color of the head is common, but it does not always ... reliable diagnostic symptom, as it may be the result of some other trouble. ISABELLA VOCATIONAL SCHOOL FAIR

A number of Clantonians went out on Friday morning to attend the Isabella Vocational School Fair.

The fair was a success in every particular. There was on display a marvelous array of agricultural products, poultry, and live stock, grown under the supervision of the vocational teachers. Suitable rewards were made for the best grown in each line.

Avery interesting program, county Supt Education presiding, was given in the auditorium of the school building in the morning and in the evening. The following gentlemen were on the morning's program:

Educational Outing.

On Saturday morning Mr. W. E. Martin, of the Grammar School, accompanied by fifteen of his pupils went to Birmingham to spend the day in the enjoyment of an educational outing. The party was considerably redured on account of threatening weather.

The party went out to Avondale and took in the zoo. East Lake was visited. The chances are that the school children enjoyed the time spent in the Boy's Industrial school, more than any of the other happy hours that were crowded into the day.

Mr. Martin and his party went up to Birmingham on the early morning train and returned in the afternoon.

Some Guests

Mr. D. M. Bates, Stephenville, are welcome guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dorcas and a number of other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Bates are formerly of Chilton county, but have resided in Stephensville, Texas, for twenty six years.

Mr. and Mrs. Bates like to live in Texas but somehow there is an ache-a-void that overcomes them, and they seek relief by returning to their native heath. This is their fifth visit in the twenty six years they have spent in Texas.

Baptist Unity Association At Chestnut Creek

The Baptist Unity Association held one of the most interesting sessions in its history at Chetnut Creek Baptist church near Coopers on Thursday and Friday of last week.

Though the weather was threatening, the meeting was well attended.

County Supt. of Education, Buford Lawrence was re-elected as Moderator and presided throughout the session. W. J. Billingsley was elected Clerk. Much business was dispatched. A splendid program was executed. Dr. L. L. Gwaltney's number on the program was particularly enjoyable and edifying.

The feasts of Thursday and Friday were thoroughly satisfying and attested the skill of the church women of the community.

Honoring His Guest

Mr. M. L. White is honoring his weekend guest, L. I. Smith, Birmingham, civil engineer of the L. & N. R. R. by inviting Messrs. George Trotter, J. R. Upchurch and Hugh Foshee to be his guests at camp Riverside to spend the day on Saturday. The day spent in fishing and though moderately successful, all had a fine time.

Sustain Painful Injuries

Austin Thomas and James Parrish while on the grammar school grounds on Friday, were run over by a large boy who was chasing a flying ball. The knuckle of Austin's wrist was dislocated by the instant fall and James was considerably bruised up.

Rev R. L. Bolling of Ga., Fills Baptist Pulpit

Rev. R. L. Bolling of Ga., representing the interests of the Baptist Theological Seminary of Louisville, delivered a splendid sermon to the congregation of the Baptist church on Sunday morning.

Eventful Trip to Birmingham.

Messers. Pinter and Phagan motored to Birmingham on Monday. The trip might have been uneventful but for the fact that when they arrived in sight of home they found themselves hemmed in by soft earth at the bridge just outside Clanton, and remained stuck hard and fast until rescued three hours later.

Miss Ethel Baker Winner.

In a popularity contest put on by the Protestant Methodists of Mt. Pisgah, on Saturday evening Miss Ethel Baker became winner. The award to Miss Baker was a beautiful embossed cake arranged in a fancy basket surrounded by a wreath of pink roses, all of which was the work of a Clanton artist.

The votes were one penny each, but Miss Baker's purse held $31.59 at the close of the contest. The competition was heated. All the contestants were pretty and popular, so Miss Baker is receiving many congratulations upon her good fortune in winning.

The rally day program, given during the evening in which there were numbers by the boys and girls as well as the denominational leaders, was splendid. The net proceeds of the evening's entertainment amounted to nearly one hundred dollars which will be used for the benefit of the Protestant Methodist cause.

THREE CHILDREN DROWN IN RIVER

Father Backs Auto Into Raging Tennessee Stream

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 25.—Two small children were imprisoned today in a closed automobile at the bottom of Calf Killer river, and a third—a baby in arms—was wrenched from its mother's breast and drowned by the swollen waters, when John Henry Griffith accidently backed his car into the stream one mile from the family home at Sparta, Tenn., about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Griffith was in a critical condition at her home tonight, suffering from exposure and grief because of the loss of her three children, who had not then been given up by the muddy river, which was flowing madly out of bank and defying divers.

Griffith also is said to be in a very serious condition due to the loss of blood resulting from cuts suffered in the rescue.

The drowned children are aged six months, four years, and six years.

Griffith, his wife and their three children were enjoying a Sunday afternoon drive in their closed car, when, one mile from the city, they decided to turn around and head back toward home. In making the turn, Griffith accidentally backed too far, the car sliding over the muddy five-foot embankment into the swift river, which is far out of bank.

The man a brakeman on the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, in a heroic fight to save his family smashed a front glass door, dragging his wife with the smallest child in her arms, out with him. His efforts to return and take the other two children from the rear seat were futile, for the swift waters had snatched the car to its bed 15 feet below.

The mad waters then churned the man and wife, with the baby clutched to her breast.

The annual Fiddler's Convention of Verbena was held in the new school auditorium, October 16, 1925, as the initial program of the news school building. The program was very successful, a large crowd being present from our neighboring towns.

There were many nice prizes contributed by the citizens of Verbena. The first was a cash prize of five dollars which was awarded to Mr. Robert Johnson. Among the good fiddlers were: Mr. and Mrs. Jim Robinson, "Watermelon" Johnson, Mr and Mrs. Tom Coker, Mr. Robert Johnson and Mr. Vernon Clarke.

There were special selections given by Mr. Sid Gibson, Aubray and Houston Robinson, Ulysses Thomas and Frank Gulledge.

The judges were Mrs. T. F. Burnside, Mr. Guy Caffey and Mr. T. N. Howard.

Drinks and candies were sold by the Girl and Boy Scouts of Verbena.

This convention was directed by the Verbena Parent-Teacher's Association for the benefit of the new school auditorium. One hundred fifty dollars was cleared from all sources.

Narrowly Escapes Fatal Injury

While putting her room in order on Sunday morning, Mrs. Joe Calloway narrowly escaped fatal injury. She committed to the flames what appeared to be harmless rubbish.

The explosion that followed knocked the grate out in small pieces. Five caps of dynamite secreted in theh rubbish was the cause of the explosion.

The family physician bandaged the wounds.

Many friends of Gladys Thomas, who was operated upon several days ago for tonsilitis, will be glad to know that she has sufficiently recovered from her illness to return to her school duties.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lawrence motored to Birmingham on Tuesday and spent the day shopping. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence were accompanied on the trip by Mrs. W. W. Fox.

SCORES ARE HURT, PROPERTY DAMAGED IN SUNDAY TIWSTER

TROY, Ala., Oct. 25.—Sixteen persons were reported killed and more than a score injured by a tornado which struck Pike county, Alabama early today. Many homes were laid waste, causing thousands of dollars damage.

Relief measures wer undertaken this afternoon and first aid was rushed to several communities which bore the brunt of the terrific storm. Victims who fled here were sheltered by citizens of Troy and the local hospital was taxed to capacity in taking care of the injured.

Sweeping down with tremendous force, the storm roared through this section, leveling homes and barns and rushing on its way southwestward.

Loss of life was reported in the Good Hope section at Luverne in the Oak Grove neighborhood at Union Springs, in Comer and Spring Hill, the last three places being in Barbour county, and at Eufaula, where three negroes were reported killed and several persons injured.

The known dead are:

White:

Ralph Knight, 18.

Ruby Knight, 16.

Frances Knight, 6.

Mary Ellen Knight, 3.

Mrs. Eliza Davis. 65.

Negroes:

Beatrice Tillis and baby.

Ella Lee Blue.

Near Luverne two are known to be dead, both white. They are:

Mrs. Peacock, 105.

Tom Long 70.

The injured:

Walter Knight and wife, not expected to live.

Herman Knight.

Ray Knight.

Frank Davis.

Bob Jordan.

J. P. Davis.

Mrs. Frank Davis.

Pat Swanson and wife (negroes).

In the Oak Grove neighborhood, Noah Griffin's home was destroyed and Mr. Griffin, his wife and one child seriously injured. Two children escaped unhurt.

At Orian, on the Montgomery-Troy road, the home and store of Walter Kelley was completely demolished. Mr. Kelley and his family all escaped injury, while a brother was slightly hurt.

Property Is Damaged

In theh path of the storm which came up from theh west and passed out toward the northeast, a trail of wreckage was left. Homes demolished; barns blown down, cattle and other livestock wandering aimlessly about, household goods strewn along the highways and through the fields; and timber laid low and farm crops completely ruined.

In one neighborhood, Goodhope, five people were killed and one whose family of nine almost wiped out. Fourteen houses were completely destroyed. Noah Griffin, one of the seriously injured, was hit on the head by a heavy piece of timber which was blown through the window of his home just before the cyclone picked it up and scattered it to the winds.

The residents near the path of the storm were aroused by the terrific wind and the cries of the injured, and worked in a heavy downpour of rain and vivid flashes of lightening for hours rendering aid to the injured and searching for th emissing. The dead and injured were scattered along the roads, in the fields, and around the demolished homes.

Injured Are Attended

An emergency call was sent to Troy for aid and the ambulance was sent to bring the injured to the Masonic hospital for attention. The Carroll Mercantile company ambulance was pressed into service and assisted in bringing the injured to the hospital. Doctors of Troy are using every means of relieving the suffering and a committee headed by Dr. McKinnon is raising funds to relieve immediate distress of the needy.

According to reports reaching Troy, much damage was done at Brantley, Glenwood and Goshen. Reports from these places are meager, but no loss of life is reported from either place.

The cyclone followed intense heat and threatening weather Satudray night and was accompanied by a severe electrical storm.

For the purpose of taking care of immediate needs, a mass meeting was called for 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Methodist church by Mayor John Gamble. About 500 attended the meeting and the sum of $2,000 raised. Dr. McKinnon was authorized to name a committee to canvass the county Monday and assist in raising additional funds and rendering assistance to the injured.

Another Pentecost

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

"GOIN' to night-meetin', Billy?" Kitty Weems asked, sepulchrally, from the depths of the meal barrel she was clearing out. Billy stood just back of her, a full sack upon his shoulder. As she turned to untie it, their faces came so close together Billy had hard work to keep from stealing a kiss. She had been to mill with a wagonload of grist—taking the Weems' sack purely for accommodation. Who wouldn't for a widow lady, the best neighbor in sickness or health, even if she hadn't the prettiest girl in the neighborhood for daughter?

She stood back a pace, lifting very blue eyes to repeat her question. Billy answered: "No, sir-ee. Bob! Ef I go I got ter be tied and toted. I'm so sick of the sight. They've mighty nigh cramped at our house, all three since Sunday—now it's Friday—and they want ter hold out all next week."

"They will—if they get any mourners tonight," Kitty said reflectively. "That's why I asked you—I thought if you went, maybe we'd agree to go up together—and I 'most know if we do Betsy Joy and Tim Lockert will tag after us—and maybe a lot more. Then—they'll shorely keep on, till there's a real revival—like they had when I was little."

Billy stared at her. "Ain't you 'fraid?" she asked tremulously.

"'Fraid of what?" Kitty asked innocently.

Billy half gasped. "'Fraid of bein' struck dead like Ananias and Sapphira," he said sweetly.

Kitty tossed her head. "No! I ain't a bit afraid," she flung at him. "Why should I be? Ma laid me sprinkled into the church when I was just a month old."

Bill grinned sheepishly: "Ef you'll go along with me, and lemme kneel by you—why, maybe I'll agree to drive the wagon tonight—and save saddlin' horses for all the gang—"

"And lemme go with you—you know I hate ridin' behind old Sister Wixon." Kitty cried joyously.

Billy nodded, but after a breath qualified assent with: "You got ter ret on the wagon-board with me—else I'll stay home."

That evening Billy drove through a world moon-silvered as in a dream, barely conscious of the ungonful of hay and humanity, laughing, scrambling, jesting, behind him, wholly armored against the roughness of the road, the antics of his tricky mule-team, even the shouted greeting of riders passing them at the gallop. Two of them were ministers.

Unpainted wooden benches flanked the aisles of the church in squares either hand of the pulpit. In front of it was a vacant square, knee-deep in clean new straw, with narrow backless benches hemming in three sides of it, and the outer edge of the pulpit bounding the fourth. Aisle benches were filled raggedly, with men and women together—the rule of separate sitting was relaxed for night meetings.

Old Brother Amos slid suddenly into the vacant square, opened his hymn-book and his mouth simultaneously, and raised the tune of an old hymn so familiar there was no need of lining it out. Everybody stood throughout the singing; everybody likewise joining in with a will. In course of it the ministers came in, vital, bright-eyed, drawing quick breaths, knelt each a moment in the pulpit in silent prayer, then rose as one man asking of the eldest member: "Brother Dunenn, lend us in prayer." More singing followed the prayer, then a brief sermon from a good text. A prayer—very brief, a song, dear and known by heart—then the exhorter began to speak.

A long minute—nobody stirred "Come," the minister repeated. "Come! Come!" Billy got up, caught Kitty's hand and went forward, his face that of one moving in a trance. As the pair knelt, other feet pattered swiftly up the aisle. Sure enough Betty and Tim had followed.

Thus began what lives in tradition as another Pentecost. Swiftly the whole assembly was fluid—sinners crying out for redemption, those of assured faith kneeling beside them, comforting, praying, thus under-voicing the singing that seemed to reach up to heaven. For it rose straight from exalted hearts, from voices attuned to higher than earthly issues. It held power, conviction, forgiveness, the tenderness of love divine—it went on and on, up and up, till the moon hung low in the west.

All through it Billy knelt, silent, tense, holding Kitty's hand so hard it hurt—but she did not draw it away. Then after the final prayer, as someone raised the Doxology, the boy and girl stood up, glorified, heaven itself in their eyes.

Billy said tremulously: "At last I know God loves me. More even than Kitty and me love each other. We'll keep on lovin' as long as we keep livin'. Now Brother Henson," to the elder minister, "please, sir, marry us—before the benediction."

It was done—with everybody laughing and crying—so happily thrilled only good flowed from them toward the young pair. This translated itself into concrete blessings, when a month later Billy and Kitty set up housekeeping in their new cabin home. It had been furnished throughout by the unbidden guests at the wedding—and, strange to relate, there was nothing in all the largesse that the young folk would have changed if they could.

VARIOUS WAYS OF USING SOY BEANS

Appreciated for Their High Food Value.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Soy beans have long been a staple food product in the Orient. As they are becoming better known in this country, and appreciated for their high food value, people are beginning to inquire as to the best ways of cooking them. The United States Department of Agriculture says that the yellow, brown and green varieties of soy beans are excellent for use as green vegetables, and can be cooked like lima beans or any other of the varieties of beans used green. Dried soy beans can be prepared in much the same way as navy and other dried beans. The soy beans, however, require longer soaking and much more cooking than the familiar varieties of beans. Either a pressure cooker or a fireless cooker can be used to advantage, therefore, in cooking them. In general, dried soy beans need to be soaked 24 hours and cooked for at least 2 hours. The time varies considerably with the dryness of the bean and its variety. It is better to simmer any soy beans than to boil them rapidly. Since the soy bean is very rich in fat, it does not require additional fat in cooking, but some persons prefer to add a little meat fat or butter because of the flavor.

Roasted soy beans are somewhat like roasted peanuts in flavor. Soak the beans over night. Boil them for one hour in salted water. Spread in a shallow pan, and roast in a moderate oven. Sprinkle them with salt while they are still warm.

The following recipes suggest uses for boiled soy beans:

Soy Bean Loaf.

2 cupfuls boiled soy beans
1 cupful bread crumbs
1 cupful chopped cooked celery
1½ tablespoonfuls flour
1 teaspoonful curry powder
1 teaspoonful salt
½ cupful milk

Scald the milk, add the flour which has been mixed with a little of the milk, and stir until thick. Mash or grind the soy beans; mix with the celery, thickened milk and seasonings and form into a loaf. Bake in a moderate oven.

Soy Bean Vegetable Soup.

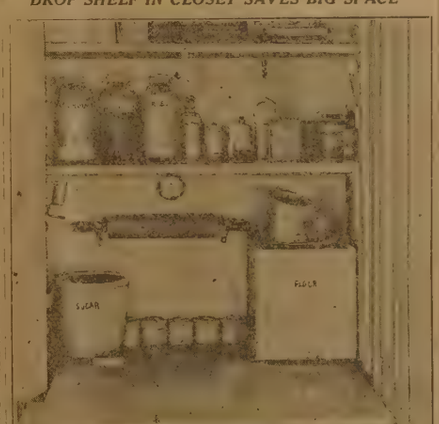
2 cupfuls boiled soy beans
2 cupfuls strained tomato pulp
2 cupfuls water
¼ teaspoonful pepper
¼ cupful chopped celery
2 teaspoonfuls onion juice
1 teaspoonful salt
2 tablespoonfuls flour

Cook the celery in the water until tender. Add the tomatoes, bean pulp, and seasonings to the celery. Add the flour which has been mixed with a little water, and cook for twenty minutes.

Use for Leftovers

When you have two or three vegetables left over, even though there is but just a spoonful or two of each, combine them into a macedoine salad or a potato harlequin.

DROP SHELF IN CLOSET SAVES BIG SPACE



A Closet Made Into a Kitchen Cabinet—Showing Drop Shelf Down.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Having a closet containing a hinged shelf which can be let down to do duty as a counter or table is a good arrangement. Where there is not room for a kitchen cabinet the closet can be made to serve instead. With the shelf up, the door can be shut and the contents of the closet concealed effectively. The farmer's wife in Wythe County, Va., who planned this ingenious use of a closet entered her kitchen in the county better kitchen contest, under the terms of which each contestant was to make the most improvement possible for the least outlay. The contest was carried on under the co-operative direction of the United States Department of Agriculture and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The closet was fitted up with a hinged drop shelf which rested when down on an extension leg. The equipment and materials for baking were grouped together in front of the shelf, and a high stool was placed near by, ready for use. Groceries were kept on the shelves above, in cartons, glass jars, or other neat, tight, containers. Whatever could be hung up was placed on nails, on the door or the edges of the shelves. Cook books were kept in a rack on the door.

A dish closet with a drop shelf close to the stove is a convenient place to keep cups and saucers, pitchers, bowls, or any other dishes that are often filled directly from the stove. When there is no need of using the shelf it is held up with a small wooden catch.

A homemade cabinet has a shelf, which is really a biscuit board. Chains hold it in place, and the tilting bins for flour and meal are also held by chains. The bins go back and the shelf drops down when not in use, covering the pot closet below. The same idea could be followed inside a closet. Precautions should be taken in any case to make the bins mouse and insect proof by fitting them with tight covers.

Provide Canned Corn to Help Out During Winter

Every housekeeper likes to have a few jars of canned corn among her reserve supplies, especially if the corn is grown in the home garden, but many do not feel quite confident about canning it properly. The United States Department of Agriculture says that corn can be safely and successfully canned at home if a steam pressure canner is used. Corn is one of the non-acid vegetables which should be processed at a temperature higher than 212 degrees Fahrenheit which is only possible under steam pressure.

The corn should, of course, be as fresh as possible when canned. Handle it within two hours after picking, if possible. To prepare it for canning, cut it from the cob without precooking. Add half as much boiling water as corn by weight and heat thoroughly. Pack it hot in the jars, add one teaspoonful of salt to each quart, and 2 teaspoonfuls of sugar if desired. Adjust the springs half way, or place screw tops on loosely, and completely seal tin cans before placing them in the canner, which should be hot. Process 80 minutes at 15 pounds pressure, or 250 degrees Fahrenheit.

In using the pressure canner wait until steam flows fully from the pet cock before closing; otherwise the pressure is no indication of the temperature. Commence to count the time when the pressure reaches the desired point, not before.

Seal glass jars as soon as removed from the canner. The texture of products in tin is removed if the cans are cooled quickly by plunging in cold water. All cans and jars should be so marked that each lot can be identified. Keep them at room temperature for at least a week. Discard any showing signs of spoilage and watch others of the same lot until it is certain that they are keeping.

Homemade Soap Is Much Harder Than Store Kind

Perhaps you have wondered why some of your neighbors bother to make home-made soap when it can be purchased so easily. As families increase in size, soap bills usually get to be quite an item, and home soap making will save $5 to $10 a year.

If you will save your grease and meat scraps you will be able to make dozens of bars of fine white soap. If you follow carefully the recipe on the lye label or one in the manufacturer's booklet, you will have splendid success. You will find that home-made soap is much harder and does not wash away so quickly as store soap.

Waste grease, as a rule, is of no value whatsoever except for soap making. When a sufficient quantity has been saved to combine with six cans of highest-test lye, you can make domestic soap at a cent a bar. On the basis mentioned you would have more than a hundred bars of pure soap, which would last the average family one year and would be worth over $6. If you try it once yourself you will be very much pleased with the results obtained.

Fate Made Mockery of Writer's Theory

Lord Gladstone was a great believer in early rising. "I always take seven hours' sleep," he once told a friend. "I should like to have eight. I hate getting up in the morning, and I hate to get up at the same time every morning. But one can do everything by habit, and when I have my seven hours' sleep I get up." The recent revival of this story has recalled that a century ago there appeared a book by A. C. Buckland, entitled "Letters on the Importance, Duty, and Advantages of Early Rising, Addressed to the Heads of Families, the Lover of Nature, the Man of Business, the Student, and the Christian." The author advocated, from personal experience, the reduction of the hours of sleep to the lowest number possible. A note by "The Editor," appended to the fifth edition of the book, laments the death of Mr. Buckland at the age of twenty-five.

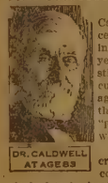
Old Folks Must Not Use "Physics"



DR. CALDWELL AT AGE 83

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils every day or two.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels of old folks. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 50-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

GETTING ACQUAINTED

"We're all small animals in this house," said the Wombat from Australia, a funny little animal who enjoyed lying on his back, even when he talked.

The Wombat.

"We are," said the white-nosed Coati.

"That's all I want to know," said the Wombat. "Or, at least all I want to know is that some one agrees with me and has the intelligence to see that I am right.

"So now, dear animals, I will go to sleep if you will excuse me."

And the Wombat, the funny little Wombat, still lying on his back, went sound, sound asleep.

He did not pay attention to anything for a long time. Sleep was so pleasant.

"The zoo is nice," said the white-nosed Coati.

He hoped some other animal would feel like a little chat, now that Wombat had gone to sleep.

And, sure enough, one of the squirrels blinked his eyes and looking at the Coati, said:

"If you were a little fatter you'd look like a fox."

"That's what so many say," the white-nosed Coati answered.

"Another squirrel has awakened and is ready for a talk," he added after a moment.

"Yes," said the second squirrel, "I am ready for a chat."

"Good," the others said.

And then added:

"What are you going to say for yourself?"

"Well," the second squirrel replied, "I am certainly not going to say my say for some one else. I am the one who is going to chat and so I don't want for another creature.

"I chat for myself."

"Oh, that's just a saying," one of the others said. "When some one sees a friend and wants to hear what news the friend has and what the friend has been doing the some one will say:

"'What have you to say for yourself?'

"I see," said the second squirrel.

"And by that I mean that I both see and understand. I believe the expression 'I see' often means just the same as 'I understand.'

"Very often, very often, in fact frequently," the others said.

"Now let us hear you," they added, "and your real name."

"I," said the second squirrel, "am known as the Southern Fox Squirrel, and hearing something about a fox I did not know whether you were mentioning part of my name or not."

"No," said the Coati, "the first Mr. Squirrel here was remarking that I looked a little like a fox.

"But we are delighted to have you join our conversation."

"Thank you, thank you," said the Southern Fox Squirrel. "Before I came to the zoo I lived in Florida," he continued after a moment.

"Do you like my suit?

"I like different colors in furs, so my tummy is covered with yellow fur and my back and tail are of simple but very nice black."

"You're handsome," said the Coati.

"And you, First Mr. Squirrel, won't you tell us about yourself?"

"I'd be delighted to, I am sure," said the first squirrel. "I am called the Variable Squirrel because I have such a variety of colors.

The Southern Fox Squirrel.

"My tummy is covered with red fur. My tail is of gray and black.

"The top part of my body, including my head, is covered with brown and gray fur."

"You're well named," said the Coati. "Well, it's nice to know the names of one's neighbors in the zoo, and when the others in this house of small animals are not so sleepy, let us find out more about them, eh?"

And the squirrels agreed that it would be a good plan to become acquainted with their neighbors in the zoo.

She Knew the Breed

Little Marion and her next-door neighbor, Donald, were engaged in an absorbing conversation.

"What are anarchists?" asked little Marion.

Then Donald swelled with wisdom.

"They want everything anyone else has got, and they never wash them selves," he replied.

"Oh, yes!" cried little Marion, with enthusiasm. "I see—they is just little boys growed up!"—Gulf Coast Lumberman.

LITTLE LADIES IN WARM ATTIRE; PARIS SHOWS GENIUS IN HATS

ADDED to the usual staple shades used for coats, the live, warm colors of this season are chosen for young girls—the wine and copper tones, new blues, greens and reds. They are all particularly cozy looking in suede cloths and pile fabrics, and velveteen is a popular addition to the latter group. It is a featured material in both coats and dresses and is often used in combination with other goods—nothing is prettier in the warm brown and strong blue tones, or in the new, deep maroon, called "Black Prince." Kasha is among the popular.

Typical Good Style for Girls.

lighter-weight clothes and there are several smooth-surfaced weaves available among the goods mentioned—all suited to the dressier styles in coats for children. Heavier and coarser cloths are used for utility coats.

Nearly all the dressier coats boast a fur collar and fur is generously used on garments for girls in the last half of their teens. The coat shown in the picture is typical good style for younger misses, and speaks for itself. It is made of suede cloth in a warm brown shade—with hat to match. This pretty affair has an ornament at the front, set with a dark topaz jewel—of the millinery sort—thus paying tribute to the fashion, set by Queen Mary, of wearing a jewel on a plain hat. The coat-and-hat-to-match idea deserves

What has made them what they are today and which of their several charms has contributed most to the tremendous success of those small velours and felt hats that still so much of the millinery horizon? They are the darlings of the mode and fate has been kind to them; for their success is not transitory—they are here to stay for some time.

Paris reveals its genius in the group of six chic hats, in fine velours or felt, that are at once so simple and so superior. It takes a good grade of soft velours, or felt, to get the best effects—that is the most becoming lines and most pleasing colors. Even so, hats of this kind are not extravagant in price and they stand much wear. Just at present there is a fad for gold in collars, appliqued figures and other trimmings, on felt and velours hats, but the variety of ways for adorning them is endless. In the hat at the upper left, two slashes are cut in the crown at the right side and one at the left. Folds of satin emerge from the lower slash and form a collar across the front, disappearing in the slash on the left side. Another slash allows three folded ends to escape, and lest we forget to notice the millinery art-istry, small embroidered figures are placed by the slashes. The soft velours hat at the right is among the most becoming models, with its irregular, upturned brim. It has a narrow gold collar and a fancy gold pin thrust in the brim. A dignified, square-crowned black felt, at the center of the group, disdains any other decoration than a band of felt about the crown crossing at the front, where an ornamental pin holds it in place. A small, flat cluster of bright feathers is added to the hat at the right with collar and self-colored belting ribbon. A similar hat at the left has tailored loops of ribbon under a fold in the brim, and two ends of it posed against the side crown. A velours hat with velvet brim facing finishes the group. Of all brim movements this has proved most popular. Two small gold ornaments are placed where the brim is caught to the crown.

the success it has made, having the chic that belongs to ensembles.

Coats for girls from sixteen to twenty employ more lavish fur trimmings and feature the season's new style points, in flared skirts, fabric details in trimming, new styles in collars and revers, and even the introduction of side plaques of fur and pointed cuffs. But these are all discreetly used—especially for sweet sixteen—whose charm is dimmed whenever one is overdressed.

THE FIGHT AGAINST STRONG DRINK

(Temperance Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—Eph. 6:10-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might."—Eph. 6:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Loving and Obeying Our Parents.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Be Strong.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Strong Armor for a Hard Fight.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Fight Against Strong Drink.

This is not a temperance lesson in the usual sense that it deals with intoxicants, but in the sense that it has to do with the believer's walk in conflict with the devil. Perhaps there has been no time when the evil one has made such a terrific fight as he is now doing in his attempt to nullify the Eighteenth amendment. The Christian has been saved by grace. Though his redemption is free, between its beginning and consummation there is a real, severe and protracted conflict. This conflict is most difficult and dangerous because it is not with flesh and blood, but with principalities, powers and spiritual hosts of wickedness in high places. Though the conflict is severe and painful, we should bravely battle on because the issue is sure if we go forth in the panoply of God.

I. The Source of the Believer's Strength (v. 10).

It is in the Lord. Only as the branch is united to the vine, or as a limb is united to the body, is there strength of life. We dare not attempt this conflict in human strength and wisdom.

II. The Enemy (vv. 11-12).

The enemy is the devil, a personal malicious being, with his many subordinates. His personality is proven by the names given him, and actions predicated of him. He has an exalted position, and is mighty in power, and all unsaved men are under his power. He is the original sinner, and is extremely cunning. He has power over death; enters into men; blinds their eyes; lays snares for them, and sifts God's servants. In carrying on his work, he has his churches and ministers. However, he is resting under a curse. The death blow was given on the cross, and he will receive his doom in the lake of fire.

III. The Christian's Armor (vv. 13-17).

This means that his weapons of offensive and defensive warfare are not of man's devices. Just as his strength is from the Lord, so is his armor. The believer dare not act merely on the defensive. He must attack his spiritual enemies as well as resist their spiritual attack.

1. A Girdle of Truth (v. 14).

The truth of God, sincerely and honestly embraced, alone will avail in this conflict. Reason, tradition, speculation and dead orthodoxy will fail in the crucial hour.

2. The Breastplate of Christ's Righteousness (v. 14).

As the metal plate covered the vital organs of the warrior, so the righteousness of Christ protects us from the enemy's assault.

3. Feet Shod With the Preparation of the Gospel of Peace (v. 15).

This suggests the firm foothold of the soldier and his alacrity—readiness to proclaim the message of peace.

4. Shield of Faith (v. 16).

By this he is able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. Christ is the object of that faith.

5. The Helmet of Salvation (v. 17).

Consciousness of salvation enables a man, knowing that he is a child of God, and fellow-citizen with the saints, to lift up his head with confidence and to vigorously assault the enemy.

6. The Sword of the Spirit (v. 17).

This is the Word of God, the Christian's offensive weapon; with it he can most effectively put his enemy to flight. This Christ used in the temptations in the wilderness, Matt. 4:4, 7, 10, 11. The church of Christ has won all her triumphs by the Word of God. Where she goes on using this, she goes on conquering, but when she falls back upon reason, culture, traditions, science, or the commandments of men, she goes down in defeat before the adversary.

IV. The Way to Get Strength to Use the Armor, and Courage to Face the Foe (vv. 18-20).

This is by prayer—and prayer alone.

1. Every Variety and Method of Prayer Should Be Employed (v. 18).

2. He Prays for His Comrades, "All the Saints" (v. 18).

He sees all the believers standing shoulder to shoulder against the enemy.

3. He Is Persistent (v. 18).

Some Things to Beware Of

Beware of idle moments! Beware of the beginnings of evil! Above all, and more than all, beware lest you once admit the fatal intrusion of evil thoughts. In solemn and awful earnest I would say to you, "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation."—Farrar.

SEASONABLE FOODS

As beef loaf is still a very popular and economical meat to serve, as there is no waste, it will probably continue to be served on our tables, at church suppers and at outings. The following is a good one to try:

Beef Loaf.—Take one pound of the round of beef and one pound of fresh pork—both well ruixed after chopping—add two beaten eggs, one cupful of bread crumbs, one cupful of tomatoes strained to remove seeds, salt and pepper to taste, with a teaspoonful of finely minced parsley and a few dashes of celery sense. Roll into a loaf, place in a one-loaf bread pan and bake one hour, basting occasionally.

Rice Pudding.—Take one-fourth of a cupful of rice, wash and put into a baking dish with one-third cupful of sugar, a handful of raisins, a pinch of salt and a grating of nutmeg and a quart of milk. Bake in a slow oven, stirring at first, then brown. Serve with a hard sauce using nutmeg as flavoring. If the milk is skimmed or not rich add a tablespoonful or two of butter, for richness.

If you are fond of codfish be sure to serve:

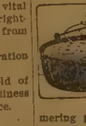
Codfish Chowder.—Shred half a pound of soaked salt fish and parboil for a few minutes to remove the salt. Dice one-fourth of a pound of fat salt pork into half inch dice, fry until brown in the chowder kettle, add three sliced onions, six sliced potatoes and cover with boiling water. Cook until the vegetables are tender then add the codfish and one quart of scalding milk, six milk crackers and such seasoning as one's taste desires. Serve hot, a cracker to a bowl. This dish is especially good served for luncheon or supper on a chilly night.

Banana Lemon Whip.—Boil together two cupfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of water and the grated yellow rind of a lemon until it halve. Soften one-half of a package of gelatin in cold water and add to the hot sirup. Stir until dissolved, then add the sifted pulp of four ripe bananas, mixed with the juice of two lemons. Pour all into a large bowl to cool, and when the edges begin to harden beat the mixture with a large sized Dover egg beater, continuing to beat until the whole is creamy. Pour into a mold and chill, or serve piled into sherbet glasses.

Lobster Chowder.—Remove the meat from a two-pound lobster and cut into small dice. Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter, add the liver (the green part), and two milk crackers; scald a quart of milk with a slice of onion and add milk to the lobster. Cook the body bones ten minutes in water to body bones ten minutes in water to body, strain and add to the chowder. Season with salt and pepper and serve at once.

Autumn Dishes.

A delicious and nourishing soup to serve for luncheon, dinner or supper on a chilly day is:



Veal and Sago Soup.—Chop five two and one-half pounds of lean veal. Cover with three quarts of water and bring slowly to the simmering point and simmer two hours, skimming occasionally; strain and reheat. Soak one-fourth of a pound of pearl sago one-half hour in cold water, stir into the hot stock and cook thirty minutes or until the sago is perfectly clear; now add two cupfuls of scalded milk and pour slowly on four egg yolks slightly beaten. Season with salt.

Salmon Supper Dish.—Heat a can of salmon, turn out on a hot platter, removing the skin and bones and tossing slightly with a fork. Around the salmon heap riced, well-seasoned mashed potatoes, and around the potatoes pour a rich white sauce, using two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour to a cupful of rich milk; cook until thick and season well with salt and cayenne. Serve at once.

Lamb Chops With Pork.—Remove the fat from six chops cut two inches thick. Wrap round each a thin slice of fat salt pork—fresh will do—overlapping and fastening well, with a wooden toothpick. Place on a greased broiler and cook until the meat is well done. Season with salt and pepper, spread with butter and let stand in the oven for three minutes. Remove to a hot platter and garnish with parsley.

Bread and Butter Pudding.—Spread slices of bread with butter and arrange them butter-side down in a buttered baking dish. Beat three eggs slightly, add one-half cupful of sugar, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, and one quart of milk; strain and pour over the bread. Let stand thirty minutes. Bake one hour in a slow oven, covering the first half of the baking. Serve with hard sauce. Cream four tablespoonfuls of softened butter with a cupful of powdered sugar added gradually; add a tablespoonful of cream and enough grated nutmeg to flavor.

THE WEATHER DOCTORS

The main concern of most people seem to be the weather. They refuse to leave it alone during any conversation. It is the most abused, the most condemned and the least appreciated of any of our American institutions.

The weather prognosticators are really at the bottom of it. They predict what the weather will be and generally miss it. The people who watch the weather blame the weathermen and forget the forecaster.

But forecasters are only human. Some admit it and others refuse to. One says he would rather depend on the "crinks" in grandfathers' back or the manifestations of grandmother's rheumatism, than the long distance prophecies of the weather men.

The forecast that we are in for a cold winter should accordingly not be given much weight in the consideration of the evidence.

The principal reason for this prophecy is the old belief that one extreme follows another, and the hottest summer in several years credited to 1925 gives rise to this "coldest winter" prediction.

If this statement were true, however and the seasons ran to this form each succeeding summer would be hotter and each succeeding winter would be colder, until finally the climate would become unbearable.

Several weather prophets who delve into the musty almanacs and weather records of long ago, predict that in 1926 we will not have any summer at all—that it will be cool and cloudy during the usual summer months, in fact just like a certain summer which we had 200 years or so ago.

All phophets do not agree with this prediction howver, Prof. John A. Curtin, a Buffalo scientist says that the summer of 1926 will be hotter than that of the presenf year. He bases his prediction on the study of sun spots which he has been observing since 1871. As the spots increase the summers get warmer, he says, and as they decrease the summers are milder.

Prof. Curtin is sure the country will not have a heatless summer because the sun spots are now approaching their maximum, which will be reached about June, 1927. That should mean that it will be 1930 before the average temperature becomes lower than it was this summer.

So you can pay your money and take your choice of these weather predictions.

RAISE POLITICS ABOVE JOB HUNTING

"Medicine, surgery, everything that is directed by the human brain and human ingenuity, in twenty years has progressed, except government," says former Gov. Al E. Smith of New York. Commenting on this remark, Collier's says: "The explanation is to be found in the fact that business and industry have offered more attractive rewards than has politics. There are exceptions: A. W. Smith is a notable one. Andrew W. Mellon is another. The administration of the Treasury has been of incalculable value during the thirteen years of funding the war debt. But generally, many talented men and women have avoided public service. A hundred or two years ago politics offered the greatest opportunities to ambitious men. Today the George Washingtons and Alexander Hamiltons are managing businesses or conducting in laboratories. Progress will come when more of the public service functions fall to the better-trained men and women spaced with the real powers."

KEEP THE TRAFFIC MOVING

These days of traffic problems on streets and state highways, it is imperative that traffic be not blocked while paving operations are in progress.

The feat of paving a street and at the same time keeping it open for pedestrains and vehicles was recently witnessed on the Embarcadero in San Francisco, one of the most heavily traveled thoroughfares in United States. Between 7 a. m. and 5 p. m. an average of 8,000 vehicles a day pass over it in front of the Ferry Building, the largest terminal of its kind in the world, considering number of people passing through it daily.

Without any blockade of this enormous traffic, the street was paved its full width with a 4-inch asphaltic concrete base and a 2-inch asphaltic concrete surface. It was an engineering feat deserving of commendation, millions of people crossed the pavement during the time it was being laid. Similar methods and materials are now being extensively used on important highways to prevent costly detours.

POWER AT MUSCLE SHOALS

Is Both a Power and Fertilizer Project

(By Eugene Butler)

Of the various offers [illegible] for the government property at Muscle Shoals, it seems to be conceded that the amount of potential power at Muscle Shoals is much greater than any one has ever suggested be used exclusively in the manufacture of fertilizer. According to the best estimates, it is with reason to expect that when fully developed Muscle Shoals will produce over a million horsepower, of which 500,000 horsepower will be available 90 per cent of the time. In fact the average daily output of power at Muscle Shoals is estimated to be 480,000 horsepower, while the primary power, (power available every day in the year) is about 240,000 horsepower. Such figures as to the amount of horsepower are based on the power to be generated by the two dams, only one of which has been constructed, and the steam plants.

It while there will be an average daily output of power at Muscle Shoals amounting to 480,000 horsepower and possibly more as the power possibilities further up the Tennessee River are developed, the amount of power required to make 40,000 tons of fertilizer, the maximum amount any one has agreed to make under any conditions, only 100,000 horsepower. Furthermore, this amount of power is based upon the use of the cyanamid method of making fertilizer, which has been found uneconomical. In Germany, the Haber process will produce 40,000 tons of nitrogen with only 35,000 horsepower. If fertilizer is made economically at Muscle Shoals it will be by the Haber or some similar process rather than the cyanamid process, and the amount of power used will be only a small part of the power at the Shoals.

Coming down to the facts in the case, Muscle Shoals is much more of a power project than a fertilizer proposition. All power companies which [illegible] bid on the government's property realize that some [illegible] Muscle Shoals will be the source of a tremendous amount of power and [illegible]. They are not interested in [illegible] Muscle Shoals for the manufacture of fertilizer, but [illegible] know that the farmers of the country have come to associate the Muscle Shoals with the manufacture of fertilizer, [illegible] and to make a certain amount of [illegible] with a part of the power in order to obtain the rental [illegible] it for more remunerative purposes.

WHY MEN LOVE DOGS

(By Mrs. Walter Ferguson)

Now comes a writer emphasizing that [illegible] has no friend loves his dog more than he does her.

[illegible] there must be something to [illegible] A woman [illegible] a dog [illegible] I do so much more humbly than they [illegible] I am personally in creation I've known of cases where men treated their hound sons with [illegible] and consideration [illegible] they gave their womenfolks.

But it is no shame for a man to love his dog. It this is the only thing [illegible] to make up to her [illegible] about [illegible] of [illegible] to come [illegible] of material [illegible] necessary to have your husband crazy about his dog than about another woman, and far less expensive.

A man who loves his dog is generally a pretty good old scout, take him all around, and the chances are that he will never mistreat his family.

Some way it has always seemed to me that there is actually a closer affinity between a man and a dog than there is between a man and a woman, anyway. It is a thing difficult to explain, but quite obvious to an observing person.

A dog is such a devoted creatnre and he demands nothing save a few old bones. He never intrudes himself upon a man when the man does not wish to be molested, but waits patiently for a gleam of invitation to come into his master's eye as it finally lights upon and takes cognizance of him, and he listens without fretting for the sound of the voice he loves.

He likes there to be caressed when one may feel in caressing mood, but he never importunes for notice [illegible] and those can always be avoided.

He does not cannot 'nag or scold. He can neither [illegible] He always [illegible] He is loyal to [illegible] a home is wanted and [illegible] declared to moves about [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Reveals Interior of Rifle Barrel

A miniature edition of the submarine periscope is the essential part of a new camera which permits photographs to be made of the inside of a rifle barrel, it was announced recently at the bureau of standards. The device is the invention of Dr. L. C. Gardner and Frank A. Chase of the bureau, and uses a periscope small enough to enter a 30-caliber barrel, the size used in army rifles and machine guns, illumination being provided by a tiny incandescent lamp. The periscope, lamp and camera remain stationary while the barrel is moved along and the photograph made on a strip of motion-picture film, says Science Service.

The advantage of the apparatus, it is claimed, is that it is not necessary to saw the barrel in two, as formerly, when it is desired to examine the bore. With the new apparatus, tests may be made over a long period of time, and photographs made at intervals to determine the effect.

And the Witness Told "Only What He Knew"

Judge John C. Poluck said at a Wichita banquet:

"Legislators are continually being told that they couldn't amend the constitution, but they have given us four big amendments recently. They are like the witness.

"'Now, witness,' said a lawyer, 'we want you to tell us only what you know. Don't tell us what some other man knows, or what you think, or anything of that kind. Tell us what you know only. Only what you know.'

"The witness gulped and gave a solemn nod of assent.

"'I know,' he said, weighing and emphasizing every word—'I know that Bob Sloan said that Bill Harris told him that he heard Gaston Lemon's wife tell Jerome S. McWade's daughter that her husband said Matthew Mills Johnson wasn't far off when the scrap took place, and she heard say they fit each other round that there soda fountain right considerable.'"

Somewhat Invidious

The visiting lawyer advanced a proposition that obviously was very doubtful law. The home town judge eyed him narrowly. "Mr. Smith," he said, "do you think that is law?" "No," said the lawyer, gracefully, "candor compels me to admit that I do not, but I did not know how it would strike your honor." The judge deliberated a few moments, then gravely said: "That may not be contempt of court, but it is a mighty close shave."

Lack of Exercise Means Ill Health

Many American business men have functional heart diseases simply because of lack of exercise, says Dr. Claude P. Fordyce in Hygeia, health magazine published by the American Medical association. They could well afford to walk daily until tired, in order to rid themselves of drawn faces, sallow cheeks, and weak, hesitating steps.

To them pedestrianism affords not only profit, but real pleasure in getting away from the routine of city and office and hying to the glorious out-of-doors.

The average man or woman of sedentary habits has a physical condition below normal. His tendency as the years advance is to dodge exertion, and the functional activity of excretory organs is apt to be accumulative.

POULTRY

TAKING ADVANTAGE OF HIGHER PRICES

The high egg market last fall was in the latter part of November. The records indicate that the tendency is for the high spot in the market to advance earlier in the fall. The problem of the person who is interested in making his poultry pay, is how to prepare to take advantage of these high prices.

Pullets which began laying late in October frequently lay during the entire winter. Pullets which are developed too early begin laying early in October and then begin to molt, and unless they are exceptionally well fed they will not begin laying again until spring.

If Leghorns are hatched before April 1 and are well grown they will likely start laying early in October. Under good growing rations a Leghorn will mature in about 200 days. Some growers can carry their early hatched pullets along more slowly and prevent them from laying much before the first of November. In order to do this they feed very little meat scrap and other high protein feeds and feed considerable ground oats and other bulky feeds which grow a good frame but which do not hasten the maturity of the birds.

The heavy breeds which are slower maturing will do better in the fall if hatched earlier than April. February and March pullets of the breeds such as Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and Wyandottes will be about the right stage of maturity for November eggs if they are grown on a good ration.

One trouble with a good many producers is that they do not feed their pullets so that they mature quickly enough so as to start laying in the fall. In other words you have two sources of trouble in getting pullets to lay in November. One is the hatching of Leghorns too early and thereby having them go into a molt, thereby losing production in the winter from that source. The other trouble is on account of late chicks and slow development which results in the pullets not laying until the greater part of the winter is over and the period of high egg prices has passed.

Hens Should Be Fed So That They Molt Quickly

The old hens should be fed so that they will molt quickly. Eggs will be high in price this fall and winter and we should feed the flock so as to obtain every possible egg, suggests D. H. Hall, extension poultry husbandman at Clemson college.

The molt is a natural thing and the hen must be allowed time enough for it. We can help them through the molting stage by feeding. The mash feeds are very beneficial in growing feathers, therefore, these hens should have all the mash they want. A pound of sulphur added to each 100 pounds of mash will also aid the hens in growing new feathers. Sulphur is also a mild tonic and aids in keeping the hen's body in condition.

During the molting period, the hens need a large amount of grain feed for the upkeep of the body. The molt is a severe drain on the hen and a good strong body, with plenty of extra energy should be kept by the hen. The hen is also laying up surplus energy for next year's laying. The best feed, care, and attention should be given them at this time. It will always pay you to send your hens to roost with a full crop each night.

otassium Permanganate Good as Water Purifier

Dr. S. Erikson of the Mountain Grove (Mo.) experiment station has carried on experiments to determine the value of permanganate of potash as a purifier of water for poultry, and has found that it is very efficient. The germs of cholera and of other intestinal diseases are destroyed in a few hours. The quantity to use is 14 grains per gallon of water. This quantity can be measured with sufficient accuracy with a ten-cent piece as measure, about 14 grains being carried on it. Permanganate soon loses its strength, which is indicated by loss of the purple color. When this occurs a new solution should be made up. Erikson's experiments show that small chicks are not injured by drinking permanganate water over a period of nine weeks. It can be safely used when sour milk is being fed, but it is not recommended to be added to milk.

Poultry raisers should not place dependence on permanganate as a cure for any disease. Its use is not intended as a cure but as a destroyer of germs that gain entrance to the drinking water from sick birds, thereby lessening the chance of the disease spreading in the flock.

Egg-Eating Habit

The habit or vice of egg eating is difficult to break, once it has been established. It usually starts from the birds getting a taste of a fresh egg when it is broken. Sometimes fresh egg shells thrown to the chicks without being heated gives them a taste of the raw, fresh egg. Darkened, large, roomy nests, the frequent removal of eggs and the immediate removal of any broken shells are the most dependable methods for breaking up this trouble.

GYPSY BAND ROBS 4 ALABAMA TOWNS

ROBBED BANKS AT CENTERVILLE AND MAPLESVILLE AND STORES AT RANDOLPH AND WEST BLOCTON

SELMA SCENE OF ARREST

Band Included Men, Women and Children Were Traveling in High-Powered Automobiles; Loot Is Recovered And Gang Ordered to Move On

Selma, Ala.—Between forty and fifty Gypsies were arrested here and held for a short time, being charged with sensational daylight robberies, which for a short time, spread terror in four Alabama towns and kept police in various parts of the state busy until they were caught here.

Sweeping from town to town in high-powered automobiles, the banditts robbed banks at Centerville and Maplesville and stores at Randolph and West Blocton. The tribe, which included a number of women and children, were finally halted here.

The pillaging began in Centerville, where five women of the tribe took $1,000 from the vault of the Bibb county bank while other members of the gang entertained persons outside the bank with alight-of-hand tricks.

Leaving Centerville before the bank robbery became known, the motorcade sped to Randolph, 15 miles distant, where several of the Gypseis alighted and robbed a store of merchandise valued at several hundred dollars.

Next descending upon Maplesville, members of the gang held up officials of the Bank of Maplesville and rifled the cash drawer of several hundred dollars and were off again before police could be summoned.

While sheriffs and police chiefs in several cities were hot on their trail, the bandits rushed into West Blocton and made two more daring hauls. This time they looted two stores of foodstuffs and supplies.

The band was arrested here and locked in jail, but as the city jail was not large enough to accomodate the gang, parleys were held and the stolen money and loot was recovered and prosecution waved by the Centerville bank officials, and the gang was ordered to move on, and departed for Mississippi.

How to Get Rid of All Weevils

Heavy Damage Wrought to Beans and Peas by Many Little Insects.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The annual board bill of the bean and pea weevils reaches a total of many millions. Furthermore, on account of heavy damages wrought by these insects, farmers have sharply reduced the acreage devoted to beans and peas, in numerous cases abandoning the commercial production of those crops for others.

Contrary to a widely current belief, bean and pea weevils do not develop spontaneously from the germ of the seed. As the bean and pea pods grow, the mother weevil, which flies from the storage house where infested seed are kept to the growing crop in the field, lays eggs either on the outside of the pods or within them. From these eggs, which appear as mere white specks, there hatch white grubs that bore through the pod into the soft developing beans or peas. The holes through which the grubs enter the seeds are too small to be seen without a microscope. Thus many seeds that appear outwardly sound in reality harbor weevil grubs. Their presence is usually not discovered until as adult weevils they burrow their way to freedom, leaving a hole about one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter.

Leguminous Crops Injured.

Injury to leguminous crops is caused by a number of insects. Those commonly found in supplies of beans, peas, cowpeas, or lentils in this country include the pea weevil, the common bean weevil, the four-spotted bean weevil, and the lentil weevil. With the exception of the pea weevil and the lentil weevil the weevils attacking beans and cow peas produce generation after generation in dried seeds in storage as well as on the growing plants.

Since the pea weevil, which attacks peas, cannot breed in dried seeds, peas intended for planting may be held over for one year in tight paper bags so that the weevils that emerge can not live but will die before the second spring.

If weevils are found in peas, cowpeas, or beans, they can be readily killed by fumigation with carbon disulphid. Water-tight barrels make convenient receptacles in which to store and fumigate small quantities of these crops. Fill the barrels to within a few inches of the top with seeds, pour one cup or more of carbon disulphid on the seeds in each barrel, and then cover with a double thickness of heavy wrapping paper tied tight around the top, or with several sacks weighted down with boards. A wooden cover is also useful in keeping in the fumes. The carbon disulphid when poured over the seeds quickly vaporizes, and the gas, being heavier than air, sinks to the bottom of the container, filling all the air spaces. Fumigation requires from 24 to 48 hours. It is better to use too much carbon disulphid than not enough. Well dried seeds properly fumigated with carbon disulphid are not damaged either as food or as seed to be planted.

Temperature for Fumigating.

A favorable temperature for fumigating with this chemical is 75 degrees Fahrenheit or higher. In fumigating with carbon disulphid care must be taken to make sure that there is no fire in the room or nearby, even lighted cigars, lighted lanterns, or the sparks from an electric fixture, as the gas is explosive and inflammable when coming into contact with fire in any form. Carbon disulphid is purchased as a liquid in iron drums or tin cans and weighs about 10½ pounds per gallon. When fumigating large quantities of seeds, use from 8 to 20 pounds of carbon disulphid per 1,000 cubic feet of space to be fumigated, the amount varying with the tightness of the container and the temperature.

Storing Unsound Fruit Will Result in Rotting

Most of the loss that results from the rotting of fruit in storage can be traced to two causes. The first, and probably the most important of these, is the storing of unsound fruit. No fruit that is attacked by insects or disease or which has been bruised during the process of picking and packing should be stored.

The second cause of loss is the failure to get fruit into storage promptly after it is harvested. Experiments have shown that exposure to warm weather for a few days will shorten several weeks the life of the fruit in storage. It pays to store only sound mature fruit which has been cooled soon after it was harvested.

Alfalfa Hay Very Rich in Protein Substances

Alfalfa hay is rich in protein and mineral substances. It contains other elements which supplement corn silage admirably. A mixture consisting of 300 pounds ground barley, 200 pounds ground corn, and 300 pounds bran will go very well with the silage and alfalfa hay. Feed one pound of this mixture for each 3½ to 4 pounds of 3½ per cent milk produced. Some cows will require a little more feed than this and others a little less. When more than 15 pounds of grain a day is fed a cow, much care should be exercised in determining whether the cow is receiving more than she can take care of.

Outdoor Banks for Vegetable Storage

Well-Drained Location Is of Great Importance.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Outdoor banks or pits offer a cheap means of storing vegetables. The conical pit is used commonly for such vegetables as potatoes, carrots, beets, turnips, salsify, parsnips, and heads of cabbage. When such vegetables are to be stored in outdoor pits, they should be prepared in the same manner as if to be placed in a basement storage room or an outside storage cellar. It is important that a well-drained location be chosen. The vegetables to be stored may be piled on the surface of the ground or a circular excavation six or eight inches deep may be made for them. There should be left around the base of the pit a shallow trench with an outlet for carrying off the water. The excavation should be lined on the bottom with straw or similar material. On this litter the vegetables should be placed in a conical or tapering pile and covered with straw or like material. A layer of dirt two to three inches thick should then be added. With the approach of winter the dirt covering should be increased to a thickness of several inches, its depth depending upon the severity of the winter. During extremely cold weather a supplementary covering of straw, corn fodder, or manure should be added. Small pits may be sufficiently ventilated by allowing the straw between the vegetables and the dirt to extend through the dirt at the top of the pile. This should be covered with a board or piece of tin held in place by a stone to protect it from rain. Ventilation of the larger pits may be secured by placing two or three pieces of rough boards or stakes up through the center of the pile of vegetables so that a flue is formed. This flue is capped by a trough formed of two pieces of board nailed together at right angles. In finishing the pit the dirt should be firmed with the back of the shovel in order to make it as nearly waterproof as possible. On account of the difficulty in getting vegetables out of a pit in winter, particularly when the ground is frozen, several small pits instead of a single large one should be used. It is well also to store a small quantity of several kinds of vegetables in the same pit, separating them with straw, leaves or similar material. Under this arrangement it is possible at one operation to empty an entire pit and provide a temporary supply of several vegetables. These may be kept in a basement storage room or other suitable place until used.

Keeping Poultry Well Is Secret of Good Business

Keeping the poultry well is an absolute essential to successful poultry husbandry and efficient egg production. It is the main corner stone to the success of all poultry operations and the poultryman should strive throughout the year to keep his flock in the best of health, advise poultry specialists at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

One method to build up the flock's health is to cull all fowls from the flock which show indications of not being as strong and healthy as they should be. Old birds should be culled, considering lack of vitality and poor egg production. Late hatched chicks usually are not successful. No pullets should go into the winter quarters that have colds or discharge from the nostrils.

Chickens should be cleaned both inside and outside, the poultrymen advocate. All parasites should be removed before the beginning of winter. Lice and internal parasites should not be permitted to sap the vitality of the birds.

Hens should be fed a complete ration consisting of grain, ground feed, meat food, minerals and vitamines. Yellow corn is better than white corn. It is wise to feed a surplus of good tender green food throughout the winter season.

A crop of alfalfa should not be harvested from full-seeded fields. The fall growth makes an excellent winter protection.

The glazed stage is right for harvesting silage corn, but frosted corn makes poor silage; better harvest it a little too soon than too late.

Cows that are to freshen should have some grain. When the cow freshens she cannot be put on full feed immediately. Usually it is four weeks before she can be fed all the grain she needs, depending upon the condition of her udder. During that time the cow must draw upon her body reserves. Feeding grain before freshening builds up the reserve.

COMING TO CLANTON

The Famous 40-piece Band of the Alabama Boys Industrial School Will Be Here

You may not have noticed the fact, but this splendid musical organization has become a classic in Alabama and its services are in almost constant demand all ove rthe state.

Recently they played an entire week's engagement at the Dothan fair, which was one of the largest attended carnivals of the kind held in the state this year, and the Band was one of its most interesting and satisfactory features. The boys came away loaded down with compliments and encomiums.

They were also called in to service over at Tuscaloosa the other day when they discoursed sweet music for the old Confederate heroes who held their reunion there.

One of the specially interesting features connected with this band is, they have the youngest band master in the world, and then to make it still more interesting, this band master is a girl, little Miss Margaret Jordan, eight years of age, who is the daughter of real band master, Jordan and who serves as his assistant and will appear, life size and full of pep here on Nov. 14, when this noted 40-piece band will delight Clantonians at the High School auditorium.

Clanton and the surrounding territory will give these worthy lads a rousing welcome.

The boys now travel in their own 10 passenger bus of which they are justly proud.

UNFAIR TO INSURANCE COMPANIES

Recently an insurance commissioner of one of our greatest states addressed the commissioners of the Dominion of Canada. He intimated that fire insurance companies are managed in a willfully reckless manner and knowingly accept bad risks in an effort to pile up premiums records. He said this would continue until companies were forced to refuse bad risks, thru the establishment of such low rates that they dare not insure questionable property.

Until analyzed such statements are apt to catch popular fancy. As a matter of fact the most dishonest company would not knowingly take a bad risk because the premium collected is so much smaller than the obligation assumed that bankruptcy would be the inevitable result of such a policy. In order to make money, all companies must exercise great precaution against accepting bad risks

Every insurance company unintentedly insures some questionable property about which it cannot know the facts in advance, due to the moral risk involved which it cannot control. It might be well before an insurance policy is issued, to make the insured go before duly constituted authorities and take oath that the statements made to the insurance company are true. But would the average American submit to such a procedure in order to guard against the evils, now impose upon the insurance companies?

This is one of the problems of insurance which is not made easier by agitation and misinformation that confuse the public mind on the subject

GOOD REASONS FOR TAX REDUCTIONS

Among the industries which suffer most heavily from taxation is lumber production John. W. Blodgett Grand Rapids, Michigan, says two things are essential to increased prosperity, "the practice of thrift and economy in government and a change in federal taxation. Federal income taxes must be reduced to the point where ordinary business investment will be as attractive as investment in non-taxable securities. Death taxes must be either abolished or reduced to a point where they will not force a man to withdraw money from his business and put it into marketable securities at the time of his ripest judgement and powers."

STATE COMMISSION OF FORESTRY

Approximately eight and one-half per cent of the forest land in the organized forestry districts of Alabama burned over during the first nine and one-half months of the present calendar year, according to the records of the State Commission of Forestry.

The 13 organized districts comprise a gross area of about 4,600 acres. About one-half million acres of this area is nonforest in character, being devoted to farming and other general uses. Somewhat more than four million acres however, supports a forest growth or is in process of reforestation. The total number of fires thus far reported within the forestry districts is 1,582 and the area burned amounts to about 338,000 acres.

Additional forestry districts are being established from time to time with view to ultimately covering most of the 22 million acres of forest land within the state. It is probable that by the close of 1925 about five and one-half million acres will be included. In the establishment of districts preference is given to those acres of most uniformly forest character and subject to the greatest fire hazard.

Figures are being complied for the unorganized portions of the state, but they are not sufficiently complete as yet to warrant a statement of the number of fires and proportion burned. It is evident, however, that the percentage of forest land burned over in the unorganized territory is much higher than in the forestry districts. Complete figures for the entire 12 months covering both organized and unorganized territory will be available shortly after the close of the calendar year.

Town And Farmer Need Each Other

Leaders in the State of Alabama say that the town and the farmer need each other and that one reason these two important factors in the existence of the United States don't know more about each other is due to the fact that they never get together.

The officials of the Alabama State Fair Association believe that when they give their fair in Birmingham from October 19 to 24, that they are offering the farmers and townspeople of the state the best opportunity to get together that they have ever had.

The farmer will get a chance to see the things that the town does and the town will see just what the farmer's life is, in the exhibits that will be put on. And all the while they will both be frolicking through the shows, racing, free attractions and general fun that is planned for the big fete in Birmingham. Not only the fair officials but the leaders of the state will urge these two great groups to get together.

The fashions of the day will be on exhibit at the Alabama State Fair in Birmingham for the smartest women in the country and town will be present to see the wonders of the day. Those who want to know what is the latest thing in dress will see it during the six days that the fair runs. Not only on the people that attend the fair but in the exhibits that will be put on in the big exhibit buildings.

The Old Fenton Mansion

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright)

IN HIS five years of practice as a lawyer Rodney Fenton had had a good many rather difficult interviews to go through with, but now as he turned his steps toward the old Fenton mansion on the outskirts of a quaint little New England town, some four miles from his home, he wished heartily that he was out of this business.

Rodney Fenton's present errand was not exactly a professional one, though it was because he was a lawyer that he had been elected to attend to it. As a member of the Fenton family he had become a rather reluctant member of the Fenton association of his state. They had started a fund for the purchase of the Fenton mansion, two hundred years old, and built on part of the original Fenton land grant that dated back almost three hundred years. Somehow the old mansion had got out of the family, and now old Miss Abby Hawkins and her niece, Estelle, were living there. Of course they had no right—save that of legal ownership—and this the Fenton association rather resented.

So Rodney Fenton called. A demure-looking young woman opened the door. She summoned her aunt, and it was Estelle, not the aunt, who asked Rodney to take a seat in the dreary old drawing-room. Abby Hawkins flatly refused any offer he might make, and would not listen to his attempted persuasion.

"But I understood that you and your niece are joint owners of the house," said Rodney. "I was told that it was left to you in that way by your uncle, its former owner."

"Exactly," said the aunt, "but on condition that it could not be sold unless such sale were mutually agreeable."

"Or in case," interrupted Estelle looking rather embarrassed. But her aunt did not permit her to continue.

Meantime Rodney, while trying to concentrate only on the case in question, felt his attention drawn all the time to the rather unusual young woman beside her aunt. So when Rodney had left the old Fenton mansion and gone back home he could not forget Estelle. He made some excuse to go again, though there seemed no chance of coming to an agreement with Abby Hawkins. He found Estelle alone, on one of his calls, and asked her if she would sign an agreement giving them an option on the property in case of her aunt's death.

"In all probability Aunt Abby will survive me," she said. "She has a very durable nature—and she's really not at all old."

On a third visit to the old mansion Aunt Abby was at home, but Estelle, seeing Rodney to the door, managed to have a few minutes with him alone.

"There is of course one loop-hole," she said blushing. "I rather thought you would have looked up the will of my uncle. It must be filed somewhere where a lawyer could get at it. I just thought I would tell you—and now, Mr. Fenton, I suppose you won't be coming again, so good-by."

Rodney stammered something about hoping that he might come again and went out wondering how it had happened that he had not thought of looking up the will.

For a week Rodney was much preoccupied with important legal work, and then one day he took time to go to the county house where the Hawkins will was filed. With experienced eye he skipped over the verbose formalities of the document and came to the important clause. It was the will of Michael Hawkins. Estelle's uncle, that it might not be sold save by consent of both his sister, Abby, and his niece, Estelle, during the life time of either—the house was to become the sole property of either Abby or Estelle in case one or the other should marry a member of the Fenton family, surnamed Fenton.

Rodney Fenton sat looking at the document spread open before him. A smile spread over his face and then a look of annoyance. "She would think I was doing it just for the house," he said to himself. "That makes it rather awkward."

Late that afternoon Rodney was knocking on the great front door of the old Fenton mansion and Estelle came quietly to open it for him. "My aunt has positively refused the house to you," she said. "And she has ordered me not to see you. But she is out—and besides the house is as much mine as it is hers. Please come in and we'll drink tea together."

"I've read the will," he said. There was a joyous twinkle in Estelle's eyes as she looked back at him that rather surprised him.

"So I suppose you are going to try to find some member of the Fenton family who will consent to marry me, just to get the old house back into the family again."

"Unless you will marry me?" questioned Rodney.

"Of course you are joking," assured Estelle, but when Rodney persuaded her that he was never more serious in his life, she buried her pretty face in her slender white hands. Rodney went over to her and took away the hands so that he might look into the depths of her eyes.

"Estelle, I love you," he said simply. And so the old Fenton mansion came back into the hands of the Fentons.

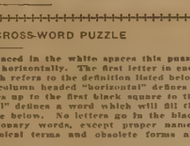
Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.



HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

WOMAN WRITES OF ENGLISH CONCEIT

An American journalist asked me if I thought his people thought more of themselves than the British did. I said it was a nice point, and added:

"You do not think more of yourselves than we do, but you think more about yourselves. We live in an older and more interesting country than you do, but you won't hear an Englishman ask any foreigner what he thinks of England; nor, I am frald—if an opinion either praising or adverse were volunteered—would he care a rap for the reply."

As a nation we are not touchy or vain, but we are conceited, Margot Asquith declares in the London Magazine. Vanity undermines self-confidence, conceit stimulates it; and if success is the object aimed at, I do not know a defect more likely to insure failure than vanity.

If you refute this by citing the famous men who have been vain, you find that their vanity did not cover the ground; it was redeemed by qualities of heart, head or judgment rare even in the humble.

Love Wavers at Religion

In India there is a Christian community that contains a large number of Hindu women who have been born into or professed the Christian religion. Great alarm is being felt just now because some of these Christian-bred women are marrying out of the Christian religion by choosing husbands who have not been converted. One of the reasons is that there are too few Christian men in the community. Another reason is purely economic in that the Christian young men are not able to support these girls in the manner offered by those who profess the so-called pagan religions of the country.

To Cut Down Housework

British women have organized to promote the use of electrical appliances in the homes of Great Britain. It is said that the reports of labor saved in American homes through electricity have been responsible for the movement.

Manchuria Branches Out

A modern spinning mill has been completed at Liaoyang, the first Japanese plant of its kind in Manchuria. Ten thousand spindles out of 32,000 are being worked, but the entire installation is expected to be in operation by next spring. The number of hands, now 700, will be increased to about 2,500. Native cotton only is available and in limited quantities, but is of splendid quality.—Family Herald.

Best Coating for Iron

If entirely impervious, either tin or zinc coatings will protect iron. As, however, such coatings are almost invariably porous or are likely to be penetrated by abrasion, the zinc coatings furnish better protection because the exposed iron does not rust as long as zinc is present in close proximity. Tin coatings, on the other hand, accelerate the corrosion of any exposed iron.

The Procrastinator

I have noticed that every man who really amounts to a good deal is prompt; he makes few appointments and keeps them. And when he works he works. . . . But look out for the man who loafs half the time during his business hours, and is never on time.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

No more RHEUMATISM

IT'S GONE! That awful agony! Rheumatism can't stand the rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build.

But rheumatism will bring pain and misery to your joints and muscles just as long as you are without plenty of rich, red blood in your system.

It's the red-blood-cells that S. S. S. helps Nature build that drive out of your system the impurities that cause rheumatism. And until you do build up your blood to where it is pure and rich and red, you simply can't get rid of rheumatism.

And S. S. S. is the thing. Red blood conquers rheumatism. Everybody knows that.

S. S. S. means millions of red-blood-cells—means health all over. No more rheumatism. Nights of rest—days of joy, filled with the happiness of accomplishment — made possible by a body brimful of red blooded life, energy and vitality.

Supreme Court Renders Opinion In Suit Brought to Collect Insurance by Ruth Thomas

Montgomery.—Referring in a decision, a certain type of health insurance policy, that the supreme court of Alabama declared it could not understand why parties in their right minds should enter into such contracts. The decision was handed down in the case of the Union Central Relief Association, appellant, versus Ruth Thomas, appealed from Montgomery Circuit Court. The lower court decided in favor of the woman who brought the suit, this decision being reversed and the case remanded by the supreme court.

The policy of insurance contained the provision among others that "if a member owe more than two weekly payments, such member shall thereby forfeit his or her right to receive benefits from sickness or disability occurring or continuing between the date of becoming so in arrears and the expiration of a term of five weeks from the date when all back dues are paid up."

The supreme court pointed out that plaintiff's disability began and continued during a term of less than five weeks after she had paid her dues in arrears. "We do not understand why parties in their right mind should enter into such contracts, but these parties did, the court has no authority to make a contract for them and the contract, lawful in its provisions, though it may be considered improvident on the part of the plaintiff, must be given effect, if at all, according to its plain and inescapable meaning," the opinion stated.

PAUL'S ARREST IN JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Acts 21:18-23:22.
GOLDEN TEXT—"If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed."
PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Is Brave in Danger.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul and the Jerusalem Mob.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Faces a Mob.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Spirit of the Mob.

I. Paul's Vow (21:18-26).

Upon Paul's arrival at Jerusalem representatives of the church there gave him a most cordial reception. In order that the brethren in Jerusalem might graciously receive him, it was proposed to him by the elders that he take a Jewish vow to prove that he was in no way opposed to the law. The effort was to remove prejudice. They recognized that such an act would in no way compromise or involve the Gentile brethren. Furthermore this would not compromise his own principles of action, viz., to the Jews he became a Jew, and to the Gentiles, a Gentile; all things to all men in order to gain them for Christ.

II. Paul's Arrest (21:27-40).

How far this act conciliated the Jews we are not told, but it only enraged the unbelieving Jews, causing them to resort to mob law. These maddened Jews on the basis of a supposition seized him and dragged him from the temple and beat him mercilessly intending to put him to death. Paul was rescued from the mob by the Roman guard. The chief captain, not being able to get any information from the howling mob, bound Paul and started for the castle. In order to protect him from the murderous frenzy of the mob, the soldiers lifted him upon their shoulders and bore him up the stairs. Paul kept himself under control, and politely asked permission of the captain to speak to the people. When he addressed him in Greek and quoted his Roman citizenship, the captain granted his request.

III. Paul's Defense (22:1-27).

Paul's chief concern was not his own safety. He used this opportunity to witness unto them of Christ.

1. His Claim for a Rightful Hearing (vv. 1-3).

(1) His birth (v. 3).

He was a Jew born in Tarsus, a city of no mean reputation.

(2) His Education (v. 3).

He was educated under Gamaliel and instructed "according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers."

(3) His Zeal (v. 3).

He was as zealous toward God as those Jews who were trying to destroy him.

2. His Attitude Toward Jesus (vv. 4-5).

"I persecuted this way unto the death," so that his attitude was one of hatred as was that of the Jews.

3. How His Attitude Was Changed (vv. 6-16).

While on his way to Damascus with authority to bind the Christians at Jerusalem, he was smitten to the ground by a light from heaven, and the voice of the Lord said, "Why persecutest thou me?" When Paul inquired what he was to do, he was told to go to Damascus where he would be told what to do.

4. The Lord Commissioned Him to Go to the Gentiles (17-21).

IV. Paul Before the Sanhedrin (23:1-10).

The Roman officer, in order to learn why Paul was arrested, commanded the chief council to assemble, and brought Paul before them.

1. Paul's Earnest Look at the Council (vv. 1-2).

This was a solicitation of their honor to give him a fair hearing, and also a look of conscious integrity and unfaltering courage.

2. Paul's Stern Rebuke of the Head of the Council (v. 3).

"God shall smite thee, thou whited wall."

3. Paul's Appeal to the Pharisees (vv. 6-10).

Seeing that he could not get a fair hearing, and perceiving that the body before him was made up of Pharisees and Sadducees, he appealed to the Pharisees hoping to get their attention, for his preaching had something in common with their belief.

V. The Lord Stood by Paul (v. 11).

This assured him that his course was right, and thus comfort was brought to him.

VI. The Conspiracy to Kill Paul (vv. 18-22).

More than forty men placed themselves under a curse to abstain from eating and drinking until they had murdered him. God defeated their plan without a miracle.

AUBURN NEWS

Auburn, Ala., No. 7.—(Special)—Course in electrical engineering appears to be the most popular at Auburn as far as number of students enrolled is concerned according to figures compiled and given out by B. L. Shi, college registrar. Total number of 368 students are enrolled in electrical engineering. The total number of 1,519 students are enrolled.

The majority of these students are now housed in the new Erskine Ramsey Engineering hall which was dedicated and formally opened three weeks ago. The college engineering department is headed by Dean J. J. Wilmore who has associated with him in electrical engineering Prof. A. S. C. Dunstan, head professor of electrical engineering.

Other popular cources are the general course with 233 enrolled, the course in civil and highway engineering with 165 enrolled, the course in mechanical engineering with 113 enrolled, the course in agricultural education with 112 enrolled, the course in secondary education with 107 enrolled, and the course in agriculture with 104 enrolled.

The complete matriculation in agriculture including agricultural edcation is 216.

Other courses with large enrollments are pharmacy, architecture, home economics, chemistry, agricultural engineering, pre-medical and vetinary medicine.

The statistics indicate further that there are 500 freshmen enrolled, 415 sophmores, 395 Juniors, 245 Seniors, 16 graduate students and 29 special students. While this heavy enrollment, the largest in the history of Auburn, taxes the college facilities to the utmost all students are being taken care of and class room facilities in every case provided.

The opening of the new Erskine Ramsey Engineering building has helped materially in solving the class room and laboratory problem.

TURN TO DEMOCRATS SEEN IN ELECTION

Washington, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Chairman Oldfield of the democratic national congressional committee declares that the elections made it clear that the pendulum has begun to swing away from he republicans and indicated the election of a democratic congress in 1926 and a democratic president in 1928.

The statement follows:

The sweeping victory of democratic candidates at the polls Wednesday makes it more apparent than ever that the pendulum has begun to swing the other way. The election of a democratic congress in 1926 appears to be certain, to be followed by the election of a democratic president in 1928.

While the elections were not general, there were some of special importance and significance such as New York, New Jersey. Congressional by-elections in New Jersey and Kentucky and such mayoralty election as Kansas City. The democrats won in each instance except the New Jersey congressional election where the republican majority was greatly reduced.

"These results should be very heartening to democrats throughout the country. They are not, however, surprising. They are evidence that the people cannot long be deceived and missled by the huge mass of inspired and misleading propaganda exhalting and glorifying the Coolidge administration almost beyond imagination such as has been inflicted upon the country from Washington and other points for some time.

"It is also evidence that the people are now more fully realizing the outstanding and lasting service they received from the recent eight years democratic administrations. Democrats will have as many opportunities to win in the future as in the past and they have but to engage in wholehearted teamwork in order to capitalize these opportunities.—Bham. News.

GAS TO TH ERESCUE

The industries and homes of the nation are rapidly turning to manufactured gas for fuel and heating, instead of coal, according to official announcements by the American Gas Association at its recent convention.

In a message to the convention, President Coolidge declared that the future of the gas industry depended upon the extent to which it devoted itself to public service.

It was announced that every industry where heat treating is part of the manufacturing process is represented in a large group which has relinquished coal and other less efficient fuels for gas during the past year. The increased gas production will be from three to five billion cubic feet, it was said.

Gas house heating plants are being installed at the rate of 15,000 a year and it is predicted that within the next 15 years, two million homes in Our Country will use gas heating releasing about 30,000,000 tons of coal for more useful purposes.

CITY STREETS CRITERION FOR PAVED HIGHWAYS

Climate changes are one of most important causes o ffailure of some types of pavement. Hot weather causes wide variations in temperature ... order to be durable.

Asphaltic concrete pavements, due to elasticity of the asphalt binder, are able within themselves to care for expansion and contraction due to heat or cold, without any damage to the pavement while carrying the heaviest traffic. With so-called rigid pavements expansion caused by heat tends to result in bucking or cracking of the pave

Results of investigation conducted this year by New York State Bureau of Municipal Information at Albany relative to experience of various cities with construction and maintenance of street pavements show that out of 92 leading municipalities reporting, 44 use only asphaltic types, 8 use asphaltic brick, 9 use asphaltic types and stone block with asphalt filler, and 8 use asphaltic types and Portland cement concrete.

BIRTH OF ALIEN BABES PROHIBITED IN GIBRALTAR

Gilbraltar—No baby of alien parentage may be born on the rock of Gilbrautar, a state of one and seven-eighth square miles that has no public debt, no land capable of cultivation, no railway and no trams. When a birth is to take place in an alien family, the expectant mother must move beyond the British lines.

The last census showed "The Rock" to be inhabited by 8,471 men and 8,689 women. About one-fifth of the population is the military.

JAPANESE GIRLS FIGHT OLD BAN AGAINST WIVES

TOKIO, Nov. 6.—Twenty-year-old maidens, born in the superstitious period of the hinoe-uma, are conducting a campaign to dispel the aged belief that girls born in that period make undesirable wives.

So long as the superstition holds, those girls are unpopular. Their chances for getting husbands are so poor that already many of them have taken their own lives.

The period of the hioe-uma reoccurs every 61 years. The last period was exactly 20 years ago, giving thousands of elgible girls a poor start in the eternal matrimonial sprint.

WOMEN ROUTS JAPS WHO MISUSE AMERICAN FLAG

Los Angeles, Cal.—American will not stand for the American Flag being desecrated, especially American women, and to Mrs. W. G. Parker, of 1031 Kern Avenue, Belvedere Gardens, goes the credit of resentin gan insult to Old Glory on the part of a Jap truck driver and rescuing the flag from its persecutors.

Mrs Parker was driving her car down San Pedro street one day when she observed two Japs in a motor truck driving along with a load of gas pipe. Tied on the end of the pipe was an American flag which was dragging in the mud of the street. The flag was being used by the aliens as a warning to others, to "duck" the gas pipe load, but Mrs. Parker, being an American and the wife of a World War hero, resented this action, leaped from her machine and at the risk of her life in a traffic jam, chased the Jap truck until she overtook it and proceeded to give the occupants a severe lacing after she rescued the flag from the machine.

The battle attracted a large crowd and to the accompaniment of hundreds of cheering men and women the Japs were driven from their truck and the flag rescued.

It appeared as though the Japs, ere they decided to use the flag for a warning rag, had utilized it in wiping grease from their truck. Also, it was so knotted that it took some minutes to unite it from the iron piping.

GUARDING A NATION'S LIBERTIES

Not since the Civil War has press comment been so strong so aggressive and so unmistakably in favor of maintaining intact the basic principles of our government, as it is now Editors of the nation are giving timely warning to the people and to politicians of the danger involved in allowing boards, commissions, legislation and government to override the rights of the individual as guaranteed in our constitution.

At no time in the past has it been as hard for the political demagogue, unscrupulous captain of industry or labor agitator to "put something over" on the American people. Never before was Our Country as ready to listen to the advice of a real statesman, industrial leader, or honest representative as it is today.

This is a healthy situation, and the people can thank the American press for a fair discussion of the basic problems involved in our industrial and political system free from the damaging influence of partisan politics.

PRIEST SECURES DISMISSAL OF PROTESTANTS

Special to The Fellowship Forum)

Warwick, R. I.—The school committee of this town, consisting of five men four Protestants and one Roman Catholic at the expiration of the last term of school dropped two principals, both Protestants, from the work.

The principal of the grammar school to was droppe dsays that Father Kelly, Roman Catholic priest of the Apponaugh church, sent him word while he was still teaching that any children who came to scoool late were to be marked on time.

The teacher replied with a courteous note that such was not his policy and that he did not care to show any partiality. To which Father Kelly replied as follows: "If that is the attitude with which you meet my requests you will not teach school here next term." And sure enough he was dropped as the priest predicted, simply because the teacher would not submit to the dictation of a Roman Catholic priest. This ought to bring the blush of shame to the four Protestants on that school board.

The Protestants of this town have taken up the fight and petitioned the school committee to reinstate the Protestant principals who were dropped but so far all to no avail.

WOMAN MAYOR RULES IN TURKEY

Cannot Read Or Write; Memorizes Laws; Is Good Official

Constantinople.—Turkey's one and only mayor has been found and the fact that for years she has administered her office as an illeterate has fired the courage of feminists here in their campaign toward the vote for Moslem women.

Koudret Hannoum, a woman beyond sixty, for many years has been unanimously elected mayor of the village of Germat in the vilayet of Erdahan. She can neither read nor write, but she knows all the laws of the village by heart. She is a widow and with her daughter-in-law and two grandaughters, does all the work on the farm, which is their only source of livelihood.

It is the first example the leaders of the "Union of Women" can cite in proving a Turkish woman's ability in government affairs. While Mayor Hanoum has a masculine bearing and masculine interests, the union points out that she has an intelligence superior to that of all the men in her vicinity. For that matter, the union claims the average Turkish woman is more clever mentally and more energetic physically, than the average Turkish man.

When the governor of the vilayet sends Mayor Hanoum a new order, she has taken it to the village teacher who reads it until the mayor has memorized it. She is known not to have forgotten a singel point in an order. Under her regime, Germat has surpassed the entire district in its advancement.

Mayor Hanoum rides horseback with vigor and handles a gun with skill. When the village receives rumors of approaching brigands, she it is who leads the young men to the defense.

The chief aim of Turkish women now is not the vote, but education and experience. The great work has been against the social restrictions of Turkish women. Now they are pouring into the law and medical schools just opened to them, into normal schools and business. Many graduates already have proved their ability as professional and business women.

HOW TWO WOMEN AVOIDED OPERATIONS

The Following Letters of Mrs. Thurston and Mrs. Beard Carry an Encouraging Message to Other Sick Women

MRS. ETHEL THURSTON
824 N. PINE STREET, LIMA, OHIO

Lima, Ohio.—"I want to tell you how your medicine has helped me. For weeks I suffered with awful pains from inflammation and I was in such misery that I had to bend double to get relief. I could not be touched or jarred, had awful pain all over my abdomen and could not touch my feet to the floor. It was impossible for me to straighten up and the pains never ceased. I took treatments for some time and finally was told I would have to have an operation. I do not believe in operations, and I had read so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I told my husband I would try it before I gave up. I soon began to feel that it was doing me good. The awful misery began to leave me, also the backache. I have a good appetite and am gaining in weight. Taking the medicine was the best thing I ever did. I feel like it has saved my life and I do not hesitate to say so to my friends. At least it saved me from a dreaded operation and I am still taking it. I am willing to answer letters from women asking about the medicine."—Mrs. ETHEL THURSTON, 824 North Pine Street, Lima, Ohio.

Mrs. Beard's Letter

Eddy, Texas.—"I will write you a few words, thinking it will do some one else good. Two doctors said I would have to be operated on because for nearly twelve months I suffered from a weakness from which I could get no relief. I was restless and nervous and was not able to walk across the house. They said it was the Change of Life. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers, and as I could not get any help from doctors I thought I would give that a trial. I began with the liquid and it helped me some, then you advised me to take the tablet form and I began to improve rapidly. I have gained in weight from 106 to 170 pounds. I recommend it to all women with this trouble."—Mrs. M. E. BEARD, R. No. 1, Box 143, Eddy, Texas.

When Love Was Calling

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

GILROY sat down in the semi-darkness of his library and prepared to listen, for the last time alone, to the voice he loved best in all the world. After that, when he had heard each record, he would destroy them all.

An hour previously he had posted the letter to Mildred Catwin, asking her to become his wife. The die was already cast and he would henceforth endeavor to put dreams of his boyhood sweetheart completely from his life; but not before he had heard once again each of her glorious songs—and there were many of them. His lonely feast of music would last long into the night.

It seemed but yesterday—though a full 15 years had passed—that he and Mary Atwood had wandered arm in arm through the sweet-smelling country lanes and he had pleaded with her to marry him.

"I know as well as if it were written on the sands," she had told him, "that if we marry now I will utterly fail to carry out my ideals in music. If you will wait for me—I will love no one but you."

But Gilroy, in his immature reasoning and the heat of youth, had turned from her. He wanted her then or not at all. If she loved her voice better than she loved him she must choose her own way.

Mary had chosen, and in all the 15 years they had not so much as spoken, written or heard of each other's movements.

Of course Gilroy knew of Mary Atwood's success as nearly all the music-loving world did. But he knew not where she was nor would he have followed had he known.

However, Mildred Catwin was a lovable wee thing, and no doubt they would be tremendously happy and some day he would tell her all about Mary.

Mary's songs at seventeen had been, "Won't You Tell Me Why, Robin?", "In the Gloaming," "The Lost Chord," "Ye Banks and Braes," and Gilroy had managed to secure them all for his gramophone.

He was so deep in his dreams and so regretful of their imminent passing that he was only half conscious that a voice, not that of the gramophone, was singing through "Won't You Tell Me Why, Robin?"

Gilroy's heart thumped against his side and he gripped the arms of his chair in a tensity of emotion that he had not known for years.

For Gilroy's name was Robin and the emotion in that voice told him that Mary Atwood was in the same building calling to him.

He must go.

Down the elevator he went and swiftly to the office of the apartment house to make inquiry. A lady had arrived during the afternoon, yes—her name was not, however, Atwood.

Gilroy's heart sank. Was it then not his Mary? Or worse still, was it Mary and she was married? He could not contemplate the thought and rushed off to the rooms mentioned by the clerk.

She opened the door to her suite of rooms and Gilroy found himself in the grip of an emotion that held him silent.

"Robin—Robin Adair," she cried, using the old pet name.

"My Mary," was all Gilroy could say, and then Mary was in his arms and she was trembling and Gilroy could only hold her close.

"It was really you—listening to my voice?" she asked presently; "it doesn't seem possible. The Great Hand of Fate—isn't it, Robin?" Her voice was unsteady.

"I have listened to your voice ever since the first record came out and in my soul—I have heard it—before that."

She was leading him into her spacious sitting room. "And now tell me everything. I am hungry to hear you talk. I sneaked into the country under an assumed name so that I might have a few months away from my public—they demand so much of me."

"You are not—married?"

She looked wistfully at him. "I told you 15 years ago I would always love you, Robin."

Suddenly Robin realized the terror of the situation. His letter of proposal to Mildred was even then in her hands—no doubt she was writing him her answer and Gilroy knew it would be "yes."

"Mary, my own," he said swiftly, "I have had no one in the depths of my heart, sleeping or waking, for 15 years, and now, now when I had given up hope of your seeking me out, I have asked another girl to become my wife. I have never wanted to seek you because I felt too unworthy and small. Now I know I have been a first-class idiot. I shall love you always."

Mary was struggling to keep from crying out, but in a moment she smiled.

"Robin, my dear. There is no power to keep true lovers apart in the spirit, and I feel certain that fate will in some way give us to each other."

"You were always faithful, Mary—I—" Robin dived into the depths of his pocket for the inevitable cigarette that he felt he must have under stress and suddenly his face went a dull crimson—a triumphant crimson, however. He drew forth an envelope, it was stamped and addressed. "Mary! I didn't post it!"

POP CORN GOOD WINTER SUNDAY SUPPER

Popping Corn for Sunday Supper in Winter.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Though cornmeal is now used in other parts of the world, pop corn seems still to be a peculiarly American product. White, fluffy kernels of popped corn have been found among prehistoric Indian remains in South America and also specially shaped earthenware implements with a depression in the center and a long handle, evidently the equivalent of our modern corn poppers. In olden days in this country the grains were sometimes thrown on the hot coals, where they burst and bounded back on the floor for the children to scramble after. The varieties of corn best adapted for pop corn, methods of cultivation, poppers, and suggestions for making such pop-corn dainties as pop-corn balls are described in Farmers' Bulletin 553, which may be obtained from the United States Department of Agriculture.

Though pop corn is most often eaten between meals and as a sort of food necessary, it has a food value similar to that of the same weight of corn prepared in other ways. It makes an excellent breakfast cereal served with milk or cream, and is so used in many families. It is hard to imagine a better supper for a winter Sunday at home than corn popped over the open fire, served hot with melted butter, milk and a little salt, and perhaps with apples or other fruit as a dessert.

CANDIED BERRIES ARE IDEAL GIFTS

Homemade Confections Are Excellent Remembrances for Christmas.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Unusual homemade confections are always an ideal Christmas remembrance when one does not wish to spend very much money. The little jars with screwed-on lids in which salad dressing is often sold make admirable containers for gifts of this kind if they are decorated with bright-colored splashes of enamel paint or simple designs in black.

Attractive Packing Gives Small Home-made Gift Distinction.

Candied cranberries are easily made. The United States Department of Agriculture recommends the following way of preparing them.

Candied Cranberries.

3 cupfuls of large cranberries. 2 cupfuls water. 2 cupfuls sugar.

Select large, firm cranberries. Make three small slits, each one-eighth inch long, in each berry with a point of a penknife. Boil the sugar and water together until clear. Allow this syrup to cool, add the berries and bring very slowly to the boiling point. The saucepan should be large enough to permit all the berries to float at the top of the syrup during cooking. If the berries are heated too quickly, the skins will burst before the syrup soaks into the pulp. As soon as the syrup boils, take the dish off the stove and let it stand overnight.

Next day drain the syrup from the berries and reduce it to about half its original volume by boiling. Cool the syrup, place the berries in it, heat again slowly; boil very gently for three or four minutes, and allow to stand for two hours or more. Then boil gently a third time for five minutes. Allow the berries to stand in the thick syrup overnight; warm once more, so that the syrup will be thin enough to pour easily, and drain the berries from the syrup.

Spread them on a clean cloth or oiled paper to dry. When dry, the berries should be bright, firm, plump, and semitransparent.

Jellied peel is another delicious confection which can be made from materials available practically everywhere. Either grapefruit, orange, or lemon peel may be used.

Jellied Peel.

5 ounces peel cut in thin strips ¼ inch wide (grapefruit, orange or lemon). 1 cupful sugar for syrup. ¼ cupful sugar. 2-3 cupful water for syrup ¼ teaspoonful salt.

Use strips of thick, soft peel free from blemishes from bright-colored heavy, smooth-skinned grapefruit, lemons, or oranges. Add one quart of cold water, boil for one-half hour. Repeat this process until the strips have been parboiled three times, discarding the water after each cooking. The strips should then be tender.

Dissolve the sugar in the water for the syrup, in a small saucepan, add the strips of grapefruit or orange peel, and cook rapidly for about 20 minutes, then place an asbestos mat under the pan, and continue the boiling about 20 minutes longer, or until the strips is all absorbed by the peel. Great care must be taken at this point that the syrup does not scorch, and the strips of peel must be turned frequently. Use a fork in turning the strips and in removing them from the pan.

Place the peel on waxed paper until cool; and, using the flat side of a knife, roll the strips in granulated sugar. Let the strips dry out for an hour or two, then wrap in waxed paper, and keep in tightly-covered tin containers until used. This confection should keep in good condition for two or three weeks, if stored in a moderately-cool place.

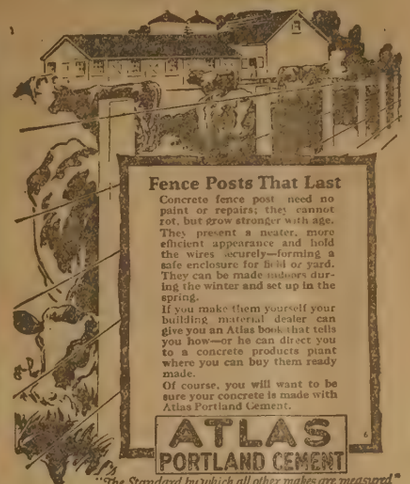
Candied cranberries and jellied peel may both be used effectively for decorating Christmas cakes and cookies in place of cherries, citron, angelica, etc. Those who have preserved watermelon rind on hand may like to tint it green with harmless vegetable coloring, flavor it with a few drops of peppermint, and use it in combination with the red of the cranberries and the yellow jellied peel. Or the jellied peel may be colored with harmless vegetable coloring by adding a small quantity of coloring to the last water in which the peel is parboiled.

Dates stuffed with strips of grapefruit peel instead of with peanuts or almonds are interesting and new. When the date pit has been replaced by a strip of the peel, the date is closed and rolled in granulated sugar.

Use Left Over Cereals

Small amounts of left-over cooked cereal sometimes present a problem to the housekeeper. She could, however, put them into bread, muffins, or griddle cakes in place of part of the flour and liquid. She could use them to thicken soups, stews, or gravies or fry them for use like a starchy dinner vegetable, or to serve with syrup for a dessert, the United States Department of Agriculture points out.

Stale cake can be made into cabinet pudding, with custard mixture and a few raisins or prunes. Try drying it, rolling it into crumbs and sprinkling them through or over ice cream, whipped cream or custard desserts, says the United States Department of Agriculture.



Fence Posts That Last
Concrete fence post need no paint or repairs; they cannot rot, but grow stronger with age. They present a neater, more efficient appearance and hold the wires securely—forming a safe enclosure for field or yard. They can be made indoors during the winter and set up in the spring.
If you make them yourself your building material dealer can give you an Atlas book that tells you how—or he can direct you to a concrete products plant where you can buy them ready made.
Of course, you will want to be sure your concrete is made with Atlas Portland Cement.

Fortune in Platinum

A mining pioneer of Vancouver, Charles P. Shaw, has discovered a deposit of chrome iron containing a large percentage of platinum. The deposit is on the banks of the Tulaman river in British Columbia, and the news of the discovery has excited such interest that over a hundred claims have been staked already. Platinum from Tulaman is not a new development; over 20,000 ounces have been won from other deposits in this region. Mr. Shaw's deposit, however, is the richest yet discovered there.

Tells Women to Avoid "Physics"

DR. CALDWELL AT AGE 63

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated women and girls had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, sallow skin, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, sick child gladly takes it.

SMALL BRAINS

"First of all," said Oliver Ostrich, "I have better eyesight than I have anything else."

"Good for you, old chap," said Mrs. Oliver.

"Second in the list, comes my hearing which is quite good."

"Fine, fine," said Mrs. Oliver.

"I'm like you in those ways, too. And I'd say that third comes our sense of smell.

"That's not so very good. I can smell food and give it to the children perhaps, and usually know them, but oh, Oliver, why bother about such things?"

"Ah," said Oliver Ostrich, "that makes me think of the reason.

"I won't think too much because it would tire my brain, and because there is so very—"

"What were you going to say, my dear?" asked Mrs. Oliver. "Pray continue."

"I was going to say that the reason is very easy to think of for if it were not—then I would have to think hard.

"If I did think hard it might—oh dear—it might—well, it might!"

"What in the world does all that mean?" asked Mrs. Oliver.

"You don't finish what you have to say."

Oliver Ostrich.

"Well, I will tell you," said Oliver Ostrich.

"I'm waiting, standing on two toes," said Mrs. Oliver Ostrich.

"I'm not sitting on pins and needles as I've heard people speak of doing.

"But it seems it was only an expression meaning that they were nervously waiting for something.

"It's almost as silly an expression as an ostrich might think of using.

"They never do sit on pins and needles. Yet they say they do wiler they mean something quite different.

"When they mean they are nervous and don't know what is going to happen next they say that.

"So absurd when they don't really mean it at all.

"You'd think, really and truly, that only an ostrich could think of such a thing.

"I suppose of course they mean that it is almost as nervous a few moments for them as it would be nervous and uncomfortable if they were on pins and needles.

"But it is foolish, ostrichly foolish, I say. There may not be any such word as 'ostrichly' but I think I'll use it if no one objects."

No one seemed to object. Mr. Oliver Ostrich began to speak.

"You said, my dear, when we were talking about what we could do and what our special, good points were, 'Oh, why bother about such things?' There is a reason why you said that.

"I will tell you the reason. It would have been too much for the brain. Our brains are very, very small. They're quite undersized I believe.

"That is the reason why we are so stupid if anyone wants to know. They may know we're stupid without knowing the reason. We don't want to tire out what little brains we have, so you made the speech you did."

"It doesn't matter to me," said Mrs. Oliver, "how small our brains are. It's better to be stupid, I think, for then we can't get tired out thinking and studying and becoming nervous—at least it would seem to me that thinking would make me nervous."

"Yes, it would," said Oliver Ostrich. "But we have fine feathers, so we needn't worry about small brains. We'll let those who haven't our feathers own the brains."

For they spoke of brains as though they could be owned like automobiles or a library of books.

Learned at School

"Well, Mary what did you learn at Sunday school today?" asked a mother of her little five-year-old daughter.

"Oh, lots of things," was the reply. "I learned that I must sell five tickets for our concert next week, give 10 cents toward a birthday present for our teacher, and—and—oh, yes—and that Mr. Jonah was swallowed by a whale."

Not the Giving Kind

Teacher—Why, Jimmie, is it true that your mother has diphtheria?

Jimmie—Yes, ma'am.

"But don't you know you mustn't come to school? You might get it from your mother and then give it to the whole class."

"No, ma'am; it's only my stepmother, an' she never gives me nothin' to!"

EMBELLISHING TAILORED SUIT; WIDE-BRIM HATS AGAIN HERE

IT IS a cunning art which can add embellishing touches ad libitum to a costume without detracting from its tailored aspect. Yet this is just what the French couturier accomplishes, a tailored suit which has ornate features. The illustration herewith demonstrates this truth. Note in the stunning suit to the right how fancifully fur and braid combine in a decorative way, yet tailored is the word, when it comes to describing this elegant cloth creation.

One of the charming items concerning this model is that it is carried out all in tones of gray. This is according to the dictates of the mode, that gray be a leading color for this season. The cloth is platinum-gray wool velours, the fur, handsome squirrel. Across the front of the coat the fur appears in tabs, but it encircles the back portion in a continuous wide border. The plain skirt has the fashionable inverted plait, which allows fullness.

It is the introduction of flares formed of gazelle fur at the sides of the coat and the bottom of the sleeves which pronounces chic for the coat of the accompanying suit. Likewise the flare cuffs are of cinnamon-brown gazelle, the collar also is faced with the same—in conjunction," however, with flat dull gold braid. There are little strappings of this braid at vantage points throughout the costume, and this partly accounts for its true Parisian air. Evidently the designer decided that two inverted waists are better than one when it comes to allowing extra fullness at the hemline of the skirt. The smooth-surfaced cloth is in the new blue coloring.

Novelty is achieved in semi-tailored suits through solid embroidery done in self-colored floss. Even beads are sometimes introduced.

Are we going to wear large hats this fall and winter? We are. At last the wide brim has arrived to fill its long-delayed return engagement with the world of fashion. Thus does rumor become fact. However, let it not be inferred that the little close-fitting shapes which have served us so faithfully and becomingly are to be crowded off the stage of fashion. Perish the thought! The small hat has won a fixed place in our esteem, and for all-around practicability and smart style it has no peer. However, there is something about the broader brims which seems to "complete the picture," and it is very pleasing to know that fashion approves both brimless and brimmed headwear. The fact that honors are to be shared gives a zestful interest to the season's millinery modes.

The quartette of charming wide-brim chapeaux here shown are typical of the trend of fashion.

The ornate treatment evidenced in the hat shown last in the group emphasizes the "more trimming" movement. It is carried out in amber and brown colorings. The brim is a transparent metal tissue with dull gold soutache sewed row and row as a wide border. There is a banded effect of the soutache encircling the gazelle crown. The chrysanthemums, one on top and one on the underside of the brim, shade from orange to brilliant henna. This model would be exquisite carried out in black and silver, for silver is particularly in favor this season.

A rococo ribbon wreath of flowers is festooned about the crown of the headsome hat pictured to the left center. It has one of the shirred brims now so fashionable. A handsome ostrich novelty adds picturesqueness to the big-brimmed velvet and satin shape which is shown first in this group. Leaves cut out of velvet are appliqued on the felt crown of the model to the upper right. A silver ribbon traces its way about the crown finishing in a pert bow.

HEALTH VALUE OF FRUITS

The healthful properties of fruit are now so well known and appreciated that while we may not care to go to extremes and support the claims of those who believe we should live exclusively on fruits and vegetables, still we are willing to credit them with great virtue.

The citrus fruit is one of the most popular varieties. Lemon juice used to bleach and soften the skin is well known; as an aid to beautifying the hair, it may not be so well appreciated. The juice of half a lemon in the rinse water when washing the hair will soften and leave it light and fluffy.

Lemon juice applied to bites and stings of insects will relieve at once. As a mouth wash, lemon juice in a glass of water is good for the teeth, sweetens the breath, and swallowed, is good for a bilious condition.

Oranges, while rich in sugar and vitamines, are high in mineral salts. Oranges act upon the bowels. Taken at night they are especially good, and even young babies thrive on a tablespoonful of the strained juice, given between feedings of milk.

A glass of orange juice is usually relished by the most delicate stomach and is recommended for biliousness.

Grapefruit is said to contain a substance similar to quinine and has been recommended in case of la grippe. For that tired feeling, which is called spring fever, it is said to be very good. Then where the fresh fruit cannot be obtained, there are canned varieties that are especially delicious, all ready to serve.

Those who have studied the properties of grapefruit say that the proper way to get its full value is to put it through the meat grinder, skin, seeds and all; cover with boiling water and let stand until cold. Strain and take in small doses three times a day. Those who like quinine will probably enjoy this.

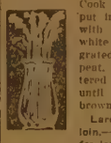
Prune Whip Parfait.—Take one-half cupful of stewed prunes stoned and mashed, one-half cupful of raisins seeded and boiled in water—just enough to keep from burning; cut up eight marshmellows into one-half cupful of cream and steam in a double boiler until soft, then beat smooth, add a pinch of salt and whip into the other ingredients and set away to chill. When ready to serve heap in sherbet glasses, pour over whipped cream and sprinkle with broken pecan meats.

Acid cherries stimulate the gastric juices and are laxative. Prunes and figs are considered nature's best laxative. They are also rich in sugar and mineral salts.

All citrus fruits, in fact most of our fruits, are said to give an alkaline reaction. Plums and cranberries are the exception.

Savory Food.

Save the coarser outside stalks of celery and cut into half-inch pieces.



Cook until tender, then put into a baking dish with a layer of thick white sauce, a layer of grated cheese, and repeat. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are brown.

Larded Beef Tenderloin.—Cut the salt pork for larding from the firm portion under the rind. Cut the lardons one-fourth inch wide and as long as the pork slices permit. Chill the lardons in ice water before threading them and insert one-fourth inch below the surface and draw through, tying in a loose knot. Arrange in rows or triangles, dredge the tenderloin with seasoned flour, brown in a hot frying pan, turning often to keep from scorching. Then cook slowly until well cobbed. Serve with baked bananas and Proivralde Sauce.—Put two tablespoonfuls of the trimmings from the salt pork into a saucepan to try out. Add two slices of onion, five of carrot, two sprigs of parsley, a quarter of a bayleaf, a slice of green pepper and half a chili pepper; cook until soft, drain off the fat, add one-fourth of a cupful of vinegar and let simmer until the vinegar is reduced to one-half. To the fat add enough butter to make four tablespoonfuls, add the same amount of flour and cook until smooth, then add one and one-half cupfuls of brown stock, the vegetables and the vinegar, boil up once, strain over one-half cupful of sultana raisins cooked in boiling water until tender, add three tablespoonfuls of currant jelly and the same of orange juice.

Fried Egg Plant.—Pare and cut the egg plant into thin slices. Pile on a large plate and sprinkle each slice with salt. Cover with another plate and put a heavy weight on top. Let stand an hour or two, remove the weight, rinse each slice in cold water, wipe dry and dip in beaten egg, then in seasoned crumbs and fry brown in butter. For fritters dip into fritter batter and fry in deep fat.

POULTRY

ROUNDWORMS CAUSE BIG POULTRY LOSS

Roundworms of poultry and intestinal parasites are directly or indirectly responsible for the greatest loss to poultry flocks. In many cases where birds become unthrifty, poor in flesh and finally die, roundworm infestation combined possibly with incorrect feeding methods appears to be the only tangible cause.

Outbreaks of infectious disease are more often found in flocks harboring roundworms than in worm-free flocks. This indicates that the parasites must be a factor in lowering the vitality and resistance of the birds to disease. In some states it is estimated that intestinal parasites are responsible for more than 50 per cent of poultry losses. A large share of these losses is directly attributed to roundworm infestation.

It has been reported by some poultry-packing establishments that between 75 and 80 per cent of the birds purchased are infested with some form of intestinal parasites. Such infested birds represent an economic loss not only to the poultry raiser, but also to the packer.

Nematodes or roundworms are cylindrical in shape and unsegmented. There are several species, four of which are quite common. These are the large roundworm, the ceca worm, the gapeworm, and the gizzard worm.

The symptoms caused by these four species of roundworms are so similar that it is not always possible to tell when fowls are infested with any particular type except in isolated cases when the infestation is with gapeworms. Young birds may become heavily infested in a relatively short time, but may not show it immediately.

Diseased Poultry Must Not Be Sent to Market

"Be extra careful not to send a sick fowl to market," reads a warning sent to 92 county farm bureaus by F. A. Gougler, director of the poultry and egg department of the Illinois Agricultural association.

"We should not forget the serious epidemic of poultry diseases that developed throughout the country last year and which may appear again this year," the statement reads. "Since symptoms of many diseases are very much alike, every effort should be made to prevent sick birds from reaching the market, which may cause another embargo."

The appearance of the chicken disease which caused the embargo to be placed on live poultry last year has begun again to show up in the New York market. The embargo last winter caused great loss to western farmers. Director Gougler issues this warning with the hope that the spread of the disease and ultimate loss may be prevented this year, and to forestall the embargo, which was so disastrous last year.

Government and state authorities are working quietly but thoroughly to stamp out the disease wherever it appears.

Pertinent Suggestions to All Poultry Owners

The following questions which are put to the record flock keepers of Iowa by the Iowa State college are pertinent suggestions to all poultry keepers. "Do you Remember?" they say:

When milk ever spoiled the fertility or hatchability of an egg?

When a chick didn't make good growth when it had milk in its ration?

What time you used to have getting a lot of early chicks hatched with hens?

When you had a mongrel flock and wished some one would come along and get you started with a good breed?

The time you had raising chicks on the old ground that had been used for 25 years without a change?

How your chicks acted when they were affected by worms and coccidiosis?

How you tried to fight internal parasites without new ground?

Poultry Facts

Feed nothing that will sour or spoil quickly.

The poultry yard sheltering a lot of "back-number" roosters is not going to bring profit to the owner.

* * *

Don't begrudge the mature birds a few days' rest—feed them all they will eat and they will soon be back on the job again.

Water is also an essential, and, although hens drink little in cold days, such inclinations as they may have for the liquid should be satisfied. The egg is about 75 per cent water.

* * *

The chicken house should not be shut up without a particle of ventilation simply because the weather is cold. Pure air without drafts is necessary and this is the chief reason for the success of the muslin curtains (louses that are kept closed up perfectly tight soon become stuffy and damp.

UNION BRINGS STRENGTH

The statesmen who devised the Federal Reserve System said:" The banks must join together; credit must flow freely from districts which have too little; we must have no more money panics."

The government is now urging railroads to consolidate and is consolidating various government departments to promote efficiency an deconomy.

Consolidations were forced upon the electrical industry years ago. A number of small plants joining together, found that they could substitute one central generating station for several small stations (as country districts are now substituting "consolidated schools for the red school house of former days). By virtue of their united resources they could extend service into new communities not able to finance a separate plant; if one district suffered a setback the other companies could carry the plant through the period of distress.

So great were advantages of union that holding companies" (which might much better be termed "supervision companies" or "financing companies") came naturally into being everywhere, to group local companies under one strong central management and give uniform service to thousands of communities at lower cost.

Such companies have been an important factor in making possible the splendid record of theh electrical industry, which has been able to actually reduce rates since 1914 while the general cost of living shows a 65 per cens increase.

The United States spends $2,000,000 a day for sugar, at the present low price. All its own sugar resources supply only one-half this quantity.

Great Britain, for centuries the patron saint of raw-material producers, is setting out to grow her own sugar. By 1930. it is planned that 50 sugar factories will be in operation in Great Britain. The friendship of Cuba and the United States alone made it possible to live in sugarless Great Britain during the World War. It does not wish to again be in such a position. Just now, sugar-growing would help relieve the unemployment situation in Great Britain, where 1,200,000 people are jobless and drawing public dole.

Our own country never made a better investment than in it asugar factories that prevent foreign sugar monopoly and insure the nation against a sugar famine in case of international disturbances. It is well to encourage our own beet sugar industry.

PRACTICAL OR POLITICAL

Dr. George Otis Smith in a recent address said that there are "two kinds of conservation—one practical, the other political."

Alaska is a startling example of just what political conservation can do.

Conservation—one phase of the political brand—was the fallacious foundation upon which our present mineral land leasing system was built. Those who argue so earnestly in favor of leasing system did so upon the premise that private ownership means waste. They contended that great corporations engaged in producing our minerals were wasting a precious heritage that belonged to all the people. They got what they wanted. The leasing bill has been a law for several years. But with what success? Has it proved the great panacea it was declared to be? Evidence is to the contrary.

Conservation in the political sense means stagnation. Undeveloped natural resources in times of emergen y are tantamount to no natural resource. It is safe to say that for one instance of abuse by private capital of rights accorded it, there are thousands of examples of men who have hazarded their all and have given to the nation real and tangible assets.—Mining Congress Journal.

WHO PROFITS MOST?

The gasoline tax spread over the country like a case of measles. Now that it has been established, the tendency is to increase the tax because it is an easy way to get tax money. Many states have a tax as high as 3 cents a gallon and proposals have already been made for as high as 6 cents. The gasoline tax is on the theory that the automobile owners profit most by the good roads, but it is safe to say that no one profits to as great an extent by such roads as do the property owners along them. Take the owner of property on the main street of any town or small city which is traversed by a paved state highway. The automobile driver pays the tax to build the road increases the value of this property to such an extent that rents are doubled, trebled and quadrupled. There were 17,548,377 motor vehicles registered in the United States on July 1, last. If automobile owners could realize their numerical strength, there would be less chance of their being penalized gasoline purchasers.

At Least They Have Room for Many Loves

"Our movie queens have big hearts," said Playwright Eugene Walter at a movie queen's dinner in New York.

"I called on a movie queen the other afternoon," he went on, "and found her writing letters. Her beautifully monogrammed stationery was in various colors, and I said:

"'You don't stick to one color of paper, do you?'

"'Oh, no,' said she. 'When I write to George, I always use pink paper—that means love. When I write to Reggie, I use blue—that means "faithful unto death." When I write to Clive, I use cream—that means "my first and only love." When—?'

"But here," said Mr. Walter, "I changed the subject. As I was saying, movie queens have big hearts."

WAKE up your sleeping youth! Look younger! Be younger!

Age has little to do with your looks or your feelings. It's the condition of your blood that counts!

And blood will tell! It tells in a hundred ways. If your system is starving for rich, red blood, you may look and feel old at thirty. But if you build up the red-blood-cells with S. S. S. you'll quickly see the wrinkles fade away—the sagging pouches give way to firm, solid flesh—and the fresh, glowing beauty of youth take the place of a skin sallow and disfigured with blotches.

Rich, red blood means youth, vim and energy! S. S. S. helps Nature build red-blood-cells by the millions. For generations S. S. S. has been keeping people looking and feeling young.

Fresh, cleansing, purifying, rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build, nourishes every muscle, organ and tissue of the body. Pimples, blotches and blackheads disappear. Boils, eczema and rashes dry up. Your face—your body—your whole being takes on the look and power of youth.

Wake up your system with S. S. S. Build red blood and you rebuild youth!

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

GOLDEN ROSE MADE FOR SPANISH QUEEN

Fashioned of jewels and beaten gold a vase of roses in natural colors was recently made for the queen of Spain. To make the flowers and leaves the proper color various shades of red, yellow, lemon, green and white gold leaf were used. Working with a metal so malleable that more than one thousand three-inch squares can be hewed from one ounce, an exact model of blossoming roses and buds on the stem was created. Leaves were given a greenish tint by use of gold leaf about the 150,000th part of an inch in thickness. Alloys of silver and copper were mixed with gold to produce the desired colors and then the metal was melted in a crucible. After this it was cast in an ingot, flattened into long, narrow strips and beaten with a 17-pound hammer for 20 minutes. Then it was cut into sections and put between oxskins of a "shoder," where it was pounded again. Artists of a family that for generations has been skilled in this ancient craft spent months in perfecting the queen's gift.—Family Herald

Calf Had Picked Out Queer Foster Mother

A traveler in the far-flung fastnesses of the Ozarks met a rumshuckle auto racketing along, while following behind it came a half-grown calf striving with might and main to keep up. Farther on the traveler met a resident of the region following a bellowing cow. Bringing the animal to a struggling halt by means of the rope around her neck the native saluted. "Howdy! I don't reckon you've seed a red-complected, hoid-faced calf along this road anywhurs?"

"Yes," replied the traveler. "I saw such a calf quite a way back, following a flivver car. What is the matter with the animal?"

SURETY COMPANIES GIVEN MONOPOLY

THREE WORDS DROPPED FROM ACT WHEN ALABAMA CODE IS REVISED

SUPREME COURT'S DECISION

Holds That "Personal Security" Is Illegal In Case of Shelby County Tax Collector

Montgomery.—Bond of a tax collector must be executed by a surety company qualified to do business in Alabama, and a personal bond is not legal, it was held by the supreme court in the case of J. L. Isbell, former tax collector of Shelby county, versus L. B. Riddle, probate judge, appealed from Shelby county circuit court.

It was brought out in this case that the framers of the 1923 code, by omitting three words from an act of the 1919 legislature in carrying it forward into the 1923 code, gave surety companies a monopoly on making tax collector bond in this state.

Isbell was elected tax collector of Shelby county in 1920. His term of office was extended for two years, in common with other tax collectors of the state, by act of the 1923 legislature. It became necessary for Isbell to execute a new bond for the extended term beginning October 1, 1925. He tendered to the probate judge a bond in the amount and conditioned as required by law, with sureties composed of tax payers and residents of Shelby county who were good and sufficient sureties. The probate judge refused to accept and approve the bond for the sole reason that it was a personal bond and not executed by a surety company qualified to do business in Alabama.

It was further shown by the petition that prior to the presentation of this bond to the probate judge, Isbell had made application to every surety and guaranty company qualified under the Alabama law to execute official bonds, and that each of them had refused to execute or become surety upon his bond.

Isbell carried the matter into circuit court, which upheld the action of the probate judge, this decision being affirmed by the supreme court.

The supreme court pointed out that the question at issue was whether the tax collector could make his official bond with sureties other than a surety company qualified to do business in Alabama. Attention was called to the fact that the act of 1919 provided that the official bond of the tax collector could be executed "with personal sureties or with a surety company qualified to do business in Alabama." The court pointed out, however, that as carried forward into the 1923 code the words "with personal sureties" were omitted so that the statute as it now reads requires the surety bond to be "a surety company qualified to do business in Alabama."

POULTRY

EARLY MATURITY IS A VALUABLE ASSET

There is a large difference in the type and maturity of different birds of the same age and general breeding. This should be taken into consideration when selecting birds for winter laying or for breeding purposes. The slow-maturing birds will show long, slender heads, lack of fleshing, be light in weight and show general signs of lack of vigor. The slow-developing birds will also lack in body capacity and development.

A test which was run by the Iowa experiment station shows that the early maturing birds are the best for winter egg production and that they also continue to be the heaviest layers during the following summer. The pullets in the test were divided into four groups, the early maturing, medium maturing, late maturing and very late maturing.

The results for the four winter months of November, December, January and February showed an average of 51.42 eggs for the first group, 36.85 for the second, 15.39 for the third, and only 3.28 for the very late-maturing group.

In the following four spring months the difference was still marked, but not so great. The average for the different groups were 90.65 for the first group, 73.33 for the second, 67.82 for the third, and 35.44 for the fourth.

In the four months of July, August, September and October, which completed the year's test, the results were again decidedly in favor of the early maturing birds. The averages were 75.43 for the first group, 69.29 for the second, 30.02 for the third, and 15.04 for the fourth.

The total for the year showed an average of 217.5 eggs for the first group or the early maturing fowls.

Cholera Is Contagious and Is Spread by Hens

Cholera is a highly contagious disease conveyed by bacillus which are found in the discharges and in the blood. The rapid spread of the contagion is accounted for by the fowls eating grass or other food contaminated by excretions of diseased birds, and through spilled blood of diseased birds. Probably the first sign of this trouble is shown through the urates—that part of the excrement of the fowl which is excreted by the kidneys and voided with the droppings. Normally this is white, but it becomes tinged with yellow, and then bright yellow when the bird is infected with cholera. In cholera the solid part of the droppings also changes color, becoming bright emerald green instead of dark green approaching black, as it appears when normal.

Changes in color of the droppings, together with frequent voiding of excrement with mucus and froth are danger signals. It is important to examine the dropping boards daily when cholera is reported in the neighborhood.

Fowls that show this trouble will usually stand with drooping wings, roughened feathers and distended crop.

Birds should be killed without spilling blood by pulling the neck. All carcasses should be promptly burned.

Keep the flock in as small groups as possible. Disinfect frequently; keep the dust down and discourage stray dogs and visitors in the chicken yard.

Select Breeding Males Early for Next Spring

The selection of breeding males for next season should begin as soon as they can be distinguished from the pullets. The Missouri experiment station bred up a great flock of layers in a few years simply by selecting the cockerels that crowed first and the pullets that laid first for breeding purposes. If one does not trapnest it is difficult to select the pullets from large flocks. But a few minutes spent with the cockerels early on a clear morning will readily distinguish the more advanced males. A peeping red comb is the first indication, and a squeaky crow is the second.

The exceptional cockerels of the Leghorn and other lighter breeds will start to crow at about six weeks. The heavier breeds usually take from eight to nine weeks. These early crowers should be marked by wing bands or leg bands and given special attention until maturity.

A few minutes spent in observing the males at this age will repay the breeder many times over for his trouble. One good male selected for his early crow, given special care, and used for breeding may advance the egg production as much as 30 per cent in a single year.

Drinking Fountains

Many non-freezing drinking fountains now on the market are enjoying [illegible] Especially during [illegible] chickens need pure, fresh water as much in winter as in summer. A person can thrive longer without water than without food, and a hen is the same way. The poultryman who can keep his fowls lively, comfortable and happy during the coldest weather is he one who will make the most money in cold, rainy days it is best to keep the fowls confined to the house.

POPWELL SCHOOL HOUSE

Editor Chilton County News:

I will write a few lines from here as there has not been anything from here in sometime. Health is very good at present and farmers are done gathering and enjoying a big harvest.

We have a right good school at this place, taught by Miss Mabel King, of Billingsley. The children seem to be enjoying school and a good time.

There was a box supper at this place Saturday night for the benefit of the school. There were nine boxes sold by our noted auctioneer, Mr. John Cox. After the boxes were sold there was a cake put up for the prettiest girl of this community. Mrs. Vera Culp's name was put up on the board, followed by Mrs. Ila May Jones. The first received fifteen votes and the other twenty, it seem d that the people couldn't decide which one to vote for, and to keep it from stopping at that Miss Mabel King's name was offered and she received two hundred and fifty votes and the contest closed, and the latter was the winner of the cake.

We attended the singing at Shiloah Sunday evening and enjoyed a good singing. There was not a large crowd but it was as good as I have attended. Everyone did their part to make it a success and if you don't believe they can sing, just come and see for yourself. The directors were O. C. Billingsley, Clarence Billingsley, Miss Minnie Bice, Miss Dollie Mae Hicks, Miss Velma Deason; the closing song was sung by Rev. Tommie Billingsley. We wish them success.

Mrs. Vera Culp was visiting friends at Clanton Sunday and Sunday night.

Mr. I. M. Deason visited Mr. John [illegible] Sunday.

Well, I will quit for this time and if I miss the waste paper basket I will try it again soon.

EDUCATIONAL DINNER

December 10 will mark one of the most important steps ever taken for better education in Alabama. An Educational Dinner will be given in Birmingham on this date Citizens from all walks of life will be present. Hon. R. H. Powell, state senator from Tuskegee, will speak from the standpoint of the statesman and business man. Doctor A. F. Harman, superintendent of Montgomery county schools, will speak from the standpoint of the educator.

Due to space limitations for holding the dinner, only a limited number can attend. Invitations will be sent out to men and women representing every interest in the state. The Citizens invita[illegible] committee, acting jointly with the invitation committe of school men, is composed of the following: Mr. Erkine Ramsey, of Birmingham; Mr. J. L. Cochran, of Mobile; Mr. R. E. L. Cope, of Union Springs, and Mr. C. W. Ashcraft, of Florence.

The purpose of the dinner is to discuss in an open sincere and frank manner our educational needs and what can be done toward financing our entire school system. The above is the statement of R. W. Cowart, secretary of the Alabama Education Association.

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY CUSTOMS

Social life in Philadelphia in the years immediately before the Revolution and the adoption of the Declaration of Independence occupied much of the time of the inhabitants. Afternoon tea parties were much in vogue, and the popularity of those who attended these was gauged by their ability to make puns during the course of conversation. The punster of the eighteenth century was the equivalent of the "wise cracker" of today.

In the latter half of the century the socially prominent residents began to give greater attention to their personal appearance than before. The use of tooth brushes became rather widespread, and the almost equally popular custom among the women of today, the arching of eyebrows, was given its first trial.

"Mrs Holliday ,wife of Joseph Holiday, tailor, in Arch street," reads an advertisement in a newspaper of this time, "offers her new-invented curious compound which will, in a half minute, take out by the roots the hair that grows too low on the forehead, etc, or around the mouth; it forms the eychrows that are too large into a curious arch. This compound is perfectly innocent and may be used on children under twenty months old."

In reading the old advertisement one cannot help but wonder what advantage it would have been to a child twenty months old to have its brows permanently arched into a "curious" look or if it was a common thing at that time for a child of such tender months to "sport" superfluous hair [illegible] the mouth.

In 1769 there came to Philadelphia, according to another old advertisement, a Dr. LeMayeur, a dentist, who proposed to transplant teeth.

"Several respectable ladies had them implanted" wrote Watson in his "Annals of Philadelphia." "I remember cases. They were often two month before they could eat with them."

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY
Thos. W. Martin
President

WISE old Ben Franklin said: "Money makes money and the money money makes, makes more money." That's equally true of a state's resources. Coal, iron ore, limestone and a rich farming territory are worth nothing as an undeveloped storehouse of energy. But, put to work, they create wealth. Low cost hydro-electric and steam power has been a most effective contribution to the industrial progress of Alabama. Hydro-power has lowered production costs in many industries and brought new industries to the state. It has increased Alabama's wealth.

Alabama Power Company deserves the congratulations of all thinking citizens for the role it has played in Alabama's progress.

The interest of Jemison & Company in that progress is twofold. First, the welfare of Jemison & Company is inseparably identified with that of Alabama. Second, Jemison & Company has a direct pecuniary interest because it lends large sums on mortgages in Alabama towns of more than 10,000 population and on improved Alabama farms.

Crops are about all harvested and the farmers are ready to start for another crop. When one is harvested another is ready to start, so there is no time for a hustling, good farmer to loaf; but if he keep it up for a few years he will have a living when he is worn out.

The farmer makes our living and he should be honored above all men. Without him we could not exist long.

WHO PRINTS YOUR ENVELOPES?

It seems very common for everybody to order their supplies from some mail order house. Even some merchants order their envelopes printed from some mail order house, too, and they can't blame others to do just what they are doing. We believe in patronizing our neighbors, right at our door than patronize the big mail order houses hundreds o fmiles away, who don't care what becames of you if they can get your money. It seems quite an injustice to the printer for the government to go into competition with the local printerto print envelopes at the cost of the government at the actual cost of the envelopes, by high salaried men. Why not let the local printer do the printing for his county and earn a decent living on a small salary?

"He explained that faulty or slow elimination of waste matter allowed poisons to form and be absorbed by the blood—and this meant tainted milk for baby.

"He prescribed the Nujol treatment and it made a world of difference to both of us. Now that I know how dangerous constipation is and how easily it can be prevented, I am never going to allow myself to get into that bad condition again."

Mothers are the best friends of Nujol. When precious new lives are at stake they seek the remedy that medical authorities approve because it is so safe, gentle and natural in its action. Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body.

Nujol helps in Nature's own way

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination, without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Tommy's Great Secret

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright.)

LORETTA'S parents were violently opposed to her marrying Clinton Dawes. Their opposition was just what was wanted to make Loretta determine that she would marry him. Mr. and Mrs. Lawder thought they had good reasons for not wanting Clinton as a son-in-law.

"He's not at all the sort of a man Loretta ought to have for a husband," said Mrs. Lawder—and there the matter stood.

Loretta was a superb young lady, cast in the heroic mold and with a determination of her own which had not been properly chastened in childhood. Loretta went for comfort to Tommy Bartlett, a distant cousin of hers who was employed in her father's office, and was a quiet frequenter of the Lawder home. "Tommy," said she, "I want your assistance. I am madly in love with Clinton Dawes and father and mother won't hear of our getting married. What do you think? They are going to take me to Europe so as to part us. But I don't care. They may keep me there a hundred years if they want to; but I will come back at last and marry Clinton."

"You'd both be rather old a century from now, wouldn't you?" suggested Tommy.

"Don't be silly," retorted Loretta. "I was speaking figuratively, of course. Clinton and I have talked the whole thing over and are going to write to each other every other day. Now I know father and mother will intercept our letters. Father is going to take you along with him to Europe. I heard him tell mother so. Now I want you to let Clinton and me carry on our correspondence through you."

"Really I should be loath to deceive your parents," said Tommy; "I fear I must refuse."

"Oh, please," pleaded Loretta. "In love, you know, all's fair. Think—is there not some girl you are in love with and from whom if you were cruelly parted you would—"

A blush mounted to Tommy's forehead.

"Oh, there is!" cried Loretta. "Who is she? Tell me all about her."

"Not now," replied Tommy. "Some other time, perhaps. I really must refuse to act as the intermediary you suggest, Loretta."

"All right," cried Loretta. "You'll be sorry some day"—and bounced out of the room.

Loretta and her parents, with Tommy in attendance, sailed according to schedule. Before sailing Loretta had a secret and clandestine parting with Clinton at the crowded table of a "bon voyage" dinner at which, between courses, they vowed eternal constancy and promised to write regularly. At first they did write every other day as agreed; and nobody appeared to be intercepting their letters. This was rather disappointing to Loretta. Then she began to get careless about her correspondence—there was so much to see and so much to do. "I can't help it—I can't be writing all the time," thought she. Then Clinton's letters became less and less regular and Loretta was sure they were being intercepted. She accused her parents of the crime and they repelled the accusation indignantly. "Gracious," thought she, "can it be Tommy? And if so what is his object? Is it possible that he is in love with me, too, and wants to part Clinton and me? Absurd!"

She spoke to Tommy of her suspicions regarding the letters and he calmly replied that he had intercepted none. She believed him. You could not help believing Tommy. As they wandered about from place to place Tommy was the greatest stay and comfort to the whole family. He arranged everything and saw that his arrangements were carried out. Reticent as he was he proved to be a most agreeable companion and not a day passed but either Mr. and Mrs. Lawder or their daughter said: "I don't know what we should do without Tommy." Every now and then Loretta would beg him to tell her about the girl he was in love with but he was deaf to her pleadings. She wrote a furious letter to Clinton asking him what he meant by not writing oftener and, after a considerable interval, received a reply, apologetic but highly unsatisfactory. Loretta was melancholy for a time and then cheered up and seemed to enjoy life immensely.

Thus a year and a half passed and one day they found themselves sitting on the terrace at Shepherd's hotel in Cairo, taking tea. Loretta, happening to glance at a table at a little distance cried out: "Oh, there's Clinton; he's with that Ranger girl whose father made so much money in oil." Clinton and the young lady with him were just rising from their table. He caught sight of the Lawder party and with his companion strolled over their way; greeting them in that very courtly manner he had and saying, "Allow me to present my wife, Loretta, you must remember Helen as Miss Ranger?"

"Perfectly charmed to meet you both again," said Loretta. "Of course I remember Helen. And allow me to present my husband—Mr. Bartlett. Clinton, you must remember Tommy Bartlett?"

For you see Loretta had at last induced Tommy to tell her who that girl was he was in love with.

PLUM PUDDING IS HOLIDAY FAVORITE

Christmas Tables Incomplete Without Plenty of English Desserts.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Desserts of the English plum pudding type are general favorites for the holiday season. Perhaps one reason for their popularity is their good keeping quality. A steamed plum pudding will keep for weeks and can be heated up for serving whenever desired. With a delicious pudding or two on the pantry shelf Mrs. Housewife will find her Christmas dinner easier to prepare, as well as other dinners during the holiday season when an unexpected guest "happens in."

Here are two such puddings that may be made ahead of time for Christmas and New Years, the recipes of which were tested in the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Suet Pudding.

1 cupful molasses	½ teaspoonful soda and 2 teaspoonfuls baking powder if sweet milk is used
⅛ cupful brown sugar
1 cupful raisins
1 cupful currants or ½ cupful chopped citron and ½ cupful chopped dates	1 tablespoonful cinnamon
1 cupful beef suet (cut very fine)	½ teaspoonful nutmeg
1 cupful milk (sour or sweet)	1 teaspoonful allspice
2 cupfuls sifted flour	½ teaspoonful mace
2 teaspoonfuls soda if sour milk is used	½ teaspoonful salt

Mix ingredients and turn into a well-greased mold. Place the pan or mold in a steamer over boiling water and steam four hours. Place the pudding in a warm oven for ten minutes to dry.

Carrot and Suet Pudding.

1 cupful suet chopped fine	½ teaspoonful soda
1 cupful grated carrots	¾ cupful brown sugar
½ cupful chopped citron	2 cupfuls sifted flour
1 cupful chopped dates	½ teaspoonful cinnamon
1 cupful sultana raisins	½ teaspoonful nutmeg
2 eggs (well beaten)	½ teaspoonful mace
½ cupful molasses	½ teaspoonful allspice

Place in a well-greased pan or pudding mold and steam four hours.

Sauce for the Pudding.

Serve either of these puddings warm with any sauce desired. Foamy sauce is good with a plum pudding, or a hard sauce may be preferred.

Lighter Desserts.

For the Christmas dinner itself, usually a very hearty meal, a less hearty dessert may be desired, such as a frozen pudding or a molded gelatin dessert.

Plum Puddings Keep Well and Are Useful in Any Emergency.

For Custard Sponge.

1½ tablespoonfuls gelatin.	½ cupful sugar.
3 cupfuls milk.	¼ teaspoonful salt.
3 eggs.	1 teaspoonful vanilla

Scald the milk with the gelatin and pour slowly on the yolks which have been beaten to a froth with the sugar. Return to the double boiler and stir until thickened. Remove from the fire, add salt and flavoring, and the stiffly-beaten whites.

Fruit Gelatin.

2 tablespoonfuls gelatine soaked 20 minutes in ½ cup cold water.	¾ cup oranges cut into small sections.
2½ cups boiling water.	¾ cup chopped red cherries (preserved or canned).
¾ cup sugar.
¼ cup lemon juice.

Chill and when it begins to stiffen add fruit and mold.

To mold the gelatin pour a layer of the sponge one inch thick into an oblong mold. Allow it to chill until partially firm, then add a layer of the fruit gelatin and another layer of the sponge. Keep in a cold place until firm when it may be removed from the mold. Garnish the dish with sections of oranges and red cherries.

Frozen Pudding.

Alternate layers of plain frozen custard and frozen custard containing raisins, cherries and chopped candied pineapple may be molded in a square mold. Served in slices it also makes an attractive dessert for the Christmas dinner.

TENDER CRUST FOR THANKSGIVING PIE

Much Depends on How Dough Is Handled and Proportions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Why not have pie for dessert on Thanksgiving day? The traditional conclusion to a New England Thanksgiving dinner was always a pie of some sort. Aside from the fact that New England housekeepers were famous pie-makers, and could exhibit their skill to advantage at the large family holiday gathering, probably one of the reasons for choosing pie for dessert at this time was that it could be made early in the morning, or even the day before, leaving the cook free to attend to other details of her dinner.

No matter what kind of a filling is used, a pie is not a success unless the crust is tender, flaky, and delicate. While this result depends in part on how the dough is handled, good ingredients in the right proportions are necessary to begin with. The directions given below for making pie crust will be found helpful, and the novice will acquire skill in manipulation with a little practice and possibly by watching a more experienced cook mix and roll out her crust. The recipe is taken from Farmers' Bulletin 1450, Home Baking, issued recently by the

There Is Nothing Better Than Mince Pie for the Thanksgiving Dessert.

United States Department of Agriculture. Many housekeepers find it practical to make up sufficient dough, by doubling or trebling the amounts given to last for several bakings. Pie crust dough can be stored in the ice box for at least a week. This plan can be followed with the Thanksgiving menu in mind to simplify the preparation of the dinner:

Plain Pie Crust.

(1 two-crust pie)

1¼ cupfuls sifted soft wheat flour.
5½ to 7 tablespoonfuls fat.
1 teaspoonful salt.
About 2½ tablespoonfuls water.

Soft wheat or pastry flour is desirable, but if only strong, or bread flour, is on hand, a little less should be used—about seven-eighths as much. Mix and sift the salt and the flour, and work in the fat with the tips of the fingers as lightly and quickly as possible. The use of a knife, pastry fork, or biscuit cutter is often recommended to avoid warming or handling the materials too much. Add the water slowly and use no more than is absolutely necessary. Roll the dough very lightly each crust separately. When putting on an upper crust, moisten the edges so they will stick together, and crimp them around with a fork or the fingers. Prick the top several times with a fork to allow the steam to escape.

If the filling is very liquid in nature or even of the consistency of lemon meringue or pumpkin, it is better to prebake the lower crust about ten minutes, until it is delicately colored, but not brown. The juices or liquids do not then affect the pie crust and make it soggy. A lower crust is entirely prebaked when a cooked filling, such as lemon, chocolate, or butterscotch, is to be used.

Start a two-crust pie in an oven with a very high temperature (about 450 degrees Fahrenheit), and then, after eight or ten minutes, lower the heat rapidly so that the filling may cook through without overcooking the crust.

The filling for the Thanksgiving pie may be any preferred kind. Pumpkin and mince seem about equal in popularity at this season, but apple, raisin, and lemon meringue pies appear very often, and other family favorites may be served. Mince and apple pies are usually made with two crusts, although occasionally criss-cross strips are used instead of an upper crust. Pumpkin and lemon pies are made with a lower crust only. A very festive looking pie may be made by adding a meringue or whipped cream to a plain open pie. Almost any kind of a pie except lemon meringue may be served "a la mode"—that is, with a spoonful of vanilla ice cream on top.

Don't Waste Butter

Why waste butter, whether it's 40 or 80 cents a pound, asks the United States Department of Agriculture? Using individual butter plates, bread and butter plates, or even individual saucers for butter keeps all unused butter clean and usable in cooking. The saving is worth the additional dishwashing. Serving butter in individual pats rather than putting a whole piece on the table prevents waste and if the pats are made small it is easier for each person to take as much as he wishes and no more.

"Most laxatives are unfit for Babies and Children—too harsh. They shock the tender bowel muscles and derange the digestive and eliminative organs."
—DR. CALDWELL

Your Child's Laxative! Does It Regulate for Weeks?

Does the laxative you now give your baby or child promote regularity for weeks and often for months—or must you "purge" and "physic" the little one every little while to keep the system clean, fresh and sweet?

Even a cross, feverish, sick baby or child will love the taste of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and one dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself the difference between this pleasant, harmless, regulating laxative and the ordinary griping, nauseating "physic."

Doctor Advised Operation Friend Said Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound First

St. Paul, Minnesota.—"I was all run-down from overwork and worry, had no appetite, could not sleep at night, and looked like a corpse. I have six children three boys and one girl) and did not get any strength after my last baby was born. I was getting worse and thinner every day. The doctor said I had to go to the Hospital but this I could not do on account of my family. So I went to a friend of mine and told her what the doctor had told me and she said, 'Now do as I tell you. Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as I have done. It helped me.' So I started taking the Vegetable Compound and I noticed after the first few bottles that I felt considerably better. After taking 9 or 10 bottles I got over my fainting spells. Everybody who sees me now notices the great improvement in my health. I am gaining in weight and strength and am feeling fine. Eat well and sleep good nights. Any woman can write to me and I will answer her letter."—Mrs. MARY WILHELMY, 309 Drake Street, St. Paul, Minnesota.

The Lost Line

Representative William S. Ware of Philadelphia said on the Atlantic City boardwalk:

"Look at those champion girl swimmers in their one-piece bathing suits doing swallow dives. There, in that wheel chair, are a couple of girl horseback riders in white riding breeches. And there goes a girl in knickers—off for an all-day tramp, no doubt."

Representative Ware smiled and added:

"The one dividing line between the sexes is disappearing—the clothes line."

SHOVELER'S AMBITION

"It isn't every creature who has ambition," said the Shoveler.

"You are doubtless right," said the Gadwall.

"I have ambition," the Shoveler remarked.

"I thought you had from the way that you spoke about it in the first place.

"You wouldn't have spoken as you did, if you had not intended to add that you were one of those creatures who did have ambition.

"However, I am glad to hear it," the Gadwall ended.

Then he stopped, for he didn't really know what ambition was, and if it had happened not to be a nice thing to have, it was very rude of him to have said what he did to Mr. Shoveler.

Yet he did not want to show he was ignorant of what ambition meant, and he was pretty sure it must mean something worth while from the way in which the Shoveler had spoken of it in the first place.

But he wanted to be careful and tactful, so he said:

"That is, my dear sir, I am delighted to hear you have ambition if you care for it.

"Of course it entirely depends upon a creature's tastes. Now, I am very fond of the marshes."

These two wild fowls, or wild birds, were chatting in the duck pond of the zoo.

The Gadwall was a handsome fellow with gray feathers.

His family home had been in the Mississippi Valley, though many of his cousins spent most of their time in Canada.

"Dear Mr. Gadwall," said Mr. Shoveler, "I fear you don't know just what ambition is."

Mr. Gadwall didn't say anything. Perhaps he had shown by what he had said that he didn't understand, but he had meant to be most careful—even when he had said that he was very fond of the marshes.

"I See," Said Mr. Gadwall.

Certainly that was safe enough to say without showing his ignorance, but it was just that little speech that had shown he did not really understand.

And he not said that he would have been all right. But then he might never have understood the meaning of the word, and another time he might be much embarrassed to be so ignorant.

So he really did not mind that Mr. Shoveler said this to him, and he was relieved and pleased when Mr. Shoveler added:

"I will tell you."

He began at once.

"An ambitious creature is one who wants to get on—to get ahead of the other fellow."

"I see, I see," said Mr. Gadwall, "you mean a creature who is fond of running races."

Mr. Shoveler shook his head.

"No, Mr. Gadwall, ambition is a greater thing than that. When one is ambitious, one longs for success, and one is willing to work for it now!

"Now the ambition of my life is to really receive the name of Shoveler. We have all worked with our bills digging in the mud, and our beaks have actually grown to look like shovels—and are far more important and prominent than our bodies.

"We can strain the mud through the sides of our bills and so catch all the bits of food which we gather.

"But to think of a family having had the ambition to look like, and to be, shovelers and to actually succeed in what they undertook to do!"

"Well," said the Gadwall, "it's a mighty queer ambition to want to have a bill like a shovel and to work so it will be one.

"But as long as that is your ambition, I admire you for succeeding so well."

"Thank you, thank you," said Mr. Shoveler. "Your words of praise are pleasant to hear!"

FUR TRIM ADDS CHIC TO COATS; GAY BALBRIGGAN FOR THE GIRLS

If it the woman of smart fashion a fur-trimmed cloth coat has become a necessary luxury. The theme of fur treatment has been elaborated on until present results are more than imagination pictured at the outset. Today the fur-trimmed cloth coat stands for marked style individuality. With cloth for the background stylists are devising ways and means of applying fur decoration which attains almost to spectacular effectiveness.

One of the modern methods of displaying fur in an ingenious way is by working it in knee length triangular godets until it provides a conspicuous flare about the hemline.

Fur Adds Handsome Touch to This Coat.

All around border effects of fur are very new. That is, the fur traverses both sides of the front opening, as well as around the bottom.

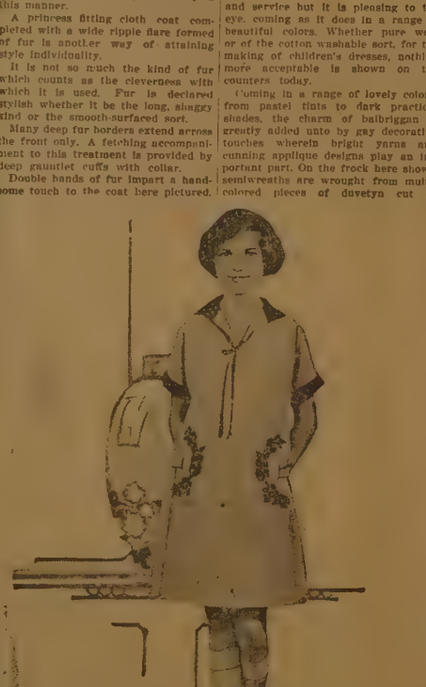
Elbow depth cuffs are a new feature. With a standing, high, fold-over collar the ensemble is most attractive. Seal, squirrel or moleskin work up admirably in this manner.

A princess fitting cloth coat completed with a wide ripple flare formed of fur is another way of attaining style individuality.

It is not so much the kind of fur which counts as the cleverness with which it is used. Fur is declared stylish whether it be the long, shaggy kind or the smooth-surfaced sort.

Many deep fur borders extend across the front only. A fetching accompaniment to this treatment is provided by deep gauntlet cuffs with collar.

Double bands of fur impart a handsome touch to the coat here pictured.



Pretty Dress for a Little Girl.

There is a graceful deep collar with cuffs of the same fur which in this instance is sandsome chinchilla. The cloth is a deep wine shade although the model would be equally as appealing to the eye were it developed in that fashionable new shade of bottle green.

Borders of light-colored fur on dark cloth are particularly favored. Red fox on black presents a pleasing picture. Gray on gray is noted especially, such as a silver fox bordering on a platinum gray duvetyn coat.

The mode in creating frocks and coats for little folks is demonstrating a theory of "like mother like child." Not only does this apply to the styling of garments, but it is equally as true of the fabrics employed. An outstanding example of using the same material for little daughter as well as her elder, "sister and her cousin and her aunt," is that of balbriggan. Was ever there a medium so popular for the fashioning of clothes for old and young alike? It seems not, according to reports from all style centers.

Balbriggan in its own best "reason why" it is so much in demand throughout the world of fashion. It abounds in likable qualities. Not only is it practical from the standpoint of price and service but it is pleasing to the eye, coming as it does in a range of beautiful colors. Whether pure wool or of the cotton washable sort, for the making of children's dresses, nothing more acceptable is shown on the counters today.

Coming in a range of lovely colors from pastel tints to dark practical shades, the charm of balbriggan is greatly added unto by gay decorative touches wherein bright yarns and cunning applique designs play an important part. On the frock here shown semiwreaths are wrought from multi-colored pieces of duvetyn cut in flower shapes, and then applied by means of yellow, green and red yarn. Velvet for cuffs, collar and bands across the tiers, at the hips contributes its share of color value. Such a frock could be carried out very successfully in pencil blue balbriggan with navy velvet trimmings with the applique carrying out a cheerful note.

For the favorite two-piece jumper frocks balbriggan makes up very charmingly. This style is best carried out in colored fashion. However, to the delight of every little girl, the mode has a way of making belt, collar, cuffs and other details out of gilded leather.

PAUL BEFORE FELIX

LESSON TEXT—Acts 24:1-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—Herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offense toward God, and toward men.—Acts 24:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why Paul Was Not Afraid.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Before Felix.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Before Felix: A Contrast.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Have a Good Conscience.

1. Paul Accused (vv. 1-9).

Paul was now in the hands of Felix who determined to hear his case after his accusers had come from Jerusalem Ananias, the high priest, and elders came with Tertullus, perhaps a Roman barrister, who formally made the accusation according to Roman law. He began with flattery. He gave Felix the fullest praise when he and all the people knew that he lied, for Felix was one of the worst governors, destitute of morals and justice. He brought a four-fold charge against Paul:

1. "A Pestilent Fellow" (v. 5).

This would indicate a fellow utterly base and corrupt—a plague.

2. An Inciter of Rebellion, a Mover of Sedition (v. 5).

This they hoped would bring him into conflict with the Roman power.

3. That He Was the Ringleader of a Sect—a Schismatical Party—a Heretic (v. 5).

This was designed to throw contempt and suspicion upon the Christians, by this means to bring Paul into deeper trouble.

4. That He Had Profaned the Temple (v. 6).

In this charge we see the wickedness again, they wilfully suppressed facts.

II. Paul's Defense (vv. 10-21).

This is a splendid example of the strength and dignity of a man whose life is controlled by a noble purpose and who has nothing to conceal, and will not distort or suppress facts.

1. Paul's Frankness and Courtesy (v. 10).

Flattery is entirely wanting. He gave recognition of the fact that Felix had been ruler of this people long enough to be able to judge justly, as the habits and ways of the Jews were familiar to him; he then in a dignified manner assumes that Felix will render a just decision based on the facts of the case.

2. The Charge of Sedition Denied (vv. 11-12).

He flatly and scornfully denied this charge, showing its utter falsity since the time was too short, it being but twelve days since he went to Jerusalem, and half of that time had been spent as a prisoner of the Romans.

3. The Charge of Heresy (vv. 14-16).

This he met by a concession and a denial. He admitted that he was of this "way" which they called heresy, but denied that Christians were schismatics. He showed clearly that his actions were in keeping with the Hebrew religion.

(1) He worshiped the same God (v. 14).

(2) He fully believed in the same Scriptures (v. 14).

(3) He had the same hope of a coming resurrection of the dead (v. 15).

He declared that he had as the principle of life a conscience void of offense before God and man.

(4) The Charge of Sacrilege or Profanation of the Temple (vv. 17-21).

This charge he refuted by showing:

(1) That he had come all the way from Greece (v. 17), to worship at the feast.

(2) That he did not come up emptyhanded but had brought alms for his nation (v. 17).

(3) That there were not competent witnesses present to testify of his behavior in the temple (v. 19).

(4) By challenging his enemies to testify as to his conduct in the council (v. 20).

III. Felix Trembles Before Paul (vv. 22-27).

This is a sort of a sequel to the trial. Wicked as Felix was, Paul's manner somehow won his favor, though he did not release him. His sentence was indulgent imprisonment, which kept him free from his enemies while under Roman protection. Felix sent for Paul that he might hear of Christ from him. Paul behaved himself aright before these sinners in high life. He reasoned of righteousness, self-control and of judgment to come, before Felix and his sinful wife with such power that Felix was terrified, and declared that he would hear Paul further at a convenient time. This was a most flimsy excuse for not changing his life and granting justice to Paul.

FOR EVENING PARTIES

Now that the long evenings are upon us, we will like getting together in small groups for the pleasure which the lovely out of doors has kept us from enjoying.

If it is a dancing party, and sweet apple cider is to be procured, there is no refreshment equal to a chilled glass of the good drink and a doughnut. Very simple to get ready, easy to serve and most enjoyable. To make the doughnuts use the following old recipe which is one hard to equal:

Doughnuts.—Take one and one-fourth cupfuls of sour milk, one-fourth cupful of rich sour cream, two eggs, one and two-thirds cupfuls of sugar, a teaspoonful of soda, a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and as little flour as is possible to roll. Beat the eggs, add the sugar, then the milk and cream with the soda, salt and nutmeg, stir in as much flour as will go in nicely with the mixing spoon and set away on ice to thoroughly chill before frying. When rolling out handle quickly, using as little flour as possible. These doughnuts when fried in hot fat will keep well, are rich without being soaked when cooking.

Peanut Candy.—Shell one pound of roasted peanuts and roll with a rolling pin until like coarse crumbs. Boil for eight minutes from the time the first bubble appears, two pounds of brown sugar and twelve level tablespoonfuls of butter. Stir in the nuts and pour at once into a greased drippling pan. Mark off into squares before it is too hard.

Chicken and Spinach Soup.—Wash and cook two pounds of spinach in one-half cupful of butter for five minutes, or until tender. Add one-half cupful of flour, mixed with one tablespoonful of salt and three-fourths of a teaspoonful of white pepper, stir into the spinach. When cooked rub through a colander, add two quarts of chicken broth. Stir until it boils and serve in bouillon cups; garnish with whipped cream.

Emergency Soup.—Dissolve two and one-half teaspoonfuls of beef extract in three cupfuls of boiling water. Add three tablespoonfuls of milk to one-half tablespoonful of flour and add to the first mixture, stirring constantly until the boiling point is reached, then cook three minutes; add seasoning and three-fourths cupful of cream.

Household Hints.

"Bats in one's belfry" is no joke if they have ever taken possession of the upper regions of a house.

Fill all openings where it is possible for them to get in and burn sulphur, a lot of it, in the attic until they are smoked out.

For the bedridden who get so tired lying in one position and can help themselves: Tie stout new cotton cloth cut into wide strips to the head board or bed frame, have large knots on each end of the strip to grasp by holding to these supports one may raise or change position easily. The knots may be slipped under the pillow when not in use.

A bed light fastened to the headboard of the bed is a great comfort for a poor sleeper. With a slight movement the light may be turned on or off and one may read in bed without the trouble of moving.

For tired feet, a mixture of baking soda and talcum sprinkled into the shoes will give great relief. Change footwear; a change of shoes will rest the feet and a bath of salt water is very refreshing. Feet need care as much or more than other parts of the body, yet they are greatly neglected.

Corns and calluses may be relieved by keeping them covered with a piece of surgeon's tape; renew as often as the bathing removes them. If they cling to the hose, cover with a small bit of absorbent cotton.

When applying adhesive plaster to a wound which has to be dressed often, use short strips with tapes fastened to the strips; these can be untied, the dressing changed and returned without disturbing the adhesive at all. It is not only painful, but dangerous to remove adhesive on a tender skin.

The use of paper napkins together with the dinner napkin is a great economy. Fruit stains and much soiling will be saved by the use of a napkin of paper. If cracked ice is to be used in a sick room it will keep much longer if a flannel cloth is tied over a bowl and the ice kept in it. Cover the bowl with another and place a paper bag over both. When the ice chest is at some distance this is a wonderful step-saver.

When a good tablecloth has been stained and is otherwise in good condition, stretch the cloth with the spot over a pair of embroidery hoops and remove the stain, then press, and the cloth is fresh again.

Orange cut into bits and left when a fever patient may help himself, is a real comfort.

VOLUME 5. CLANTON ALABAMA, THURSDAY, NOV. 26, 1925

MOTHER OF 17 CHILDREN SCOFFS AT YARN ON HIGH COST OF FIRST BABY

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 7.—American homes would be happier if people had more children.

This, at least, is the firm belief of Mrs. William Koziol, of Omaha, who fully qualified to hold such an opinion.

For Mrs. Koziol is the mother of 17 children, all within a space of thirty years.

Her children in age from 2 to 32 years. Mrs. Koziol has reared them, cooked for them, done all her house work, found time to take an active part in the affairs of her parish church and manages to keep informed on public events enough to cast an intelligent vote in every election.

And she's done all of this without a servant, maintaining her home on the not over-swolen salary of her husband who is a laborer.

An interview found Mrs. Koziol in the [illegible] by cutting out winter dresses for the youngest of her brood from an ample piece of heavy plaid material using practice, acquired no doubt in the making of clothes for the dozen or so of older children, had made her latter perfect in the task, and her years sliced through the cloth as expertly as if she were a machine.

Little Lucile, Dorothy and Bernice, the babies of the family, sat on the floor pretending that they, too, were making dresses. Another daughter, Adeline, 16 sat at a sewing machine sewing the pieces her mother dropped.

"It's just as easy to manage many children as a few," she said. "For, when there are so many, they take care of one another."

The interviewer told Mrs. Koziol of [illegible] who complained that the first year of her first child's life cost $4,000 and that she couldn't afford another.

"Sure, they're expensive, these small families," snorted Mrs. Koziol. "She should have 17 children, then they'd make her a profit.

Mrs. Koziol has the conduct of her home well systemized: Every child is given a certain amount of spending money every Sunday until the time comes when he starts earning a salary. On Tuesday the grade school children all lineup with outstretched palms and a coin for school savings goes into each little hand.

The Kozials see to it that each child finishes a high school course. Then the children go to work, turning their wages over to their parents, after deducting spending money, until they get married.

"My older girls and I do all the cooking," said the mother. "We talk things over and make pretty good bargains. We do all [illegible] cleaning. Hire anything done when there are ten girls in the house? Not us. We rush through everything and have plenty of time left for church work, visiting and so on."

Mrs. Koziol was born in Poland, but she is thoroughly Americanized, even to a marcel wave. She and her husband own their own home and have kept out of dbt ever since their marriage.

NO RADICAL LINES

Re-election of William Greenn of Coshocton, Ohio, and other officials of American Federation of Labor on a conservative platform, is an indication of industrial peace.

The American Federation, after a full debate, also decided against forming an independent labor party and rejected all forms of communism.

Chairman Green called attention to the fact that the mass of labor did not follow the endorsement and support of the leaders of a nonpartisan ticket. Only two delagates out of about 1,000, went on record in favor of so-called Russian soviet government.

Contrast the foregoing sane policy with generally satisfactory labor conditions in the United States with the [illegible] in Great Britain. Unemployments still on the increase in that [illegible]. On September 12, official figures showed 1,418,000 persons from the English Unemployment Insurance Department which now calculates that 12.5 per cent of the regular workpopulation of the country is out [illegible]ment.

The authorities go so far as to say unemployment insurance is encouraging a class of citizens who would rather be idle at the expense of the nation than to work for themselves even at higher remuneration. Any system which removes the necessity for work breaks down the desire or [illegible] to be self-supporting.

Here and there an opinion is held that the battle hymn of the republic is the wedding march.

A man [illegible] is settling down in life when he is ashamed to ask the clerk for something cheaper.

A hand-carved desk recently sold for $400, when you can find a million of them in the schools.

THE PRACTICAL COUNTRY ROAD

Marion County, Oregon, for the past few years, has been quietly carrying carrying on a road paving program which has resulted in hard surface highways into every section of the county. In fact, all the principal county roads will be paved in the not distant future.

A practical plan has been followed. [illegible] gravel or crushed rock has been hauled on the roads and packed down until it from six inches to a foot deep. Instead of disturbing this well packed base, Marion County has had recovered with four inches of asphaltic concrete which protects it from the [illegible] and absorbs the impact of traffic. Some of this pavement is now ten years old, has requirde little or no maintenance expense and is in as good condition as when first laid.

This type of road construction gives full value for every dollar expended in hauling rock onto a road and secures a high grade type of pavement at from one-half to one-third the cost involved in road paving programs which overlook the salvage value of old highways.

ROMANISTS TRY TO BREAK UP BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

Bradford, R. I.—Pastor O. M. Brees has been conducting a series of Sunday night services at the Niantic Baptist Church at Bradford, very much to the dislike of the Roman Catholic people of the town; although Rev. Mr. O. M. Brees conducted all five Sunday night services despite all threats made by the people of R. C. faith.

The frst Sunday evening the church being small, having a seating capacity of 125 people, it was well filled having an attendance of 141. His topic that Sunday was Church Government.

The following Sunday night the little church had to house a larger number of people. There was an attendance of 184. The Casey's, to get revenge, crippled the pastor's car, so he had to get assistance to get home.

The next sermon topic was Idolatry, and the third Monasticism—attendance 210.

The little church resembled a sardine box. Attendance grew so rapidly from the neighboring towns of Westerly, Ashaway, Potter Hill, R. I. and Stonington and Mystic, Conn., that the church committee rented a hall of 275 capacity. The attendance swelled to 375.

The topic of the fourth Sunday was the Roman Inquisition. On the completion of the series his topic was Why and How to Oppose Romanism.

At services a serious disturbance was caused by some Irish Catholics, particularly one woman and two men. These insisted on calling the pastor a liar and asking questions of a heckling nature. It became necessary to call in the local marshal to remove them from the hall, which he did after considerable resistance, principally vocal on their part. It was evident that the disturbers were seeking to break up the service by riotous conduct. They were unsuccessful, however, for the large gathering maintained order, behaving themselves in a most commendable manner, in the face of insulting language from the Roman Catholic disturbers. They insisted it was a Ku Klux Klan meeting. You could hardly blame them for the 500 people that gathered at that place of worship conducted themselves like real Klansmen and women always do.

The Pastor continued his sermon and while the closing hymn, the Old Rugged Cross, was being sung and with an evangalistic appeal to which five people responded, coming into the church as candidates for baptism, and another was received at the midweek prayer meeting, and still others have resolved to make public profession of faith at the next service. The church has decided to follow the Master's Creed and to exercise all leniency compatible with prevention of future disturbances.

The Chief of Police in the presence of a Deacon authorized to act as a church representative will administer a severe reprimand to the disturbers of the service—warning them that any further misconduct on [illegible] result in immediate prosecution. Also the employers of the men authorized the Chief of Police that any future disturbance would result in the immediate dismissal from their employment. —Fellowship Forum.

INTELLIGENT PUBLIC OFFICIALS APPRECIATED

Our country is blessed with many high-minded, conscientious, energetic and well informed public officials who endeavor to fill their positions as public servants in an intelligent manner. To such a sthese the nation owes a debt of gratitude.

Judge Harry L. Conn, Superintendent of Insurance of Ohio, is apparently one of this type of officials. He feels that it is his duty not only to protect the public against improper practises on the part of insurance companies, but to protect the insurance companien from improper practises on the part of the public. As a matter of lact the insurance companies and the public are one

He shows that so far as the insurance laws of Amerisa are concerned, the great business of underwriting is compelled to adjust itself to a foolish collection of conflicting statutes born of ignorance in the past and often of malice and stupidity in the present.

As a method of stripping itself of chaotic statutory limitations which hamper its actions, he says: "Insurance must popularize itself. It can do so by merely speaking—by telling the story of what it has done, now is, and will be in the life of mankind. It is a veritable romance."

"Since a legislature cannot anticipate all the possible needs of insurance, only the things that obviously should be prohibited ought to be inhibited."

Insurance enters into the life of every individual today. Business would come to a standstill if insurance policies were not freely issued, covering various risks and obligations. Insurance must be ever ready to adjust itself to changing conditions. Laws and regulations effecting it should concern themselves principally with the financial standing of the companies, their ability to meet their obligations and fair dealing toward the insured, rather than to attempt to regulate the companies or hamper them in the conduct of their business from its more technical aspects which involve complicated questions of rate making, etc.

REASONABLE TAXATIION BASIS OF PROSPERITY

There is a point in taxation at which industry tends to break down, and prosperity gives place to hard times and panic. Nothing can prevent such an ocurrence except curtailment of taxes. That is hard to accamplish, because taxes themselves go to the upbuilding of an army of government employees who can swing elections. Federal State and local governments should be investigated and extraneous and needless activities weeded out. There is no other way to maintain prosperity on a permanent basis.

WHAT A MAN DOES WHEN HE SWEARS

A man who swears does ten things aa once:

1. He breaks the command of God.
2. He violates the law of the land
3. He transgresses the rules of good manners,
4. He outrages decency.
5. He insults dignified people.
6. He profanes sacred things.
7. He dishonors his parents.
8. He does what he is ashamed of.
9. He does what he will regret.

This car crashed through a wooden railing on the bridge and plunged into the ditch Thursday night. The lights on the auto were still burning and attracted the attention of a passing motorist, who took the bodies to Talladege.

BOILING FROM WITHIN

In outlining [illegible] ciation of General [illegible] America to counter[illegible] elination o[illegible] business," Brigadier [illegible] C. Marshall, Jr. [illegible] pointed out that [illegible] ness man in many different lines of endeavor, has come to figure out that government employees, whose wages and salaries he helps to pay as a taxpayer, are becoming more and more his competitors. He stressed the point that work generally [illegible] under government auspices is done under methods that result in from 25 to 100 per cent more cost than it would by contract.

"It is boring from within that is more insidious than any political fight ever undertaken," he said. "The extent to which the federal government is 'in business' has more than [illegible] within the last five years so that at least one person out of [illegible] en is a government [illegible]

"It is the purpose of the Associated of General Contractors of America to bring to the attention of the people of the country the great danger which is menacing the industries and then by legislation, to endeavor to curb the growing tendency of government to enter business.

"While I speak generally o fthe federal government, the same is applicable to state and municipal governments. This [illegible] has gained a foothold in the last few years that some of the states are doing all their public work by day labor."

Powerful political machines and tremendous waste inevitably creep in where public work is carried on by officials without the check of competitive bidding which acts as a brake on careless expenditure of public funds.

The government should be kept out of all business. Private individuals and the private industries which pay the taxes to maintain government, should do the work for the government and should not be subjected to government competition in the line of business in which they are engaged. General Marshall has sounded a timely note of warning.

Probably the most pathetic figure in any state is a slab-mouthed politician during an off year in politics.

The rumor that a prominent screen star is having her face rebuilt is denied by her official kalsominer.

The Valley of Voices

THE WINDIGO

You never saw a windigo; that's sure. The chances are that you never heard one. But have you ever heard a superstitious Indian or half-breed of the Canadian wilds tell of its horrors? He certainly makes a blood-curdling thing out of the windigo. Anyway, this is the story of a windigo that was real enough to leave tracks like those of a great bear and to kill a big bloodhound. It is also the story of a factor's daughter and an American naturalist. The girl is beautiful and educated and a wonderful violinist. The man is brave and strong. And when Brent Steele gets into the "Valley of Voices" and sees the charm of Denise St. Onge and realizes that the mysterious windigo is working for her destruction—why, he drops everything else and starts in to solve the malign mystery. There's a fierce rivalry between trading posts—which commiserates the situation. And Denise, to save her father, has been forced into a promise of marriage. So Brent Steele's job is a he-man's job. But he does the job—and gets his reward.

CHAPTER I

Steele stopped in his tracks. With his right hand he freed his ear from the head-piece of his lump-line and stood listening. Surely, up through those were the unmistakable notes of a violin, clear above the noise of the rapids. Curious, he continued up the steep portage now convinced that faintly through the heat of broken waters, which the trail paralleled, floated eerie music, now doubting his senses. At length his alert ears rallied to capture the strains of the magic violin and he dismissed his illusion as the vagary of nerves overtense from the toil of the trail over which he had come.

For a space he went on, engrossed in other thoughts, when through the roar of the waters a violin sobbed up to a wild crescendo . . . then ceased.

Easing the top bag to the ground, Steele swung the lower pack, with its attached tump-line, beside it, and waited. There were no fancied melodies of summer whitewaters. It was no wraith music which as-shift in the August breeze had brought him—this mad playing.

Again the notes of the violin were audible; clearer now. Some magician out there on the neighboring shore was baring his soul. It was unbelievable—here, in this lost valley of the north—pure wizardry. Enchanted, Steele listened as the violin sang of yearning and despair, unutterable, which genius has voiced to the world through the magic of its strings. And as he listened he wondered what tragedy lay behind that playing, what trick of fate had buried this master of the bow in a fur-post on the Walling river.

"What you hear, de Windigo seeng in de strong-water?"

Turning, Steele smiled at the blocky figure of the speaker standing in the trail, his head and shoulders bent under a canoe.

"No, David, but I've been listening to the violin of a shaman—a medicine man conjuring up the spirits of the mountains. Someone at this French post is a sorcerer."

"Maybe you hear Windigo all de same," dryly suggested the half-breed, easing the stern of the canoe to the trail to uncover a broad, scarr face wrinkled with amusement. "Up at Fort Hope de people scared of dis river for sure. Dey tell me de strong-water by de French post bad place for de devils an' de Windigo."

"Yes, I heard that too, the valley has a bad name on the Albany. Francois, at Martin's Falls, says it was called the Wailing river because of the moaning of the rapids here in winter. I told him it was only the wind, but he wouldn't have it—insisted that the place was 'bad country,' bewitched."

"Dey say plenty peopl' drown there, long tam ago," gravely added David.

"So old Pierre once told me, down at Henley house. He was traveling from Ogoke to the Albany one winter and struck this gorge about sunset. But the spirits scared him so with their wailing that he drove his dogs ten miles before he dared to make camp. I can't understand why the French built a place on a tabooed river. They must have known its reputation."

"Wal," replied David with a grimace, "I nevaire hear one of dese Windigo howl een de night, but eef I see him now I eat heem for sure. I call dis de Starvin' riviere."

Steele laughed loudly at the remark of his hard-headed companion, whose legacy of superstition from an Ojibway mother had been heavily diluted by the blood of a Scotch father.

"I could eat a caribou myself," he said, "but we'll have a big feed at the post tonight. You take the canoe over while I find out who's playing that violin. Who would guess that there was a man within a thousand miles of these bad-lands who could play like that?"

The half-breed started over the portage while Steele turned into the thick scrub toward the river. From the foot of the rapids the trail had swung away from the broken banks of the gorge, but shortly Steele saw patches of foam through the spruce. He stopped to listen, and again the notes of the violin shrilled above the monotone of the broken waters. Slowly he worked his way along the shoulder of the shore, then, forced back to circle a gash in the eroded cliff, stumbled upon a trail, and following it a short distance, suddenly stiffened.

The path led to a huge, flat-topped bowlder thrusting out into the stream. On the rock, her dark head nestling a violin to her cheek, stood a woman.

Surprise held the man motionless. To eyes which for months had not looked upon a comely white woman, the picture of the lithe figure of the musician, a crown of dusky hair half masking the face turned to the river, was a delight he hesitated to cut short by a betrayal of his presence.

From the passionate hopeless-ness of Massenet's "Elegie" the violin swung into a deathless lament of Grieg, grim with the eternal tragedy of his own gray north sea. As she played, the girl turned, exposing her face. On her cheeks were tears. But she did not see the listener for her eyes were closed.

She ceased playing. With a sense of awe at having heard the cry of stark despair, the trespasser, conscious of sacrilege, had turned to retreat when he was stopped by:

"Qui vient la? Who is there?"

Caught, the eavesdropper faced about, hat in hand.

"Mademoiselle," he began, reddening under the questioning gaze which swept him from moccasins to tattered shirt, then fearfully searched his eyes as if seeking a sinister meaning in his sudden appearance. "I am packing up the carey to the post. I—I heard your marvelous playing—and came. You will pardon my listening?"

The dark face of the girl in turn flushed. The guilty man humbly awaited the revelation of her just anger. That meant for the forest and waters only—the naked anguish of a soul—a stranger had heard. It was right that he should pay.

"I come here to play—monsieur—often," she replied in a tense, uneven voice. "I was startled! We see no more—but the Indians. There is nothing—to pardon."

She spoke in English, with a flavor of accent which Steele had heard before, but not in French Canada.

Relieved at his reprieve, he hastened to explain his presence on the bush-grown portage of the Walling river.

"My man David and I are bound from the Albany to Ogoke lake and the Nepigon. We've been in the bush since May," he laughed, painfully aware of a three-days' growth of beard, with a deprecatory gesture toward his frayed clothes, "and have some trading to do at the post, as you see. Is it far?"

"Only a short distance, monsieur. My father will welcome the sight of a white man; for him it is so lonely here."

"But surely," he protested, "it is more lonely for a woman." So she was the daughter of the French factor, and he wondered what force of circumstances had driven the father of this talented girl into the fur trade as an employee of the French company; this girl with the somber eyes who came to the white-waters with her violin—and her grief. Was it tragedy he had chanced upon, or mere loneliness?

"Lonely here for a woman? Surely, monsieur, you speak as a man of the world—with understanding." The sensitive mouth of the girl shaped a faint smile, but the dark eyes did not change as she continued: "Yet I have my father and my violin, while he—he has only his memories."

"I it," he gallantly protested, "your father, mademoiselle, has the companionship of a very"—he hesitated and finished weakly—"his daughter."

She laughed in his face. "Ah, monsieur, you have French blood in your veins. But the very—his daughter," she mocked, "is a dull substitute for a 'world of men,' as your Browning says. My father will be much pleased at the coming to Walling river of Monsieur—"

"Steele," he prompted, "my name is Brent Steele, I am in the field for the American Museum of Natural History."

She bowed low with mock gravity. "Monsieur Steele, my father, Col Hilaire St. Onge, will be honored in offering the poor hospitality of Walling River to a learned American scientist."

Smilingly Steele raised protesting hands at her characterization. How charmingly, he thought, this strange girl, whose violin had sung so poignantly of despair, whose face had reflected fear of the stranger, now lapsed into raillery.

"Oh, pardon, monsieur," she went on, "I forgot myself; I am Denise St Onge. Now that the conventions have been satisfied, will you follow me to our chateau—of logs?"

"Thank you!"

Her simple muslin gown and beaded moccasins seemed but to authenticate the stamp of race in the figure and carriage of the girl who led the trail back and over the river trail to the carry. At the portage she stopped.

"My packs are below here, where I left them to follow the Lorelei of the Wailing," he said smiling.

Her face swiftly sobered.

"Ah, Monsieur," she replied almost inaudibly, "do not make jest of this terrible river." Then, with a shrug, as if ridding her mind of an oppressive weight, added, "I shall not wait for you, the post is very near," and walked swiftly up the portage, followed by the quizzical eyes of the man.

He stood in the trail watching the retreating figure of the girl until a bend shut it from sight.

What eyes and hair, he mused, and what playing! It was clear she was breaking her heart over something; the look in her eyes proved that. To think of such a glorious creature buried in this country! Her father probably was a retired French officer. Heaps of them marooned between Labrador and the Peace! But why, he asked himself, didn't they mention her over at Hope—this charming daughter of the factor at Walling River?

Yes, he decided, she certainly had been frightened at his appearance—had looked him over as if he were a ghost, then had seemed superstitious; but she couldn't really believe in this tradition of the valley—this Windigo and spirit stuff. That was inconceivable. She was not afraid to come here alone and yet she called the river terrible. What had happened here anyway? Whom could she fear, and why?

Thus speculated the intrigued Steele. Then swinging his bags to his back, he started for the post known as Walling River.

As Steele left the forest to cross the clearing the dogs of the post started the usual uproar. Half way to the group of log buildings he was met by an Indian, sent by the factor, and relieved of his packs.

Evidently Walling River has a mystery and one that challenges a brave man and the girl!

Nicotine in Tobacco

Nicotine is a colorless, intensely poisonous liquid. If exposed to the air, it absorbs oxygen and becomes brown and ultimately solid. The quantity of nicotine contained in tobacco varies from two to eight per cent, the coarser kinds containing the larger quantity, while the best Havana cigars seldom contain more than two per cent, and often less. Nicotine does not appear in tobacco smoke. It is split into pyridine and collodine. Of these, the latter is said to be the less active and to precipitate in cigar smoke, while the smoke from pipes contains a larger amount of pyridine.

Marvelous Precocity

The precocious infant was being submitted to the psychological tests in order to determine the degree of his genius. He had already picked out numbers, arranged blocks and distinguished colors. Then came the supreme test, the identification of various coins. The investigator tossed a nickel on the floor. The precocious infant bent over it while the proud parents held their breath.

Then the precocious infant winked at his dad and cried exultantly, "Heads!"—Pathfinder Magazine.

PAUL BEFORE AGRIPPA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 25:13 to 26:32

GOLDEN TEXT—"I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision."—Acts 26:19.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Tells Why He Obeyed Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Tells a King About Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Obedience to the Heavenly Vision.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul's Defense of His Mission

More than two years had elapsed since Paul had been tried before Felix during which time Jewish hatred for him had not abated. As soon as Festus, the new governor, went to Jerusalem he was besieged with necessations against Paul. His accusers desired that he be brought to Jerusalem for trial, intending to lie in wait and kill him on the way. Festus refused their request, but agreed to give them an opportunity to accuse Paul if they would go down to Caesarea. They were unable to prove anything against him. Festus, willing to please the Jews, proposed to send him to Jerusalem for trial. Paul rebuked Festus for this, declaring that he knew very well that he was innocent. Seeing that it was impossible to get justice before Festus, Paul made use of his right as a Roman citizen and appealed to Caesar. This surprised Festus. His failure to release an innocent man placed him in an awkward position for he could give no explanation as to why an innocent man should go to Caesar.

I. Paul Before the King (25:13-27).

The occasion of his appearance before Agrippa was the visit of Agrippa and Bernice to Festus. Upon their arrival they expressed a desire to hear Paul, whereupon Festus told them of his perplexity. So it was arranged that Paul be brought before them for examination. The gospel should be preached to all regardless of wealth or station in life.

II. Paul's Defense Before Agrippa (26:1-27).

1. The Introduction (vv. 1-3).

He expressed his delight that he now could speak and tell his case to one who was able to follow his line of argument, for Agrippa was an expert in questions concerning the Jews; but most of all he was now happy in witnessing to him of the Savior, and perhaps leading him into the light of God.

2. His Manner of Life (vv. 4-12)

This he showed had been in strictest accord with the most rigid sect of Jews. He possessed the same hope, i. e., that of a coming Deliverer, and reminded them of the fact that formerly he was most bitterly opposed to Christ as his zeal would prove.

3. His Supernatural Conversion (vv. 13-15)

Jesus Christ appeared to him on the way to Damascus and revealed Himself to him.

4. Jesus Christ Commissioned Him for His Work (vv. 16-18).

He was sent unto the Gentiles:

(1) To open their eyes so awfully blinded.

(2) To perform the blessed work of turning them from darkness to light.

(3) To turn them from the power of satan unto God.

(4) That they might receive forgiveness of sins

(5) And that they might obtain an inheritance among the sahits

5. His Consecration (vv. 19-23).

As soon as he received his commission, he obeyed. Every man should instantly obey the call of God and devote his life to carrying forward the work entrusted to him. The virulent persecution of his work brought him into conflict with the Jews, for which they sought to kill him.

6. The Interruption by Festus (v. 24).

Seeing how thoroughly in earnest Paul was, Festus attempted to account for it by calling him a crank, attributing it to the ravings of an unbalanced mind.

7. Paul's Appeal to Agrippa (vv. 25-27).

Still maintaining his courage, he appealed to Agrippa's knowledge of the work of Jesus and of the prophets, for they have an intimate connection.

III. Agrippa Almost Persuaded (vv. 28-32).

Whether Agrippa's answer was a contemptuous sneer or not, it is quite evident that his soul was wrought upon. He saw the claim of Christ upon him but was unwilling to yield. Sad, indeed, that a man should be so near to eternal life, and yet lost! Paul took Agrippa seriously. His heart longed that Agrippa, and all concerned, might accept Christ and be saved.

For Religious Peace

It would make greatly for religious peace in this country if we all learned to rejoice when we hear of others finding God in any way, and ceased to insist that our own way is the best.—A. Herbert Gray.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square in the row, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Freak Fish Obtained by Chemical Compound

Why does a child resemble either or both of its parents? Obviously because it starts with the same kind of material as that with which its parents started, and is exposed to a similar series of influences or stimuli throughout its development. If the stimuli be varied the resulting organism will vary accordingly.

Mr. Arthur Bendy, in "The Biological Foundations of Society," retells the story of Stockard's classical experiments with the eggs of the fish Fundulus. If chloride of magnesia be added to the water in which these eggs are developing a most remarkable result follows. The young fish, or at any rate, a large proportion of them, appear with a single eye in the middle of the head instead of a pair of eyes, one on each side, while the mouth is displaced downward. I know now why I always objected to drinking magnesia as a child.—John O'London's Weekly.

More Ways Than One

Bobby was helping mother serve at her afternoon bridge club. He brought in two glasses for the lemonade that were not as clean as they might have been.

"Why, dear, those aren't the glasses mother wanted. Those aren't clean. Don't you see?"

"Mother, I should have filled them with lemonade before I brought them in, shouldn't I?" replied Bobby, in an innocent tone, and then wondered why everyone smiled.

Sweetmeats of Spain

Spain is no country for the dyspeptic traveler, especially if he have a sweet tooth. Every village seems to have its own brand of sweetmeat, one better than the last, which it makes according to a secret formula unknown elsewhere on earth. Yet these wonderful concoctions are made from the simplest ingredients. Honey and crushed almonds make the world-famous turrones of Valencia and Andalusia. The yolk of a fresh egg mixed with sugar goes to make the delicious yemas of Segovia, next to impossible to imitate. Many of the recipes are the jealously guarded secrets of wise old nuns. Oh! the little green oranges picked in a very special manner in a convent in Galicia, and the delicious butter-breads (mantecadas) of Asturias! Spaniards are noted for their good white teeth which is somewhat remarkable in a nation that loves sweets. The explanation perhaps is that they eat them as dessert, not between meals.

HERE AND THERE

Pimples

What can I do?

OH, why can't I have a skin like other girls? Why do I have to have these ugly pimples, blotches and blackheads?

If I could only find something that would clear up my skin and give me back my soft, rosy complexion, I would be the happiest girl in the world! What can I do?

Is that you talking? If it is, you don't have to worry a minute! Just build up the rich, red blood in your body. Then your skin will be as clear and soft as anybody's.

That's what S. S. S. has been doing for generations—helping Nature build rich, red blood! You can build red-blood-cells so fast that the impurities that cause breaking out on the skin hardly get into the system before the pure blood annihilates them — kills them right out—stops them from breaking out through the skin.

And then this rich, red, pure blood feeds and nourishes the tissues of the skin and keeps it looking healthy.

That's all there is to it. Healthy, vigorous, red blood such as S. S. S. helps Nature build, makes you healthy all over. It beautifies your skin — drives away pimples, blackheads, blotches, rash, boils and eczema—gives you back your appetite—builds firm, plump flesh and fills you full of new life and energy.

A Stolen Thanksgiving

By Stella C. S. Perry

NANCY ran in, her arms full of brown November leaves, the last that had clung to the little oak tree on the lawn.

"They'll look perfectly ducky with tawny artemisias and a bit of evergreen," she said. "A small yellow pumpkin and some rosy pears and apples cuddled in these branches and the Laidlaw candlesticks with two big yellow candles. It will make our Thanksgiving table shine."

Nancy went to her sister, who had not turned at her entrance, but stood looking out of the window at the fallen leaves scurrying across the lawn.

"What's the matter, Janey?"

Jane turned then briskly, her face flushed with the effort to hold back tears. "I don't see how you can fool yourself so, Nan," she exclaimed. "Thanksgiving! Oh, I guess we have things to be thankful for on the general theory that you ought to be glad to be alive. But I confess I can't see any reason for making a hurrah about it this year."

Nancy laughed. "Read your history book, Miss Schoolteacher. Thanksgiving is not proclaimed for celebrating the fortunes of the Laidlaw family, but the general welfare of the U. S. A."

Jane smiled in spite of herself. "Well," we're part of the nation, aren't we? You're a little fraud," she said tenderly as she saw signs of tears on her sister's cheek. "But I suppose you're right. We can go through the motions of having a regular home, anyway."

"This home is regular enough, whatever else it is," said Nancy with her ready laugh. "I believe Aunt Janet would get seasick if there were more chairs on one side of a room than the other."

There was, indeed, little in common between Miss Janet Laidlaw Fiske, head mistress of the Fiske Acres School for Girls, and her two nieces and assistants. Nan and Jane had been "half-educated all over the world," as their aunt said accusingly, by their artist father. When he died—"involvent, of course," Miss Fiske commented—she had felt it her duty to provide for them. Besides, their knowledge of languages and art, she thought, might be valuable to her school, even though they knew little else. The rigid, old-fashioned school for girls had dwindled so far that cheap teachers were a consideration.

Her nieces, staggered by the death of their merry, wonderful father, with debts their only inheritance and just enough knowledge of life to realize that it would be hard for two young ladies who knew everything in general and nothing in particular to find employment, had welcomed this offer—at first. They had come from their gypsying life to this grim, prim school in the hills.

"The worst of it is that Aunt Janet's as sorry as we are that she asked us. We've not been a success, Nan," Jane sighed. "Heigho! Anyway, they'll all be away over Thanksgiving, even Aunt Janet, and we'll have each other alone. You're not listening, Nan!"

Nan's eyes were shining.

"A regular home!" she was repenting. "Janey, let's have one just for a day, even if we have to steal it. Are you spunky enough?" She pointed dramatically out of the window toward a sunken road and a wee roof in the beech trees.

"The Golden Glade cottage. Why—what—?"

"Listen! Nobody's lived in that darling place in ages. There's some furniture, though, and books and pictures in an open packing case. I went in with old Mary the day she dusted it; she does once every season. And Janey dear, there are canvases in a corner and a pastel-rack and paints, just like—father's. And peasant dishes like we used to have. Janey, will you?"

"Will I what, Nan?"

"Will you send away the servants for over Thanksgiving and let us go over there and fix it all up, just like a real home? For Thanksgiving. Just us two in a studio home again, darling; for that's what it is. Belongs to an artist. I know where Mary keeps the key. Nobody passes down that glade. Jane dear! Please!"

"I'm afraid it isn't very schoolteacherly conduct, Nan. But—"

"Oh! You will!"

Nancy rushed her sister into action. The servants dismissed, the conspirators stole into the pretty cottage, nestled in the wild back road where no one passed. Soon they were busy arranging their home-for-a-day. Nancy hung the pictures on their old hooks in the wall—"pleasant, painty pictures with personality"—she said, while Jane set the companionable well-worn books on the shelves.

Next day, Thanksgiving Day, they took possession. The Laidlaw candlesticks with their yellow candles, the pumpkins, fruit and autumn decorations graced the green-stained table. Dinner was keeping warm on the little stove and the pretty peasant dishes were waiting to receive it.

"It's trespass or housebreaking or some crime," Jane laughed. "But it's what I was dying for."

"Anything's allowable for self-preservation," Nan replied. "Besides, we're going to put everything back." She sighed. "It's just the sort of thing father would have done. He always said the fairies send gifts to the darling. I feel as if he sent us this perfect day, Jane! Somebody's coming! An auto stopping! Now we're in for it!"

A sharp rap at the door.

They opened it to face an elderly man who was just saying to himself, aloud: "There is someone here."

"Are you the owner of this cottage?" Nan began immediately.

The visitor seemed amazed at the question. "No," he answered, laughing. "One would naturally suppose that you were the owners."

Confused, embarrassed, Nancy blurted out, "Oh, no! It isn't ours. We stole it—for Thanksgiving. Won't you come in?"

"You did what?"

"We—borrowed it. We don't know whose it is. Won't you come in?"

And he entered, his eyes twinkling at the adventure.

"My name is John McAndrew," he introduced himself.

After a moment's startled scrutiny, the girls threw themselves upon him, crying out together: "James McAndrew! Our Jemmy Mac! Oh, we're Nancy and Jane Laidlaw grown up! Don't you remember? In Rome when we were little."

"John Laidlaw's bairns! Do I remember!" He put his arms about them.

They drew him into the easy chair beside the old fireplace and told him their story.

"But how did you come here today?" they asked him.

"I was passing by and felt I had to turn in here to see the old place where John Laidlaw and I used to live and paint when we were lads."

"Father once lived here?"

"When we were lads," he repeated. "I felt it," Nancy whispered.

After dinner as the firelight and the yellow candles were dying, James McAndrew said: "Do you ken why we met here today? I think John Laidlaw brought us."

"He always said fairies bring gifts to the daring," said Jane.

"'Twould never do, then, to disregard the fairy gifts," he said. "So from now on, shall we not stay together, the three of us? I'm getting on and I'm alone. And Johnny Laidlaw sent me to his bairns. Sent me to them, because—bless the wild heart of him!—they're like he was and stole a Thanksgiving."

Thanksgiving of 1714 Made Matter of Record

The following account of a Thanksgiving dinner held in Danvers, Ill., in 1714 from the pen of Rev. Lawrence Conant, has been handed down to posterity:

"When ye services at ye meeting house were ended ye council and other dignitaries were entertained at ye house of Mr Epes on ye hill near by, we had a bountiful Thanksgiving dinner of bear's meate and venison, the last of which was from a fine buck shot in the woods nearby. After ye blessing was craved by Mr. Garrich word was brought that ye buck was shot on ye Lord's day by Pequot, an Indian, who came to Mr. Epes with a lye in his mouthe like Ananias of old. Ye council therefore refused to eat ye venison, but it was afterward decided that Pequot should receive 40 stripes save one for lying and profaning ye Lord's day, restore Mr. Epes ye coste of ye deer, and considering this a just and righteous sentence on ye sinful heathen and since ye blessing had been craved on ye meate, ye council all partook of it, but Mr. Shepard whose conscience was tender."

STATE WITHDRAWS NEPOTISM CHARGES

ABANDONMENT OF CLAIM ANNOUNCED IN HEARING BEFORE JUDGE PARKS

SECOND HEARING PROBABLE

Dodged State Law Forbidding County Officials to Employ Blood Relatives

Montgomery. — The prosecution Thursday withdrew from the impeachment proceedings against the board of revenue the charge that they had been guilty of wrongdoing in employing relatives in county positions.

The abandonment of this charge of nepotism came in the hearing before Judge W. L. Parks of motions seeking to quash the indictment proceedings against S. H. Benson and Lacey Edmundson, two members of the board. The hearing on these question closed and Judge Parks took the matter under advisement.

The question which brought up the hearing, that of the right of the defense to demand that the state file a bill of particulars setting forth in more detail the charges against the members of the board was not gone into in detail. If the judge rules against the defense in its motion to quash the proceedings, then another hearing must be held on the motion for a bill of particulars.

Judge Parks intimated that this second hearing, if necessary, would be held in Birmingham. The judge lives at Troy, but has been assigned to sit in this case.

The abandonment of the nepotism charges, which had been made against all members of the board, was done by the state without argument. Although no statement was made, it is believed that the action was caused in part at least by a recent ruling of the attorney general's department that the board members had violated no law in their placing relatives within the prohibited degree in county positions. While the state law forbids that any county official employ blood relatives, the board had got around this by each member not voting when his relatives were voted in, it was pointed out. The attorney general's office had handed down an opinion upholding this course as within the law.

The abandonment of this charge leaves only one charge, that of misconduct in office in connection with the "truck deal," against William J. Waldrop.

HAT-RACK'S CHRISTMAS

"You've no idea," said the hat-rack to the red bell which hung down from the light in the center of the hall, "how different people are."

"They all seem very nice to me," said the red bell.

"Of course," said the hat-rack, "you only come out at Christmas time, and you only see them at their best.

"I see them all the year around. They hang their coats and hats on me, and somehow I seem to get to know them. You know, if you hold people's hats and coats for a long time, time and time again, you have a feeling of getting to know them.

"I like it this way. I know how sometimes they get cross and they put their coats on my hooks in a hurry and with a bit of a temper.

"They almost throw their hats at me.

"Then sometimes they're in such a hurry and so excited that they throw their things at me, and the things fall down. I can't bend over and pick them up.

"If I did I'd fall over and they wouldn't like that.

"Sometimes visitors come and put their coats and hats upon me, and sometimes they're nice, friendly visitors, and they are received so cordially, and others don't seem to be liked so much.

"I hear the greetings and the farewells.

"You can tell a lot by greetings and farewells.

"If visitors are greeted in a certain way, you can tell how much they are wanted.

"And if they leave and every one seems sorry to say good-by to them and urges them to come back soon again, then I know how much they're liked.

"Now and again there are parties, and I am crowded so I can hardly stand it. But I do stand it, for I know what fun every one is having, and that they wouldn't have such fun if they had to keep their wraps on.

"So I try to enter into the hospitality, too, and receive all their coats and hats with a good spirit.

"But the best time of all the year is Christmas time," the hat-rack continued.

"I like Christmas time," said the red bell.

"Of course you do," said the hat-rack, "and it is the jolliest time of the whole year.

"First of all I hear Santa Claus come. I stay out here in the hall and keep very quiet.

"The children have already gone to bed. I hear a great noise in the chimney and then I hear such a beautiful noise in the big living room.

"I hear Santa Claus talk to himself as he sees sugar left for his reindeer, and he seems so pleased about that.

"I hear him chuckle with delight.

"Then I hear him doing a lot of different things—filling stockings and putting down presents, and then he is ready to leave.

"I catch a glimpse of him as he is leaving and he is so wonderful looking.

"I wish he could stay long enough to hang his beautiful red coat on me, but I know he can't.

"Then as soon as Christmas day comes there is one excitement after the other and then people come to visit.

"They come in and shake the snow off their overshoes and they call out 'Merry Christmas' to each other in such cheery voices, and they put their cold coats on me, but the coats are welcomed by me, for they may feel cold, but they cover people all filled with the Christmas spirit.

"They come and see the presents, and the children dash in and out of the house.

"I feel as though I were a part of it all. It makes me so happy.

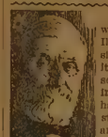
"And I love to see you hanging there, Red Ball. You're all part of the hat-rack's happy Christmas time."

"Thank you," said the Red Ball. "I love Christmas time and I never feel ill at ease. Red seems to be such a popular color and it's my favorite shade, which makes it so pleasant."

"Merry Christmas season," said the hat-rack.

"Merry Christmas," said the red ball, as it swung a little back and forth.

It's Cruel to "Physic" a Child



DR. CALDWELL AT AGE 93

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

PROGRESSIVENESS, ... KEYNOTE

That progressiveness is the keynote of our grammar school system is very quite often in a number of the talks of Mr. W. E. Martin, principal, his able faculty.

A slide has been recently been added on the school grounds for the benefit of the smaller pupils at a cost of nearly $100. Benches, equipment for basket-ball and tennis will be provided for the older pupils within the near future.

THE FIRST BIRTHDAY

Little Irving Meyer Lande is one year old. The little fellow was not given a party, but the large number of presents that were showered upon him made up for that short-coming, adding the number of presents lavished upon Irving was cash from various persons that amounted to more than one hundred dollars.

In a truly thrifty way Irving's parents will place this for thei rson in a safe investment.

Little Irving Meyer Lande has many friends who wish for him a long and happy life.

THE CHILTON COUNTY HIGH vs THE S. N. S. TROY

BETTER EDITORIAL PAGE

The Illinois State Press Association at its annual convention advocated better treatment of the editorial page. Sound editorials give the newspaper character and leadership in the community. Editorials that are on a variety of subjects and express honest opinion and thought are in great demand among the readers.

The country weekly or small daily that presents a well-made-up editorial page is quoted in other newspapers and is most talked about in the community.

MORE OFFICIALS, MORE TAXES

In speaking of dangers involved in growth of bureaucratic government, the Insurance Field says:

"It was recently discovered in France—the most hopelessly bureaucridden nation in Europe—that a soldier who had been ordered on guard at the back door of the parliament house during the revolution of 1936, for a few hours' temporary duty in emergency, had been succeeded by another and by all his interminable successors for 95 years, day and night. It was a bureau order that had never been withdrawn and three generations of taxpayers had been paying for nothing."

SPOILING CAMPAIGN THUNDER

You sometimes hear an ambitious politician refer to the "insurance trust" in the hope that the term will endear him to the people. Commissioner Dumont of Nebraska, recently speaking on the number of insurance companies in his state, showed that there were 549 companies supplying various services and protection to 1,353,000 population or one company to every 2,459 people.

It really is a shame to spoil campaign thunder by such a showing for there can hardly be an insurance trust when there could be a separate company to write business in almost every town in the state of Nebraska.

STATE COOPERATION— NOT STATE COMPETITION

Proposals for compulsory automobile insurance are simply new schemes for launching the state into business. If you compel a man to take insurance the next proposal will be to have the state to furnish it to him "at cost." This means for less than cost and, therefore, at the expense of the general taxpayer.

Instead of going into business in this manner, which is entirely outside the functions of government, the state, if it wishes to eliminate automobile accidents and protect public from injury and loss, might better cooperate with insurance companies in bringing to justice careless and criminal drivers, in tightening up on safety requirements and exacting more rigorous penalties for carelessness. Just as the state is supposed to provide punishment for burglary, assault, murder or arson, it should as rigorously protect the public from the careless or inexperienced driver.

If the state goes into automobile liability insurance, it might as well take on burglary, theft and fire insurance. But it is not necessary to go into the insurance business at all if it will properly exercise its police power, which it alone has authority to do, to protect the public and permit private industry's carrying on its business in a legitimate manner.

GO AFTER THE BUSINESS

Small towns complain that big cities draw all the business from the rural communities.

This is a mistaken idea. All oved the country there are shining examples to proive that manufacturers, publishers, whiters, motion picture producers mill operators and numerous other productive enterprises are established, thrive and distribute their products more economically from a small town than from a populous center. The small town which will analyze its possibilities and then go after the business can build itself up along sound industrial and commercial lines.

The Central Illinois Public Service Company of Springfield, Ill. has issued a folder entitled "Fertile Fields for Factories." It has not waited for rural towns in Illinois to set forth their advantages, but is going ahead and showing how low production costs are possible in the communities in which it operates.

It shows the raw material, transportation and manufacturing resources in ints territory and gives statements of executives from some of the country's largest manufacturing plants as to why they, as manufacturers, prefer a smaller city as a factory location. In every instance one of main reasons cited is that living conditions in the small places average better than in a big city; there's a stronger community interest in the success of the industry; employes are of a more permanent nature and own their own homes, thus eliminating a large part of the costly labor turnover.

The Central Illinois Company is doing construtive work and setting an example which can be adopted with profit by wide-awake communities all over the country.

A CASE OF PUBLIC [illegible]

There has been a long and bitter controversy in New England over permitting rate increases to the New England Telephone Company, necessitated by advance costs for material and wages.

After an exhaustive hearing, the Department of Public Utilities of Massachusetts recently granted certain increases to the telephone company, whic hit felt were just. Now the city of Boston asks Interstate Commerce Commission to review the case, charging New England Telephone and Telegraph Company and American Telephone and Telegraph Company with conspiracy to violate Clayton anti-trust trust law, that New England corporation is compelled to rent instruments and switchboards from the American Company, buy its supplies and equipment from the Western Electric Company, a subsidiary of the American Company; that financing is done through the American Company and that unfair fees are allowed bankers in selling telephone stock.

Similar allegations have all been threshed out on many previous occasions. A telephone company, to give satisfactory nation-wide service, must of necessity be a monopoly. But with its rates subject to regulation by 48 state commissions and the Interstate Commerce Commission, it cannot be a wust.

In an address before the Vermont Historical Society last June, H. B. Thayer, Chairman of the Board of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, reviewed the significant steps in the development of a national telephone service. He outlined the growth of the Bell system in competition with other companies. Such competition merely emphasized the fact that satisfactory telephone service could never be given the public except by unified control of the telephone service could never be given two agencies rendering telephone service in the same community.

Local companies in different sections of the country could not function satisfactorily if each purchased a different type of equipment. Local companies could not afford to maintain the necessary experimental and laboratory facilities to test out latest inventions and improvements of advantage to the telephone industry. Neither could they finance themselves to secure the large amounts of capital required to meet growing demand for telephone service.

As a result, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company was organized in 1880 by a special act of the Massachusetts legislature, with power to hold stock in other companies. 45 year ago the founders of the American telephone system saw the necessity of affiliated companies if a nation-wide service was to be rendered. They recognized the importance of a uniform standard of excellence in the apparatus to be used in transmitting the voice.

To build up such a service it was necessary to have a parent company as a general headquarters, sectional operating companies, a manufacturing organization and an organization to furnish service connecting telephone users in different operating districts. The American telephone system has been built up on this basis and today with approximately 114,000,000 population, the United States has 63 per cent of thhe world's telephones. We have 13 telephones for every 100 of our population as against 1.3 phones for every 100 of population of Europe.

The evidence which will undoubtedly be placed before the Interstate Commerce Commission will simply strengthen the position of the telephone company and will show the advantage of consolidations and unified control, from the standpoint of rendering cheaper and more uniform service of a national character. The government is advocating consolidation of railroads to strengthen the national transportation system. Electric light and power companies, in order to give a more efficient and cheaper service are grouping and consolidating small companies into large operating units which can transmit power for thousands of miles, thus guaranteeing a continuous and regular service and eliminating the danger and inconvenience of breakdowns in local plants. Necessity simply forced the telephone company to anticipate these conditions and develop a "super" telephone service some years in advance of a general public understanding of the necessity for such a procedure.

Boston and New England would be in a sad plight if they could bring about competitive telephone service in their territory. They would step back 40 years in telephone progress and place themselves on a par so far as telephone service is concerned, with the back-number European countries.

The telephone was born and developed in New England but its ultimate growth and expansion was made possible by the whole United States. It is a sorry spectacle to see the old home territory of the greatest telephone organization in the world attempting to disrupt the system, after 65 years of unparalelled success in public service.

GREATER SHEESLEY SHOWS ATTRACTION AT ALA. STATE FAIR

"Lane of Laughter" To Be Big Attraction and Place of Mirth.

The Greater Sheesley Shows, the largest and said to be the cleanest of the outdoor amusement organizations of the collective type, will present the attractions on the "Lane of Laughter" at the Alabama State Fair at Birmingham. The big carnival company is under personal direction of Capt. John M. Sheesley, one of America's leading outdoor show men, who travels with the 40-car circus train in his private car, "Alabama."

Captain Sheesley is one of the organizers of the Showmen's Legislative Committee, which has as its counsel and commissioner Thomas J. Johnson, noted Chicago lawyer, whose word is law in the "big tops" and sawdust rings, and who has succeeded in purging the tented midways of many undesirable features and followers of past seasons. The big membership sign of the committee is always displayed on the imposing electric arch marking entrance to the Sheesley showgrounds.

Featured among the exposition of a dozen modern riding devices carried are the Hyla F. Maynes novelty ride—the Scenic Railway, Super-Caterpillar, Dragon's Fun and Over-the-Jumps. They are the latest creations of the ride wizard of North Tonawanda, N. Y., noted inventor of many Coney Island thrillers and have been taken on the road for the first time this season. They represent the last word in portability, as the massive structures of iron, steel and canvas are moved every week, it requiring seven 75 foot flatcars of the show train. Ten 18-foot circus wagons and a 10-ton caterpillar tractor to transport them. The Scenic Railway and Dragon's Fun each has a frontage of more than 100 feet and the Super-Caterpillar and Over-the-Jumps are 160 feet in diameter. Then there are the Flyer, Butterfly, big Eli Ferris wheel, Whip and Giant Carousel, said to be the most beautiful on the road and a veritable ball of fire by night.

Among the score of tented attractions are the Shirley Frances Style Revue and Water Circus, featuring Anna Winters, Belle Santoy, Louise Bonita and other champion diving beauties and "Up-High" Napoleon, celebrated water clown and high diver; thrilling autodrome, where daredevils race, ride and drive on a perpendicular "wall of death," with Zella Borts, the "Mile-A-Minute Girl;" Famous Dixieland Minstrels and their jazzy band and orchestra and dynamic trap drummer; Flaming Beauty tented vaudeville and plastic posers Chesworth's performing midgets, with George and Ida Chesworth, Duke Ross and other tiny folks; Monkey Speedway, with little Simian race drivers; Rocky Road to Dublin and its jaunting cars and sleepy-eyed burros; fifty varities of freak animals born when Dame Nature was in prankish mood; Law and Outlaw, thirty lifelike characterizations of famous and notorious personages; Crystal Maze; big circus sideshows; Happy Family; Thru-the-Rapids, the great laughing ride; Tiny Mite, midget horse, and Rex, his pal, a giant Dane that won one first and three second awards at the April Washington, D. C., kennel show, and others.

Ten acres of ground are required to properly lay out the mammoth joy place, and more than 600 showfolks and animals are in the Sheesley Shows' family. Free acts and concerts are presented nightly and there will be daily street concerts by the Dixieland Minstrels and a big circus calliope, known to youngsters from coast to coast who have followed in its wake.

Statistics are said to show that young women are dying faster than they formerly did. No comment can be made until we find out just how fast a young woman formerly died.

"Why, Uncle Jim! You look ten years younger!"

"When I saw you a couple of months ago, I made up my mind you were getting old. At least you looked it."

"Yes, Billie, and I felt old. No appetite, couldn't sleep nights—one day just like another, and none of them any good. I knew constipation was at the bottom of it, but it seemed the more laxatives I took the worse I got. Then one day I saw Nell giving Nujol to my baby grandson. The doctor had prescribed it for the baby, but I found out it's just the thing for old fellows like me, too.

"I tell you, Billie, it keeps me feeling fine all the time. My appetite's back and I sleep like a child.

If I look any younger, Nujol gets the credit."

Nujol helps Nature in Nature's own way

Middle age brings on a decrease in the natural lubricating secretions in the intestine. Then you need Nujol. It supplies the deficiency of the natural lubricant. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is gentle, safe and natural in its action.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. Nujol simply softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles. It is not a medicine.

You can take Nujol for any length of time without ill effects. It should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

FARM POULTRY

LAYING HENS NEED PROTEIN IN RATION

Many farm flocks get little or no protein in the winter and as a result are overfat and make a poor production. Few hens are often given a whole [illegible] to feed on one month and no meat the next. As a result they are [illegible] of condition and often are [illegible] spoiled meat. There are [illegible] which animal protein [illegible] be tried. A steady supply is [illegible] essential. Offals or dead farm animals, when available, can be cooked [illegible] ground chopped up, dried and put in a box [illegible] hens can eat when they want. [illegible] milk or buttermilk [illegible] more profitable use of the farm than in producing winter eggs. Where a box of meat or a supply of milk are available all of the time, it may not be necessary to put meat scraps in the mush, but if there is a shortage of these it will pay to buy meat scraps.

Table scraps should be fed as a supplement to the ration at noon. Feed grain morning and night in the litter. In very cold weather the scraps may be fed warm in the morning and grain at ten o'clock.

It is advisable to use home-grown grains as much as possible. On the dry lands where the fibrous grains are largely grown, such as oats, barley, cane and millet, it is advisable to buy either wheat or corn. If corn, use it whole instead of cracked. The small grains should be fed in the morning and the corn at night.

Where there are quantities of grain strewn about the farm yard it is good practice to feed a few table scraps in the morning, keep the hens shut up with the dry mash until noon, and let them run to the grain in the afternoon. Make sure there is fresh water to the henhouse in the morning.—O. C. Krum, Extension Service—Colorado Agricultural College.

Electric Lights Useful in Production of Eggs

Electric lights have been successfully used for years in hen houses to prolong the hen's working day and to increase the egg yield. A further application of electricity to the egg industry has recently been developed with extraordinary results, according to reports of the British Illuminating Engineering society.

Two groups of 12 pullets each, of the same age and breeding, were segregated for 16 weeks. During this time they were all fed on identical rations. The first flock was kept under ordinary conditions and produced 124 eggs during the test period. The second flock was treated for 10 minutes daily with ultra-violet rays and produced 407 eggs.

At the end of the 16 weeks conditions were reversed, whereupon the output of the first group, which began to receive the violet-ray treatment, increased rapidly, and that of the second flock, no longer receiving it, decreased. At the end of the second 16-week period the egg production of the two groups had been approximately reversed. The same results were observed in similar tests at the Wisconsin experiment station.

Experiments in Wisconsin also indicate that the ultra-violet rays may have a profound effect in stimulating the growth of young chicks.

When Pullet Is Laying

Whether a pullet has started laying or not is easily learned by merely examining the distance between the lay bones. If these are spread so that three fingers may be placed between them, it may safely be assumed that she has commenced laying. Early layers produce the most eggs while the tardiest ones are the slackers even after commencing. By going through the flock of pullets after most of them have begun laying, the few that show no signs of productivity may be marketed.

Poultry Hints

Sunlight is the cheapest disfinfectant that you can find. Have plenty of it in the poultry house.

* * *

Select your best, healthiest cocks and mate them with equally good early hatched pullets and one-year-old hens.

The importance of vigor in the poultry flock cannot be overstressed. This problem of obtaining and maintaining vigor is one of paramount importance, because we are expecting more of the hen than of any other fowl or animal on the farm.

* * *

Thin, scrawny turkeys are a poor advertisement, and bring little profit. Of course the turkeys will have grit and charcoal as usual.

* * *

Hens with baggy abdomens may continue to lay heavily for a time, but they cannot hope to continue for any great length of time.

* * *

Wedge-shaped hens with the heavy end of the wedge at the front end lack room to digest much food and therefore will not be profitable layers.

A Personal Matter

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright.)

AFTER she had mailed the letter Louisa was alarmed over what she had done. Never before in her whole placid and guarded life, had she so broken over the bounds of the conventionalities. But the little town in which she lived was prosaic.

So when one day she saw in the "personal column" of a New York paper which had strayed her way an advertisement stating that a "Respectable young man," who was lonely in the great city, would like to correspond with a young lady who was lonely in the country with the idea of a mutual cheering up, she answered it. It seemed to fit her case. She did not sign her real name, of course. She thought Eleanor Fitzallen sounded more romantic. She told them at the post office—Louisa always went for the family mail—to put any letters for "Miss Fitzallen" in her box. She was a cousin of hers whom she was expecting on a visit.

The family consisted of Louisa, her mother and a small brother—who was on no account allowed to get the mail, for he was apt to lose the letters. And her mother never took the trouble to stop for the mail. The lonely young man in the city gave his name in the "personal" as George Binkesley and his address as "general delivery." So there was not much clew to him. Louisa's letter to George was very proper and impersonal. Really, she had written it largely out of curiosity as to just what sort of a reply she would get.

To her great surprise the unknown George wrote back a missive as proper as her own, couched in rather stilted language and containing evidences of bashfulness. This from a young man who had advertised for a young lady to correspond with! "Well," thought Louisa, "for once in my life the unexpected has happened." And after a proper interval she wrote the young man again. And thus there grew up a very proper and exceedingly friendly correspondence. Finally George, the unknown, asked Louisa for her photograph. The wicked girl sent him the picture of a third cousin of hers which she happened to have by her.

Then she became alarmed and resolved to drop the whole business. She realized that she was getting rather fond of George—and she did not know who George was or anything about him. And she never could know—never wanted to know; for if he was the sort of young man he appeared to be from his letters she would be consumed with shame to meet him, or have him know that she, Louisa Trafford, had answered a "personal" in the paper and carried on a correspondence with a man to whom she had never been introduced. George wrote twice beseeching a continuance of the interchange of letters but received no reply.

But how Louisa did miss that correspondence! She blushed as she acknowledged to herself that she had never enjoyed anything so much in her life. She grew moody and restless and told her mother that she really must have a change. So she went to visit her Uncle Roger in Newark. He had several daughters who had lots of company—many young men among them—and, sad to say, in this new and more lively environment Louisa almost forgot about the lonely George. Still his letters remained to her a part of some pleasant dream she had once had. Uncle Roger's wife was a great matchmaker and set about picking out a suitable husband for Louisa immediately.

Mrs. Roger pitched upon Claude Lambton as the one to marry her niece. He was a lively young man, fond of yachting and golfing, and his father was said to be immensely wealthy. Louisa did not dislike him—but how different he was from the George of her late dream. She could never think of him as a husband. However, they became quite friendly.

One night as Claude and Louisa were sitting out a dance at Mrs. Somebody's, Louisa began to rally him on his lack of seriousness.

"But I have a very serious nature," he replied. "It is only of late that I have been as you see me. I—I—in fact—am trying to forget."

"That sounds melodramatic," said Louisa. "A love affair, I suppose—one of the hopeless sort?"

"Yes," said he gravely. "Hopeless and strange. All that is left to me now of that blighted romance—forgive me if I seem sentimental—is this picture." And he drew a velvet case from his pocket and handed it to his companion. "I always carry it with me," he said.

Louisa opened it and saw the photograph of her third cousin which she had sent to the lonely New Yorker.

"Oh, you are George!" she cried.

"George?" gasped Claude.

"Yes," said Louisa, crying softly into her handkerchief. "I'm Eleanor—that's the picture of my third cousin. I sent it to you."

After they had both quieted down a bit there were explanations. He had put the "personal" in the paper on a bet of his companions that he did not dare to do so. After he received Louisa's first letter he sent regularly to the New York post office to get the others, with the result already told. Taking everything into consideration it really did seem as if fate had determined them for one another—and they submitted to fate.

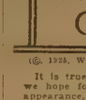
It is true that often the things we hope for fail to put in their appearance, but think of the wonderful compensation we get in the good things that appear so unexpectedly.—Lloyd.

FROM LEFTOVERS

When one has a cupful or two of cooked chicken, several things may be done with it, and a dozen more will suggest themselves as we think about it. If a little fried chicken is left, remove the meat in neat, even-sized pieces, crack the bones and cover them with cold water and put to simmer on the back part of the stove. Now we are ready to prepare:



Chicken Chop Suey.—Take one cupful of celery (or more if the dish needs to be stretched) to two cupfuls of minced chicken, a good sized onion minced, and one green pepper also minced. If one has a few cooked string beans with their liquor add them and the broth from the chicken bones and a cupful or less of good chicken gravy. Simmer for an hour on the back of the stove, add seasoning of salt and pepper and serve in the center of a hot platter with seasoned cooked hot rice as a border. If any chicken fat has been saved, pour it over the rice and add two teaspoonfuls of Chinese sauce to the meat just as it is ready to serve.

Curried Chicken.—Season a cupful or two of boiled rice with melted butter or chicken fat and a teaspoonful of curry powder. Arrange a baking dish with alternate layers of minced chicken and the rice with any chicken gravy. Have the rice at the bottom and on the top with the chicken between. Dot with bits of butter and put into a moderate oven to become thoroughly hot. Serve at once.

Save a cupful of coffee from breakfast and use in the following:

Ginger Bread.—To one well-beaten egg, add one cupful of sugar, half a cupful of melted lard, one cupful of molasses, a tablespoonful of ginger, a teaspoonful of salt and three cupfuls of flour—sifted before measuring. Mix well and add one teaspoonful of soda to a measuring cup, and fill with boiling hot coffee. Pour over the mixture and stir until evenly mixed. Bake in a deep dripping pan forty minutes. The coffee gives a different flavor which makes the cake out of the ordinary.

Sweets and Cakes.

This is the season of the year when we all begin to think of homemade candies and cookies.

Cherry and Marshmallow Fudge.—Put into a saucepan one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of cream, stir until well melted. Boil the mixture until it makes a soft ball in cold water, add one tablespoonful of butter and remove from the fire. Beat for fifteen minutes; pour into a buttered tin in which are one-fourth pound of marshmallows cut into dice and one-fourth pound of minced preserved cherries. Cut into squares when cool.

Velvet Molasses Candy.—Put one cupful of molasses, three cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of boiling water and three tablespoonfuls of vinegar into a saucepan over the heat; as soon as the boiling point is reached add one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Boil until when tried in cold water the mixture becomes brittle. Stir constantly during the last part of the cooking. When nearly done, add one-half cupful of butter and one-fourth teaspoonful of soda. Pour into a buttered pan and pull when cold enough to handle. Flavor while pulling, with peppermint, lemon, vanilla or wintergreen.

Molasses Taffy.—Boil together one quart of New Orleans molasses and two tablespoonfuls of sugar five minutes, add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, and a tablespoonful of butter. Boil until it cracks when dropped into cold water. Take from the fire, add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of soda and pour out to cool. When cool enough to pull, flavor and pull, greasing the hands lightly with butter. When light and creamy cut with the shears into small pieces.

Butterscotch.—Take one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of molasses, one tablespoonful of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of boiling water and one-half cupful of butter. Cook until brittle when tried in cold water, flavor with vanilla, turn into well-buttered pan; when cool mark off into squares.

Bread Crumb Griddle Cakes.—Take two cupfuls of bread crumbs and cover with sour milk, let stand over night, in the morning add an egg, salt and a teaspoonful of soda. Beat well adding flour enough to make a griddle cake batter. Bake on a hot griddle and serve with fried sausage.

Butter-Scotch.—Take two cupfuls of granulated sugar, two tablespoonfuls of water, a tablespoonful of butter, boil without stirring until it hardens on the spoon. Pour on flat, buttered plates and when cool mark off in squares.

One thousand clay tablets, including many letters written upon unbaked clay some 3,400 years ago and neatly addressed to various individuals who inhabited the vicinity of Kirkuk, Iraq, at that time, have been delivered to the University of Pennsylvania by Dr. Edward Chiera, assistant professor of Assyriology. The clay tablets will reveal, it is believed, the complete life history of an ancient people of whom historians know virtually nothing. The illustration shows one of the excavations at Kirkuk, a specimen of the tablets and a portrait of Doctor Chiera.

NEGLIGEES SHOW NOVELTIES; FRENCH GENIUS IS SUPREME

JUST when other garments are taking up with elaboration and intricacies of line, negligees appear to be traveling in the direction of simplicity and concerning themselves with the business of being practical as well as pretty. Of course, for the encouragement of dalliance, and as contribution to trousseau, there are dry affairs with lace, like the negligee pictured, but even these, in the new displays, are much more simply designed than usual. Along with them

The genius of the French for beauty reaches its climax in romantic colorings for evening wear; they supersede to make them gorgeous or only gay and dainty. When the matter under consideration is evening dress the lines of the French designer spread as its butterfly wings and flies wherever it will in life wide, wide world of beautiful things, gathering ideas to bring them back to Paris workrooms. In the salons flowerlike frocks, "robes de style" or "picture certain old (and artistic) favorites hold their own, the humble corduroy and the gorgeous mandarin coat among them.

Interest centers in beautiful, but inexpensive, fabrics and novel garnitures, in the new negligees for winter. Manufacturers of cotton fabrics have made such progress in the use of rayon mixtures and mercerizing that they are turning out brocades and stripes and other patterns with the sheen and suppleness of silk velvet, and these are supplemented by the heavier goods in many patterns, like those "turkish towel" weaves that have long been favored for lounging and bathrobes. But the new patterns, in bold modernist figures and vigorous colors, or in softer shades and floral patterns, have inspired designers of negligees to new efforts. Borders and collars like the wool fur used on sweaters and coats add to the coziness of negligees that are as useful as the popular corduroy. In practical garments, silky cottons that look like very fine corduroy are made up with linings of sheerest Jap silk and brocaded patterns are used in the same way. Chiffon, by way of adornment, is used with these in two shades of the color chosen for the negligee and appears in jabots, revers, borders and hand-made flowers. In effect these garments are as rich as silk velvet, but they are considerably less expensive.

FILMY EVENING GOWNS

dresses," and regal evening wraps come into bloom for the allurement of a waiting feminine world.

In the two evening dresses from Paris, shown in the sketch, the outstanding style points of the season are most successfully embodied. Uneven hemlines, flaring skirts, long molded bodies, "V" shaped neck openings and metallic embroideries are all among the important means for developing the season's graceful evening modes.

The dress at the left is very simple by comparison with more gorgeous affairs, but just as effective as any of them. It consists of a straightline underdress of rose satin partly covered with tracery in gold and black thread. A border design is worked on on the scalloped hemline and at the neck and armholes. The vestee is plain. A mere hint of a black chiffon overdress is posed over the rose satin slip, but it serves to provide the flare in the skirt, and ends in points at the front.

Pearl-white satin and white georgette give a good account of themselves in the clever dress at the right. The straight underdress is of satin embroidered in pale gold and the overdress is plain except for a little tracery about the hemline, also in gold. A long scarf of the georgette, with gold embroidery at the end, is attached to the right shoulder.

CLANTON'S PUBLIC ENTERTAINMENTS

Clanton people like to be entertained and it seems that professional entertainers have found this out. During last week we had the Kelly-Grady Carnival Co., who spread themselves out in the street fair array on the high way in the northern part of the city.

The Barnes and Edwins theatrical troup presented their dramas and vaudeville in the Wadesonian.

After the week had been spent the carnival people folded their tents and went to Birmingham. The Barnes-Edwins left on Sunday morning for Fort Deposit and will continue their trip to Florida.

MRS. ALRED HOSTESS TO CARD CLUB

Mrs. J. H. Alred was hostess to the Clanton card club.

The hostess served her guests a tempting salad plate with hot coffee.

DR. COLLY OF TROY IN CLANTON

Dr. Colly of the Baptist Orphanage, Troy, occupied the pulpit of the Clanton Baptist Church on Sunday morning and evening.

Dr. Colly and Dr. Ezell exchanged pulpits on Suday.

Dr. Colly had an appreciative audiance: its interest was aroused in the work that is being accomplished in the Orphanage.

REGULAR MEETING OF SCOUTS

The Julia Tutwiler troupe 1 girl Scouts held their regular meeting in the home of their captain, Mrs. N. S Johnson, on Friday evening.

PLACE RAIDED

Among the mountains of New Jersey, a resort was raided which is believed to be the prison of a number of kidnapped girls, was found early today, when police raided a bungalow five miles rom here.

Two girls, who said they were victims of the dive keepers, led the raiding party. In the house was an attractive girl, about 25 years old, unconscious from the use of drugs. With her was another girl, said to have been kidnappeed in Philadelphia, but whose identity officers concealed.

Three men were arrested and 12 complete "dope" outfits, seven revolvers and a large supply of ammunition seized.

"What" asked the skeptical husband, "is the big idea of building a house with 19 closets? Has your family that many skeletons?"

It has been confirmed that the Chicago proposal requiring the placing of tail-lights on draft animals was not introduced by a mule-teamster.

Has it come to the point when the farmer is more concerned over the prices of tires and gasoline than about what wheat and oats are bringing?

"But constipation is serious, Grace"

"Not so long ago I was like you—headaches a good deal of the time, sleeping badly, and the least bit of housework tired me out. My complexion too, was bad.

"Finally, I went to see Dr Farman. He showed me that it was constipation that was back of my troubles. He said that it was a very serious thing because poisons from clogged waste matter were picked up by the blood and carried to every body organ. And if I didn't correct it in time I might become a victim of one of those terrible organic diseases.

"He made me drop laxatives altogether, changed my diet, and put me on Nujol. I don't think I've ever felt better. I sleep well, my headaches have disappeared, and you can see for yourself what an improvement there is in my skin. Nujol has done wonders for me."

Nujol Works Like Nature

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It is neither a food nor a medicine. It does not gripe. It is gentle and natural in its action and is prescribed by leading medical authorities.

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly, in accordance with the directions on each bottle. As Nujol is not a laxative, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin the perfect health that is possible only when intestinal elimination is normal and regular.

THE CRYING DOLL

It came at last. Christmas morning. And little Margaret was beside herself with joy.

In Her Stocking.

There were her different presents, a stocking filled so interestingly, and presents on the tree.

In her stocking there was a little bird cage with an imitation bird dying in the cage. Then there was a game, a little wee game, and some candy bulbs which were perfectly delicious, and one hundred new pennies done up so very nicely in a cunning little bag.

On the tree were all sorts of pretty things and lovely little toy gifts.

But her biggest and best and most beautiful present of all was a crying doll.

Oh, how Margaret had wanted a crying doll. She had wanted it more than anything else.

She didn't want a doll to say "Mama" and "Papa," but she wanted a really real baby doll.

She didn't believe anyone had ever been happier than she was when she took the baby doll out of the box and held it in her arms.

There it was with a big, round, chubby baby face which looked just like a baby's face, and it wore long clothes and a cap with streamers and it could cry when you held it in a certain position.

"Oh, you darling baby, how I love you," Margaret cried and everyone had to kiss the baby right away on her dear little round cheek to show her how welcome she was.

Then Margaret held her so that she cried. Quite a little while she held her so that she cried.

"There, there, little baby, don't cry. There, there. Muvver will look after you.

"There, there, my little darling, don't cry. Dry your pretty eyes and whisper to muvver all about it.

"Croon to muvver, my dear little baby."

Then Margaret held the baby doll up again and her crying stopped and a little handkerchief was brought out of her pocket and her mother dried her tears.

All day long the baby was with Margaret. Even at dinner she sat in the big chair—just a little way from Margaret's place—in which Margaret had sat for so many years.

In front of her place was a tiny baby's bottle with make-believe milk inside it. And now and again Margaret gave some to her baby.

All through the day, right up to night-time, Margaret looked after her baby.

"You will always be well cared for by me, my darling," Margaret said.

The baby seemed to understand that this was so.

"You'll always have a lovely home and you'll be my darling, always. You precious dolly.

"How lovely to think you came right from Santa's workshop."

You could just tell by the way the doll looked that she was quite contented and that she knew that she would have a lovely home.

She had that look on her face that all happy babies have (even if they do cry, quite naturally at times) who know when they're in the very best and happiest of homes.

It was so nice, too, to have your tears dried and to be comforted when you cried. The baby thought it fine to be treated so patiently when she cried.

It was lovely to be soothed and loved.

But Margaret was happier than she had ever been.

To have a baby doll, her very own, straight from Santa, and to have her a baby that cried just as any baby did.

Not that she wanted her baby to cry much. She could say, after the one day, that she was a good baby and only cried a very little.

But one thing was lovely, when her baby cried, and that was she could pet her more than ever.

Oh, it was a beautiful present for Santa to have brought and only some one like Santa would have done such a lovely thing.

He Was One of Them

A little fellow arrived home from school while the family were at lunch. With a disgusted look on his face, he said:

"Mother, some of the boys in my class don't know how to spell 'sarcastic'."

"Well, dear," replied his mother 'how do you spell it?'

"Me?" he asked. "Oh, I was one of those that didn't know."

BAKED HAM IS FINE FOR HOLIDAY DINNER

Properly Cooked Ham Is Easy to Slice.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Well-baked ham is one of the most attractive meats that can be served on the family table. It is appropriate for any of the holiday occasions when an especially good dinner is in order, for it not only looks delicious, but has an appetizing fragrance developed from the brown sugar and whole cloves used on its surface during baking, and an incomparable flavor due to this seasoning and the method of cooking. At old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinners it was not unusual to see a baked ham at one end of the table and a roast turkey at the other; the flavor of the two meats seem to blend well.

Ham is generally baked after a preliminary boiling to make it tender and shorten the length of time it remains in the oven, but with care a moist tender ham may be baked from the start. In most cases, however, a combination of boiling and baking is preferred. If the ham is at all dry or very salty it should be soaked in cold water for several hours before being put on to cook.

For ordinary family use, even with several guests, a ten-pound ham will be found convenient. The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for cooking a ham of this size:

Wash the ham thoroughly and trim off any mold or loose pieces. Soak over night if the ham is unusually dry or salty. Otherwise, put directly into cold water with a teaspoon and a half of pickling spice, three slices each of carrot and onion, a stalk of celery, half a teaspoonful of celery salt, a sprig of parsley, and a quarter of a cupful of strong vinegar. Bring to a boil and cook just below the boiling point four hours or until it is tender when pierced with a long-tined fork. The meat should be somewhat shrunk from the bone, but the ham should not be overcooked or it will be difficult to carve. The time of cooking varies greatly with the shape of the ham, its fat and the kind of cure.

To bake a ham that has been boiled first remove the skin and cover it with the following paste: One cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of fine, soft bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of mustard, and enough vinegar or cider to hold the paste together. Stick the ham with whole cloves and bake for 30 to 60 minutes, basting with one cupful of water mixed with one-fourth cupful of vinegar or cider and two tablespoonfuls of brown sugar.

Good results may also be obtained by cooking the ham in a fireless cooker until tender, and then preparing it for serving in the same way as ham cooked directly on the stove.

After the first festive serving of the ham, it may appear in many forms on the table, and if alternated with other meats it need not become monotonous. Pieces that cannot be sliced may be put through the food chopper and used for sandwiches, hashes, creamed dishes, omelets, and in other ways. The round ham, if covered with a layer of rendered ham fat, will keep in the refrigerator for several weeks.

Even when there is no special occasion for serving a whole ham, the ten pound size will be found economical. The amount of meat in proportion to bone and fat is satisfactory, almost all the meat will cut into attractive slices, and if properly stored the cooked meat will keep well. The entire ham may be cooked at one time or it may be cut in half, and each half be cooked separately. The uncooked piece should be carefully wrapped in waxed paper and stored in a cool but not too cold place, preferably hanging where air circulates around it. Sometimes a butcher is willing to cut a ham and sell one-half at a time. Smaller hams may be found on the market, but the texture of the meat is not so good nor the cuts so satisfactory as in the medium-sized hams.

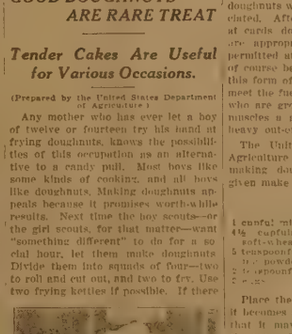
GOOD DOUGHNUTS ARE RARE TREAT

Tender Cakes Are Useful for Various Occasions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Any mother who has ever let a boy of twelve or fourteen try his hand at frying doughnuts, knows the possibilities of this occupation as an alternative to a candy pull. Most boys like some kinds of cooking, and all boys like doughnuts. Making doughnuts appeals because it promises worth-while results. Next time the boy scouts—or the girl scouts, for that matter—want "something different" to do for a social hour, let them make doughnuts. Divide them into squads of four—two to roll and cut out, and two to fry. Use two frying kettles if possible. If there are more young people in the group, let them play games and take their turns later. Four is about all the average kitchen will accommodate comfortably at one time. Of course part of the fun comes afterward when the doughnuts are passed, with cider or hot cocoa, and the surplus is divided to be taken home. The dough that was cut from the centers may be cooked with the doughnuts to satisfy the natural desire for "just a little taste" as the frying goes on.

"How I Love You," Margaret Cried.



Let the Young People Make Doughnuts.

Good tender doughnuts, freshly made, are useful for innumerable occasions where simple refreshments are called for. At church socialables and other community gatherings something inexpensive but popular is usually served, and doughnuts, with a beverage of some sort, answer this need admirably. When a chance caller comes during the late afternoon, doughnuts with coffee are much appreciated. After the evening "foursome" at cards doughnuts and a fruit drink are appropriate. All the doughnuts permitted at lunch or suppertime will of course be eaten by the family, and this form of sweet seems especially to meet the fuel needs of big hungry boys who are growing fast and using their muscles a great deal for athletics or heavy out-of-doors work.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives the recipe below for making doughnuts. The ingredients given make about forty.

Doughnuts.

1 cupful milk	1 cupful sugar
4½ cupfuls sifted soft-wheat flour	2 teaspoonfuls salt
5 teaspoonfuls baking powder	¼ teaspoonful cinnamon
2 tablespoonfuls fat	¼ teaspoonful nutmeg
2 eggs

Place the fat in a warm place until it becomes soft though not melted, so that it may be combined easily with the sugar. Stir in the beaten egg yolk and add alternately the dry ingredients, which have been mixed and sifted together, and the milk. Add only a small quantity of liquid at the start. Add the flavoring and fold in the well beaten egg whites last. Roll out the dough about one-third inch thick with as little handling as may be necessary. Cut out the doughnuts and fry in deep fat, hot enough (375 degrees Fahrenheit) to make a piece of bread rise to the surface quickly and to brown each side in about one minute. Drain on brown paper. When dry they may be rolled in pulverized sugar.

One of the secrets of success in making doughnuts is the use of a plain mixture such as the above. A rich dough tends to absorb too much fat in frying. The dough should be rolled smooth and not too thick, for a rough surface absorbs more fat, and a thick doughnut does not cook entirely through in the short frying period. If the fat is not hot enough the doughnuts will be greasy. Doughnuts can be forced under the fat to make them brown evenly and quickly by pushing a wire frying basket down on them.

Scalloped Cabbage and Cheese

Wash a medium-sized cabbage thoroughly, put it into boiling salted water and cook for 20 or 30 minutes. Drain it. Make a cup of white sauce, season with salt and pepper, and stir into it three-quarters of a cupful of grated cheese. In a greased baking dish place alternate layers of the cabbage and sauce, cover the top with bread crumbs that have been combined with a little melted butter or other fat, and bake until the crumbs are browned.

He Was One of Them

A little fellow arrived home from school while the family were at lunch. With a disgusted look on his face, he said:

"Mother, some of the boys in my class don't know how to spell 'sarcastic'."

"Well, dear," replied his mother 'how do you spell it?'

"Me?" he asked. "Oh, I was one of those that didn't know."

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 93

Mother! It's Cruel to "Physic" Your Child

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every day or two was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but best [illegible] months before a dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

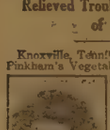
NEARLY INSANE AT TIMES

Mrs. Saunders Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Troubles of Change of Life



Knoxville, Tenn.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound while going through the Change of Life. I was very nervous, could not sleep and had melancholy spells. In fact, I was nearly insane at times and my memory was almost a blank. I was so weak I could not do my housework half of the time and suffered dreadfully with my back. My doctor said I would have to worry it out and I went through this for three years before I began taking the Vegetable Compound which I saw advertised. I think it was eight bottles that I took. It has been two years since I took any and I haven't had a doctor since for that trouble. I do all my washing and ironing and I have gained from 116 to 138 pounds. I feel so well I think I do not need any medicine now, but I advise all women who suffer physically and mentally as I did to give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. I hope it will do as much for them as it did for me."—Mrs. T. A. SAUNDERS, 711 E. Depot Street, Knoxville, Tenn.

Lesson for December 6

PAUL'S VOYAGE AND SHIPWRECK

LESSON TEXT—Acts 27:1-44.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Be of good cheer; it is I, be not afraid."—Matt. 14:27.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul in a Storm at Sea.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Story of a Shipwreck.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul's Leadership.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Overcoming Adverse Circumstances.

I. The Voyage (vv. 1-20).

1. The Ship (vv. 1-6).

It was a vessel of Alexandria sailing from Myra to Italy.

2. The Company (vv. 1-2).

Two of Paul's friends, Aristarchus and Luke were permitted to go with him. Besides these three there were two hundred and seventy-three in the ship (v. 37).

3. The Storm (vv. 7-20).

The ship made little headway on account of unfavorable winds. Paul advised that they winter in Fair Havens (vv. 9-12), but his advice was unheeded. The gentle south wind deceived them so they loosed from Crete only to be overtaken by the tempestuous wind called Euroclydon. They did everything possible to save the ship; they took up the boat which was towed behind; they bound great cables around the ship to strengthen it for the storm; they lightened the ship by bringing down from the masts and rigging everything that was superfluous, and finally the cargo and tackling were thrown overboard. All this seemed to be of no avail and all hope of being saved was removed. It seemed that wicked men and material forces were combined to prevent the great apostle from reaching Rome. However, these very experiences were overruled by God to bring good cheer and salvation to many on the way. We should remember that tempestuous winds as well as soft breezes await God's faithful ones. The presence of storm does not prove that we are going the wrong way.

II. Paul's Serene Faith (vv. 21-23).

To a man who does not know God, upon the failure of the sun and stars to shine for many days, the fading of all hope is natural; but to the man of faith, hope still burns brightly. God is just as near to His own in the midst of a stormy sea as in their quiet homes. Observe Paul's behavior:

1. His Rebuke for Their Failure to Heed His Advice at Fair Havens (v. 21). This was not a mere taunt, but a reference to the wisdom of his former advice, urging them to give him a more respectful hearing.

2. Bids Them Be of Good Cheer (v. 22).

He inspired them with hope.

3. He Promises Them Safety (v. 22).

Though the ship go to pieces, every man's life should be saved.

4. The Source of His Information (vv. 23-24).

The angel of God had revealed it unto him.

5. The Reason of Paul's Calm Faith (v. 23).

"Whose I am, and whom I serve." God can and will take care of His property (John 10:28-29). Those who have been redeemed by the blood of Jesus are not their own, but God's.

III. The Ship's Crew All Safe on Land (vv. 27-44).

This was exactly as the Lord had said. We can rest assured that all God has spoken will come to pass even though there be a broken ship, brutal soldiers and a perfidious crew. Aside from the fulfillment of God's promises, the most important part of this section is the splendid sanity which characterized Paul's action on the way. Three things marked his sanctified common sense.

1. His Vigilance Detected That the Sailors Had Planned to Escape (v. 30).

He knew how much they would be needed presently, and at once took steps to prevent their escape. He went straight to the man in charge and said, "Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved." Why should he make such a declaration when God had said that all should be saved? It was because he was not one of those foolish men who ignore human agency. He practiced the truth that genuine reliance upon God is the all-powerful incentive to human action.

2. He Got Them to Take a Substantial Breakfast (v. 34).

It was no time to talk to these men about their souls when their bodies needed immediate attention.

3. He Gave Thanks to God (v. 35).

This he did in the presence of them all. His prayer for that meal had more effect upon the people than his preaching would have had.

POULTRY

SELECT BREEDERS FOR NEXT SPRING

Now is the time to select the breeding stock for use next spring. This matter is often neglected until it is too late, and when the mating is made, mistakes are liable to be made. In the poultry business, success or failure starts in the breeding pen. If you select your birds for your breeding pen, you will have better stock next year. If they are mated with no selection, you cannot and will not make progress in the poultry business. The object of the breeding pen is to get good, healthy chicks, in the opinion of D. H. Hall, extension poultry husbandman at Clemson college.

In picking the males to breed from, remember that the male is one-half the flock. The male should be of the best type, and have vigor and strength. He should also stand up well on his legs, and possess the characteristics of his breed. For instance, your bird may be a Rhode Island Red in color, but may have a Wyandotte shape, and would not make a good breeder, because this Wyandotte shape would be undesirable in Reds.

Do not purchase a fine male and expect him to do all in the flock. Select the very best females to mate with him. In the poultry world at least, the females are as important as the males. A good female breeder should possess a well-proportioned body, and should be deep, broad and long. She should never have the appearance of an undeveloped male, but should always look feminine. The best type shows constitutional vigor and characteristics of the breed.

In selecting the breeders, the breed characteristics should be strong in both males and females. You will never be able to obtain a perfect breeder. Every fowl will have some defects and we must make up for these defects by selecting fowls that are strong where the other one is weak.

Do not expect all the chicks to be up to the standard. According to the laws of breeding, at least one-fourth will be of inferior grade and should be culled out.

Body Type in Fowls Is Quite Desirable Point

A bird of good body type must be deep and broad and show great length. She should be well developed in the breast and abdomen. Great length of back and keel is especially desirable. The bird should not be too loose feathered. This is generally shown by loose thigh feathers such as are shown by the Cochin. The under line should be fairly straight and long. The back should be long and horizontal (level). This, of course, varies with the breed. The Rhode Island Reds have the most level back, while the Leghorns have the most erect. The most desirable top line is the one which is the most horizontal.

The carriage of the bird should show a maximum amount of activity. The legs are generally placed behind the central portion of the body and are straight and wide apart.

A poor-producing hen generally stands erect. There are several outstanding types. These birds may be very shallow and cut away at the breast and abdomen. In the case of beefy individuals, the abdomen appears to be mainly made up of hard fat. Another type is commonly known as "bagging down." This is generally due to a short keel. Most birds with a deformed back are generally poor producers.—University of Illinois.

Good Winter Production Obtained by Right Feed

Too many poultrymen rely almost wholly on grain feeds during the winter. Green food, beef scraps, milk by-products and mineral matter are too often omitted altogether or fed too infrequently and sparingly. Oyster shell, prepared grit and charcoal, ready for the fowls at all times, provide mineral matter. Cabbage, beets, mangles and sprouted oats make excellent green foods; hung an inch higher than the head compels needed winter exercise. Any fresh vegetables, even raw potatoes, are a whole lot better than nothing of the kind at all.

For animal food, beef scraps serve the purpose splendidly. Milk by-products, when low priced, are used with excellent results and probably with greater returns, comparatively, than when fed to farm animals.

The more the birds eat, the more they lay, if the rations are properly compounded and fed skillfully.

Good winter production means unquestioned success. Now is the time to house comfortably and feed skillfully.—A. C. Smith, Chief of Poultry Division, University Farm.

Green Feed Essential

Notice how nice the yolks of the eggs you are using appear. Did you obtain eggs with nice rich, strong orange-color yolks last winter? If so there were plenty of green foods furnished the hens. If the yolks were the watery, pale kind, it is certain that your hens failed to have green material. During the summer months grow up some of the yards about to sheds and plant rye and oats. The rye will always be accessible when the snow is off the ground.

A Raw, Sore Throat

Eases Quickly When You Apply a Little Musterole.

Musterole won't blister like the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Spread it on with your fingers. It penetrates to the sore spot with a gentle tingle, loosens the congestion and draws out the soreness and pain.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment made with oil of mustard. Brings quick relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds on the chest. Keep it handy for instant use.

Cup Makers Profit

Radio shows are good things for the silver loving cup makers. Nearly 300 cups were awarded by the two shows held recently in New York city. A cup went to the radio manufacturer who received the biggest order and a consolation cup to the man who received the smallest order. There were cups for singers, mouth organists, recitationists and the most popular performers. Even the lunch counter concessionaire received a cup because his chicken sandwiches were genuine and not bootleg.

CULP—COPELAND

It will be of more than passing interest to many friends in Chilton Co. to know that Miss Nettie Culp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Culp, was married in Birmingham on Sunday morning, the 15th to Mr. C. R. L. Copeland.

The bride for the past has held a position with the Jesse French and Son Piano Co., of Clanton.

However, Miss Nettie will ever be remembered as Clanton's gracious "hello girl." All patrons of the Peoples Phone had their cares lightened and their days brightened if a sweet cheery voice counts for ought.

Mr. Copeland is a native Georgian, but has been a resident for sometime of Biringhamm, where he holds a responsible position.

Mr. and Mrs. Copeland have the best wishes of many Chiltonians upon this epochal occasion.

Lending Freight Cars to Speed Deliveries

One of the cardinal reasons for the splendid record made by American Railroads since their return to private management, is their increased operating efficiency.

Constant striving on the part of railroad managements to facilitate the transportation of freight, has resulted in an immense saving of time, as well as money, to American shippers.

Originally, American Railroads would not permit their freight cars to leave their own lines of track, making necessary sluggish and expensive transfers of freight. This custom was later changed in certain sections of the country, so that the body of the freight car was transferred to the trucks, or running gear, of the receiving road—still a costly and slow process.

To-day the movement of freight cars is speeded by the transfer or interchange from one truck line to another, without disturbing the contents of the car.

During the past year the L. & N. received over 1,100,000 cars from connecting lines, and delivered 1,040,000 to other roads. These figures constitute a direct contribution on the part of this company to time ... saving to the public.

THE FACTOR

SYNOPSIS.—With David, half-breed guide, Brent Steele, of the American Museum of Natural History, is traveling in northern Canada. By a stream he hears Denise, daughter of Col. Hilaire St. Onge, factor at Wailing River, play the violin superbly. He introduces himself and accepts an invitation to make the post his home during his stay.

In front of the trade-house, in conversation with David, stood a tall, military-looking man, with iron-gray hair and mustache. Around the door lounged a group of curious company Indians. Advancing and gripping the newcomer's hand, the factor of Wailing River exclaimed:

"Bon jour, Monsieur Steele! Welcome to Wailing River! My daughter and David have told me of our good fortune."

As the old soldier continued, with a slight French accent, Steele was aware of being secretly appraised by the keen eyes of the other.

"You are to be our guest for as long as you will honor us. In this valley, for a man of science, there is much of interest."

"You see, colonel, David is under the impression that Lallumme is an old friend," Steele enlightened his host, whose face reflected acute interest. "Sometimes in meeting old friends he forgets in his joy that his look. "Lallumme, monsieur, can give you anything you wish—including Scotch whisky."

The girl's dark eyebrows contracted at the mention of the Ogoke trader's name.

"So, he's giving the Indians whisky, is he?" said Steele.

"You are surprised?" laughed the factor bitterly. "For Monsieur Lallumme it seems that Canadian law does not exist. With his whisky he will soon have the fur trade of the whole district."

"They said as much at Fort Hope. But the authorities—why don't they act?"

St. Onge shrugged eloquently. "I do not know. He is running things with a high hand—has support or the strongest at Ottawa."

Steele turned with a smile to David who had been an interested listener to the conversation.

"I think that we shall have to pay Monsieur Lallumme a visit, David."

St. Onge and his daughter exchanged glances.

"Daveed like to shake de han' of Mister Lallumme," replied the Ojibway, dryly.

"I pity Lallumme when you do, He'll carry his arm in a sling for a month if he ever falls into that wolf-trap of yours."

"You see, colonel, David is under the impression that Lallumme is an old friend," Steele enlightened his host, whose face reflected acute interest. "Sometimes in meeting old friends he forgets in his joy that his hand-shake is famous from Nepigon to Norway House. In this case, David," he added grimly, "you'll have to remember that we're not on the Nepigon and must not mistake Monsieur Lallumme's throat for his hand."

Steele smiled inwardly as St. Onge's eyes shifted to meet those of his daughter, then focused quizzically on the grinning face of the half-breed. If the situation at Wailing River was a source of mystification to St. Onge's guest, Steele was satisfied that the guests had now balanced the score, to the truth of which surmise the face of the Frenchman patently testified.

"But come, I forget my manners, monsieur. We have a room and bed for you as long as you will honor us. My head man, Michel, will take care of David."

"Thank you, sir!" And picking up the bag containing his personal belongings, Steele followed his host.

The house of the factor of Wailing River was built of square-hewn spruce logs, carefully chinked against the January winds of the Height-of-Land country. In front, a roofed porch of hewn slabs commanded a view of the river which here gave no intimation of the swift metamorphosis which, a third of a mile below, turned it into a riot of white rapids. Beside the porch a bed of violets and wood anemone were now bloomless, but beyond, in their second flowering, white Canadian violets and the blue of fringed gentian and harebells against a background of northern golden rod bore gay witness to the care of one who loved flowers.

Familiar with the bare and uninviting interiors of the houses at the fur posts, often presided over by an Indian or half-breed, wife of the factor, the living-room Steele now entered bore resemblance to those he had seen solely in the huge sheet-iron stove. The rough walls hung sparingly with small French etchings framed in white birch, the rustic furniture shaped from spruce and cedar poles, the shelves of books, and the rugs of moose and bear and wolf, had, by the alchemy of taste, been fused into a room—a home.

"I did not know there was a room like this north of Winnipeg, mademoiselle," Steele said in frank admiration.

"Oh, monsieur! would you have us live like the Indians? But you are laughing at our poor little home."

"Please don't," he begged. "It is charming—this room. And all the books!"

"It was hard on our packers," broke in St. Onge, "but I insisted on having the books if I was to be marooned up here in this valley. The winter would be long without them—and the violin."

"I envy you the winters here with that violin, sir," said Steele, smiling at his hostess. "I hope to hear it again, mademoiselle—your superb playing."

Her face brightened. "It was only a mood—today at the rapids, monsieur. I go there when lonely, to play to the troubled waters. You thought me mad—I saw it in your face; but I was only homesick for Touraine. Tonight we shall have something gay."

But Steele felt that it was not loneliness which had driven Denise St. Onge to the restless waters.

"Monsieur, you will wish to see your room. Our Ojibway servant, Charlotte, will bring you hot water." And St. Onge led Steele to a room on the second floor of the house, the capacity of which was strained by a cot and washstand, whither a square-built, half-breed woman followed shortly with a steaming bucket.

Steele was thankful that his duffle bag contained a change of clothes and moccasins. Hot water, a shave and fresh clothes speedily worked a miracle in the tattered stranger who had startled Denise St. Onge at the rapids.

When Steele rejoined his hostess he felt more at ease. He even had a suspicion that she approved his changed appearance. At the thought, something like a thrill swept him—to be followed by a shrug of annoyance. He was not an attractive woman in months and was paying the penalty. Yet, as he watched her pour the tea while her father dispensed caribou stew and fried trout, a quality—rarer than mere comeliness; an evident fineness of fiber, a savor of personality in this factor's daughter, which meant race and background—impressed Steele upon him, and a strong curiosity to know the history of these people whom he had stumbled upon in the bad-lands south of the Albany—to learn the cause of the fear and heartache which this lonely girl had so poignantly revealed in the gorge, possessed him.

"You are collecting Indian relics and utensils for the American museum?" asked the Frenchman. "You are an ethnologist?"

"Yes, I have been in the field four years for the museum."

"You have found much of interest?"

"Last year and this summer, I shipped by Hudson's Bay canoes considerable stuff from Port Hope and Henley House. Lake Mukahibetan on the Albany has some remarkable burial places, unlike anything I've seen. And the Ojibways up there are still very wild and superstitious—medicine men, sorcerers, fear of spirits and the Windigo, and all that."

The factor paused, fork in air. Slowly he replaced it on his plate, untouched; then asked:

"You have never been in this valley before?"

"No," replied Steele, puzzled at his host's tense manner, "but what I heard on the Albany interested me. It seemed to be Windigo country among the Albany Ojibways—under a sort of taboo. It must be a serious handicap to your trade, although the very fact that you're here proves that it is not generally considered haunted country by the Indians."

The fine features of St. Onge stiffened. With a glance at his daughter who watched him with parted lips and wide eyes, as though fearful of what he was about to say, he replied bitterly:

"That is our problem, monsieur. The company rashly builds a post on this river which, for a hundred miles below the rapids here, is to the Ojibways a place of spirits; then sends me here to get the fur of the upper country. At Albany, they laugh at this talk of Windigo and spirits keeping the Indians from trading here. They even order me to send hunters to trap the valley below us—when they have avoided it for generations."

"They only betray their ignorance by belittling Indian superstition, sir. I was following and shot at on the Albany this summer for photographing some Ojibway children. They believed the lens was an evil eye and that the children would be bewitched."

The factor has his troubles, evidently, and is worried by them. What is the true inwardness?

Sugar or Candy

Granulated, lump, pulverized and brown sugars, though differing in texture and flavor, are practically alike in composition. They contain little or nothing but sugar. A pound of candy may be considered the equivalent in fuel value of a pound of sugar. Water, which has no fuel value, is used in making candy, but so, too, are chocolate and nut meats, which have higher fuel values than sugar. The proportion of sugar in thick sirups, such as honey and molasses, is about three-fourths of a pound to the pound, and in jellies, jams and rich preserves, about one-half of a pound to the pound.

He came up smiling—used to say,
He made his fortune that-a way.
He had hard luck a-plenty, too,
And gettied down and fought her through,
And every time he got a jolt
He just took on a tighter holt,
Slipped back some, when he tried to climb.
But came up smilin' every time

HAVE A SANDWICH

For the numberless occasions when sandwiches are so appropriate and so much enjoyed, one likes a large range from which to choose.

Caviar Toast Sandwiches. — Put the caviar into a shallow dish and add a tablespoonful of mayonnaise mixing until creamy. Add the juice of half a lemon and one teaspoonful of scraped onion. Spread thin slices of white bread from which the crusts have been removed with the mixture and an equal number with mayonnaise. Put together in pairs, press lightly and cut into finger-sized sandwiches. Brush with soft butter and arrange in a wire broiler. Toast lightly on both sides and serve with after dinner coffee.

Roman Sandwiches.—Finely mince cold broiled smoked fish—there should be one cupful. Add one teaspoonful of anchovy paste, or three anchovies pounded to a paste; add one tablespoonful of French mustard, one tablespoonful of vinegar from a pickled onion bottle, and just enough mayonnaise to moisten the mixture. Use as a filling for bread sandwiches which have been spread with mayonnaise, adding a lettuce leaf to each sandwich. Serve with tiny cucumber pickles and coffee.

Quince Jelly and Pecan Nut Sandwiches.—Whip one cupful of quince jelly with a fork until light, add one cupful of finely chopped pecan or hickory nut meats; mix well and use as a filling between split lady fingers, or thinly sliced whole wheat bread, spread with creamed butter. Serve with fruit salad and cocoa.

Wafer Sandwiches.—Spread salted wafers with marmalade jam, jelly or conserve, put together in pairs, arrange in a paper doily lined sandwich basket and serve with a cup of tea for afternoon callers. Cocoa or coffee will be equally acceptable.

Celery and Roquefort Cheese Sandwiches.—Chop celery (to one cupful add mayonnaise to moisten), to which has been added one-third of a cupful of finely crumbled roquefort cheese. Mix well and spread between buttered slices of rye bread.

Broiled Venison Cutlets.—Cut chops from the loin of venison. Brush them with melted butter or olive oil, sprinkle with salt and pepper and roll in bread crumbs. Broil over coals or under gas until cooked to the right turn.

Helpful Hints.

All fruits should be washed before serving. Such fruit as strawberries, when not to be used at once, should be spread out on large plate or dish. If left in boxes they crush and also mold quickly.

Silk stockings will last much longer if washed after each wearing. Perspiration rots the fiber, so frequent washing makes them last longer.

Use a few drops of turpentine in the boiler when boiling clothes—it will whiten them. Added to starch it makes collars look glossy.

To stretch butter, add a cupful of sweet fresh milk to a pound of butter, softened enough to be worked into it. Butter thus treated will not keep as long as the ordinary, but it goes much further when spread on bread. It should be used within a day or two, however, as it is apt to become sour.

Two or three measuring cups should be kept ready for use. Have them standard half-pint size and marked in eighths, quarters and halves. The advantage of two or more cups is that one may be used for liquids and one for dry ingredients without stopping to wash them.

A small-sized scrub brush kept in the kitchen sink will be found to save hands and patience in washing dishes such as graters, and any dish which has dried-on food.

Fresh tea stains on linen may be removed by sprinkling at once with salt. Fruit stains of jam or jelly should be touched with spirits of camphor before removing the cloth.

Even a small clock is annoying it some people in the sick room. Cover it with a glass bowl. The time can still be seen, but the sound is eliminated.

When cutting shortening into flour use two knives; the work will be done much faster than with a spoon or fork.

Vanilla is not an appropriate flavor for fried foods such as doughnuts or crullers. The nutmeg or other spices always dry granite away from a hot stove as it will chip and crack if left over heat.

Put zinc fillings, or pieces of waste zinc on the coals in the furnace; the will clean the chimney of soot.

All silver should be washed and dried as soon as possible after using.

The solution will appear in next issue.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

MEASURES EXACT DEPTH OF WATER

Quite recently there has been developed in the navy by Dr. H. C. Hayes, a most ingenious and extraordinary mechanism by which the depth of water underneath a ship is found by the emission of a sound wave which is echoed from the bottom, according to Science Service.

Not only does this method do away with the necessity of handling long lines and heavy weights, difficult in a rough sea, but it makes possible a record of scores of observations where only one was possible before, and in addition the observations are of greater accuracy.

Its practical value has received abundant confirmation on various Transatlantic lines. In the preparation of a detailed contour map of the bottom off southern California, in a survey for a new Alaskan cable route and in other operations.

Footprint Seems to Point to Giant Race

The natives of Africa, like the primitive people in other continents, have a tradition handed down from the dim past that Africa was once inhabited by giants. Now a dispatch comes from Johannesburg, South Africa, telling of the discovery of a footprint more than four feet long imbedded deep in fossilized granite. It is said that the person making this print must have been 25 or 30 feet tall. Whether the print is that of a human foot, or whether it is the work of the elements, remains to be determined by scientists. For the time being many seriously suggest that it may be the footprint of a prehistoric race of giants. Scientists who have casually examined the rock say the print is too lifelike and symmetrical to have been made by artificial means. —Pathfinder Magazine.

Legal Tangle

Twinship appears to be a handicap, as it has been maintained that no "similar" twins have acquired great intellectual distinction. The two Scotts of Newcastle, who afterward became Lord Stowell and Lord Eldon, were both "dissimilar" twins, as the former was born with a sister in 1745, and the latter with another sister in 1751. Jacob and Esau, the most ancient pair of twins on record, differed very much both physically and mentally.

No Promise to Breach

She—Do you know, sir, that I could sue you for breach of promise?

He—Oh, I think not.

She—Why, did you not ask me to marry you?

He—Yes.

She—And I consented?

He—Yes.

She—Well?

He—Well, I didn't promise, did I? You were the one that did that. I presume I have the right to ask you a civil question, have I not, without running the risk of being dragged into court?—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

To Mend Umbrellas

If your umbrella gets torn, catch the edges together with a needle and thread. Open the umbrella so as to stretch the cloth and put a piece of mending tissue underneath, then press down with something warm enough to cause it to adhere, but not hot enough to destroy it. Over this put a piece of court plaster. This mending is waterproof.

"Caesar" Originally Title

Caesar is now frequently used as a Christian name, Julius as applied to the Roman emperors it was a title. It was the cognomen of the Roman family Julia. In this case it was used by seven rulers. It died out as a family name with the death of Nero, but was subsequently revived as the title of the reigning emperor.

The climate at the equator varies with the altitude above the sea level and nearness to the sea. At Quito, on the equator, 9,350 feet above sea level, the morning temperature is 47 degrees—the midday temperature is 66 degrees. This varies very little with the season.

BIRMINGHAM WILL FIGHT INJUNCTION

ATTORNEYS CHARGE RAILROADS WITH SEEKING TO EVADE BUILDING UNDERPASSES

HOLD CITY ORDINANCE LEGAL

Claim Railroads Seek Injunctions To "Forever Prevent Separation of Dangerous Crossings"

Birmingham.—Charges that the railroads are seeking a perpetual injunction against the city "to forever prevent the separation of dangerous down-town grade crossings" are contained in a brief which City Attorney W. J. Wynn and Marvin Woodall will present to the supreme court this week.

Attacking the pleas of the carriers that the city's ordinances demanding underpasses at Fourteenth, Eighteenth and Twentieth streets are "unreasonable and invalid," the brief contends:

1. That the railroads "might ever be caused to bankrupt or quit business in order to eliminate these crossings without being lawfully wronged and without their rights under the state and federal constitutions being violated."

2. That the action of the city commission in ordering the crossing eliminated is legislative, and that the courts have no voice in the matter as to the expediency or public necessity for the underpasses.

3. That while an express legislative grant to a municipality of power to ordain crossing relief is given, th[illegible] power cannot be inquired into with respect to its policy or reasonableness.

The city attorneys further contend in their brief that the crossings, as they now exist, constitute a "most serious menace to public safety," and that the city has full authority under its police power to order the hazard removed.

The brief sets out that the power of a city to separate dangerous crossing is continuing and may be exercised as to crossing land out either before or after the railroad is laid. This is in answer to the railroad's contention that some of the tracks in the down town section were constructed before the streets were opened.

Inasmuch as the underpass ordinance violates neither the state or federal constitution, the courts "cannot, under the law, declare it unreasonable or oppressive," the brief continues.

Scores of supreme court decisions are cited in support of the city's contentions. The brief, which contains 37 typed pages concludes by petitioning the court to reserve the decision of chancery court in upholding two of the 14 points raised by the railroads in their fight on the city ordinances.

TAILORED TYPES IN FURS; IN MIDWINTER MILLINERY

AS THE winter comes on and fur coats grow more and more numerous on the street, the early prophecy of stylists is fulfilled. Forerunners of fur modes, presented in the early fall and late summer, showed a return to simple treatments in making up the pelts into garments, and now it is evident that the public approves this conservative styling. There is little fussiness about fur coats, either in the fine classic furs or in the popular varieties whose origin is more or less of a mystery to the average citizen.

Among the handsomest and most expensive of fine furs is black broadtail, and a coat made of it, as illustrated here, shows how reserved and plain the styles are. It is straight in line, with flaring sleeves, and has a collar, cuffs and bottom finish of very choice marten. Coats made of small skins, such as mink or squirrel, or even the superb and costly Russian sable, reveal the same restraint in styling. In nearly all of them the small pelts are sewed in vertical lines, with no effort at any fanciful effects. When these top-liners lead the way toward simplicity all the humble performers in the fur drama are likely to follow. The straightline coat has a rival in flared styles, but these also are simply constructed.

The list of popular furs is long, including caracul in black, brown, gray and tan, natural and dyed squirrel, Hudson seal, leopard cat and African leopard, muskrat and many varieties of imitations of mink. The abundant muskrat seems to be masquerading in a greater variety of disguises than ever before and most of them are handsome and far more distinguished in appearance than the original pelts—thousands of coats made from them are beautiful and rich in appearance, and the dependable Hudson seal is among them. The most popular trimming furs used in collars, cuffs and handings are fox, kolinsky, marten, fitch and squirrel. Squirrel coats and jackets usually have collars of the same fur. Fox is most popular of all trimming furs and is unusually becoming, but kolinsky has come to vie with it.

When dressy millinery is under consideration designers never forget that women are individualists, or if they do forget they are apt to suffer for it. If the present tendency keeps up each woman will want an "exclusive model" made for herself alone and not to be repeated for any one else. The smartly dressed woman does not object to street hats almost uniform in type—although on these she likes individual touches—but let her meet a copy or replica of her own particular dress hat and she will register disapproval immediately and emphatically. Therefore the milliner who caters to a discriminating following must make hats that follow the trend of the mode, but each in its own prettily willful way.

The group of five hats shown here illustrates new oddities in shapes and new developments in trimmings by which the midwinter modes have been varied. In this little company of new arrivals it will be noted that velours and felts are not represented—not that they are passe, but milliners, following the lead of Paris, have turned to velvet and other fabrics for the rich and brilliant effects sought in midwinter's dressy hats. The group leads off with a lovely dinner or afternoon hat in metallic lace with a cut-out facing of fine velvet which might be in any becoming and fashionable color. A small fan and fold of velvet caught with a little jeweled pin are posed against the front crown and an airy flange of maline stands up about the brim edge. The cut-out facing and the maline give this model a much desired, delicate touch. Below, at the left, a rich turban of heavy gold lace is posed over green and gold metallic silk and is appropriate for afternoon or evening wear.

Black satin makes the Napoleon shape at the right with soft crown and brim that droops across the back. Folds of the satin and a fine jeweled pin with pendants adorn it. The hat at the center is fashioned of velvet and is very unusual in style. The cluster of small, bright quills posed near the front remind one of American Indian headdress—which probably inspired it. Most interesting is the small hat of velvet, which finishes the group, with a halo of stitched velvet posed against it. There is nothing simple about the hats that grace the climax of winter styles.

THE HIGHWAY TO LIFE

Millions Now Living Will Never Die

Not in any past ages was the Highway to Life opened up; for in all past ages men have continued to die. The Highway to Life means what the words imply; namely, a way by which the people can get eternal life here, now.

The casting up of this highway and the gathering out of its stones is in progress before our eyes.

The way of the people, a way they have never hitherto had, is being made ready for them—the way by which they will gain everlasting life on earth. Hear Dr. Jas. A. Edwards, of Birmingham, Ala., at J. C. Edwards at 11 A.M. and at the Courthouse Clanton, Ala. Sunday, Dec. 13, at 3:00 P. M.

Mr and Mrs. Edward Bialus of Ensley, and Mr. B. A. Marler of Cipico, spent the week-end with the family of J. B. Morler.

Think It Over

Would a municipal ice plant be desirable in Clanton? The city has its own water supply, we also have a partially vacant brick building at the water plant, which was originally a boiler room when steam was used to pump water. The location is convenient to the railroad, and I am informed by the public service commission, that the cost of manufacture runs from eight to ten cents per hundred. And I notice that the Alabama Power Company finds it more satisfactory to manufacture ice even where only a small amount is needed as at Mitchell Dam, and supply to their customers at a much lower rate than we pay in Clanton.

If you think we need this, let the mayor and council know now, and give us time to be ready for next summer when we will be using tons upon top of tons of ice daily.

If you want meal and sand in your ice. If you want it delivered in the afternoon when you need it in the morning. If you want tnirty five pounds when you pay for fifty. If you want to pay ten cents per hundred pounds more than the same ice cost in your neighboring towns. And I might enumerate several other similar things, then you need not take any action.

Yours respectfully,
V. J. Gregg, Mayor.

THOSE big red letter days on the calendar mean particularly sumptuous dinners to the average American housewife. Her family expects something in the nature of roast turkey, duck or chicken. Fudge Making Finds Favor With Co Eds

Meta H. Given.

Fudge may be classed with pie as a typical American dish. It has a place in every young man's heart and every girl's category of accomplishments. Co-eds swear by fudge and "fudge shines" in sorority parlors are the very latest accomplishments of college maidens.

There's a big wallop in a platter of fudge, the co-eds explain, because it's one of the greatest sources of energy, containing both milk, the "perfect food," and sugar.

If you've any doubt of the place fudge occupies in the young male heart, try these recipes on him and hear his own answer. Each of the ap-

NEW SALEM CHURCH

Editor Chilto nCounty News,
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Editor:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say some words that I am sure wil be of interest to the members of New Salem Church and to our friends throughout the county, who are interested in us.

New Salem Church has stood as a beacon light on the coast of time for almost, if not more, than a century. Today, however, we have grown until a larger program seemed to be necessary to those of us who are trying to do the will of God in the matter. The following program was the outcome of our prayers. Preaching there will be preaching two Sundays in each month, the first and the third Sundays. Also, on the first Saturday in each month we will have an eleven o'clock service and business meeting. All members of the church should attend these services. The B. Y. P. U., Sunday school and W. M. U's are being enlarged to meet our growing church and community. There is a place in this program for every man, woman and child. Shall someone else fill their place and attempt to fill yours? Everybody is especially invited to come and worship with us. Brethern, pray for us that we may succeed in a great way for the glory of Christ and be an example to our sister churches.

THE BANKER-EDUCATOR PLAN TO PROMOTE BETTER AGRICULTURE

By D. H. OTIS,
Agricultural Director, American Bankers Association

Whenever bankers desire to promote actively agricultural improvement in their communities, the state agricultural colleges stand ready to show them the way and to give expert assistance. The purpose of this article is to illustrate the way in which the colleges are getting in contact with the banks, and the kind of assistance they render.

D. H. Otis

As soon as the college has a list of the banks in the state desiring to adopt plans to aid agriculture as indicated by project blanks sent out to all the banks in the state, by the State Bankers Association Agricultural Committee, it gives practical suggestions to each banker on the list as to what he can do to stimulate, organize, and conduct the work in the particular project he has selected. Then either a department specialist from the college or the county agent gets in personal touch with the banker to assist him in an advisory capacity.

Samples of the project outlines are given below to illustrate the details of the procedure the college takes in accomplishing its plan.

College Provides Expert Advisers

In counties with no county agent a list of the banks desiring to carry on a project is sent to a specialist at the state college, according to the project listed. For instance, the banks desiring to carry on the farm accounts project are assigned to the farm management specialist, those desiring to carry on the legume project to the agronomy specialist, those interested in boys' and girls' club work to the junior extension specialist, and so forth.

In counties that do have a county agent a list of the banks and the projects in which each is interested is sent to him with a request that he get in touch with the bankers and help them in regard to the various projects.

The next step by the college is to write to each banker on the list sending him project outlines and informing him that the county agent or a specialist from the college will get in touch with him. If there is no agent in the county this letter reads as follows:

Union State Bank,
Bankville.

Gentlemen—You will find enclosed a brief outline of the farm accounts project in which you have indicated your interest to your State Agricultural Committee and to the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association.

I am sure that the specialist from the agricultural college will be pleased to assist you in carrying out the suggestions indicated. We have asked him to get in touch with you.

Director, Agricultural Extension.

The letter to bankers in counties that do have a county agent informs them that he will get in touch with them.

Suggests Things the Banker Can Do

The project outlines sent to each banker give specific suggestions as to the things he can do to organize the work in his project, and the part he can take in carrying out the work. The more simple and concrete these suggestions are the more valuable they are to the banker. Following are samples of such project outlines:

Farm Accounts Project

1. Banker can select group of farmers who can and should undertake the work of farm accounts.
2. Arrange with county agent or specialist from agricultural college for first meeting of the group and select an account book.
3. Assist individuals at their request with information relative to entering accounts and other data properly.
4. Act as or select leader for the group.
5. Assist in obtaining inventories as a means of securing individual financial statement at close of the year.

Boys' and Girls' Club Work

1. The banker can arrange with the county agent or the specialist of the agricultural college for organizing a club.
2. Plan to present various types of club work at the next meeting and perfect the organization of a local club.
3. Banker may act as local leader of the club.
4. Cooperate with county agent or specialist in annual "Achievement Day."
5. Banker may offer prizes for club work or otherwise assist in financing same.

Legume Project

1. The banker can get information from county agent or specialist from the agricultural college on the value of alfalfa soy bean or sweet clover crops to farmers of the community.
2. Arrange for meeting of interested farmers with county agent or specialist.
3. At this meeting county agents, specialists, or others will discuss:
   (a) Value of crop.
   (b) Seed supply and varieties.
   (c) Methods of handling the crop.
   (d) Use and disposition of crop.
4. Plan with county agent or specialist meetings and demonstrations on plots or fields.
5. Secure exhibits for community or county fair.

Cow Testing Associations

1. The banker can arrange with county agent or specialist from agricultural college for meeting of interested group of farmers in the community for the purpose of organizing a cow testing association.
2. Banker may act as leader, and with county agent or specialist plan to visit prospective farmers who may join the association.
3. Organize for work and assist in securing testing equipment and other materials wherever necessary.
4. Call meetings periodically to discuss association business and hold picnics or tours.
5. Banker with county agent or specialist may arrange for C. T. A. booth at community or county fair giving testing demonstrations and explaining work of association.

This constitutes the preliminary work by the college which paves the way for constructive work by the bankers in banker-farmer projects.

TO MAKE FARMING YIELD BETTER RETURNS

The outstanding possibilities of co-operative marketing are more largely along the lines of standardizing and improving production, eliminating excess varieties, standardizing and improving grade and pack, stabilizing production, regulating flow to market, improving distribution as between markets, developing new markets, collective bargaining, betterment of financing, correcting trade abuses, and representing producers before legislative and administrative bodies, says H. E. Erdman, associate professor in California College of Agriculture. All of these should, of course, result in higher net returns [illegible].

"If I were to list the limitations I should put them about as follows:

"1. Co-operation cannot fix prices that are out of line with supply and demand conditions.

"2. Co-operation cannot eliminate the middleman. It can, and does, of course, establish the farmers' own agencies to take the places of private agencies and often puts one co-operative agency where several dealers formerly operated.

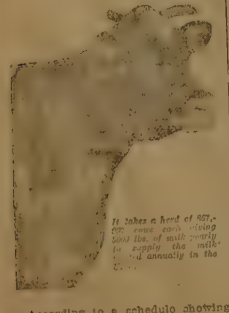
"3. Co-operation cannot reduce costs greatly except in so far as an increase in scale of operations makes for lower costs. Some of the gains of large scale operation, however, are dissipated because of tendencies toward extravagance.

"4. Co-operatives will not run alone. Constant attention is required on the part of the membership because 'what is everybody's business is nobody's business.'

"5. Co-operation does not permit the farmer to hold his products for a higher price without also compelling him to assume the risks of getting a lower price.

"6. The outsider often gets as much of the benefit of co-operative marketing as does the member, and in some cases gets more because he does not have to bear his share of certain development expenses. This is a decided handicap to co-operation."

Spilt Milk Costs Uncle Sam $77,399,685.00 Annually



It takes a herd of 667,000 cows, each giving 5000 lbs. of milk yearly to supply the milk wasted annually in the U. S.

According to a schedule showing the division of dairy products, published by the United States Department of Agriculture, the annual cost of wasted milk in our nation would make a happy pay day for the army and navy and still leave an appropriation sufficient to build enough [illegible] planes to satisfy even the militant Mitchell.

The amount of milk spilt, soured, rejected and otherwise wasted annually, is 3,339,986,000 pounds. This at $2.25 per hundred would approximate annually the stupendous amount of $77,399,685.

However, a cheerful note rings through this tale of economic loss to a nation. The same report shows a 1924 increase of 103 pounds of milk per cow over 1923 production. Deducting this from the figure previously given, leaves a loss through waste of only $13,007,325, a mere bagatelle, compared with our national debt of more than twenty billions of dollars.

The increased yield per cow is due to heightened efficiency on the farm; and future years promise even greater increases.

Dairymen have discovered the futility of feeding non-paying members of their milk herds. They have learned that losses lurk in insanitary milk production. They have discovered the advantages that lie in swatting the bacteria that hide in unclean stables, unclipped, unbrushed flanks and udders of milk cows and unsterilized utensils. As time goes on, the unavoidable waste of milk will be more than offset by intelligent feeding, complete sanitation and more efficient herd management.

BANKERS HELP

The banks of Linn County Oregon, are showing more enthusiasm than ever this year in behalf of a county corn exhibit similar to that held last year at the Linn County Fair. Last year's exhibit was the result of a contest for a prize offered by a number of local banks. This was so successful that this year ten out of the eleven banks in the county will subscribe to the effort.

The Agricultural Committee of the Alabama Bankers Association has recommended that a scholarship fund be established for the education of worthy young men and women along agricultural and home economics lines. It is estimated that if each bank in the state were to contribute 25 cents per thousand capital, five to six thousand dollars per annum would be realized.

Caloric Requirements of the Child

DIETITIANS declare that the average boy or girl of four years should receive about forty calories a pound of body weight per day. The average weight of a child of four years is forty pounds. Therefore the total caloric requirement would be approximately 1,600 calories. Calory is merely the name for a certain measure of heat derived from the burning of food.

Necessarily, the caloric requirement of the child is dependent on his temperament, since a child who plays hard and long requires more nourishment than one who leads a quieter life. Rate of growth also has a bearing on caloric requirements. The child who is growing rapidly should be given more food to meet his caloric needs than the boy or girl whose growth is normal.

Mothers know the daily diet should consist of the essential foodstuffs, protein, carbohyrates, fats, minerals and water. The important thing for her is to learn the foods that contain these essentials in a balanced diet. Below is a well-balanced menu for any child six years old compiled by an authority on home economics.

IMMEDIATE TAX REDUCTION DESIRED

There seems to be common consent among the leaders of Congress ta a program for the rapid advancement of a measure to reduce federal taxes. It has been recommended by the President and the Secretary of the Treasury and will be welcomed by the taxpayers.

Members of the house ways and means committee have been procuring data for the new bill for sometime, and its early passage is necessary at a time when taxes still are too heavy in spite of progress made in national economy and lower tax rates. Cut out many officers and cut salaries is the only way to do it.

STOPPED ALL TRAFFIC

In New York a back alley cat decided to move her family of five kittens across the street. She was so well known that officer Cudmore stopped all traffic and motor cars while she carried the five kittens safely across. The world pauses sometimes when the American sense of kindness is appealed to.

A FIT PUNISHMENT

Judge Stadter of Portland, Oregon, imposed a fine of $500 for cruelty to animals and six months imprisonment in the case of a man dragging a collie dog to death behind his automobile. Such a sentence will bring him to an understanding that even a dumb brute has a right to be killed without unnecessary cruelty.

BULLDOGGING IS CRUEL

At Pendleton, Chicago and other places where so-called round-ups and rodeos are conducted it is claimed there is no cruelty in the stunt called "bulldogging a steer." Quite the contrary is true. "Bulldogging" steers was never a leyitimate part of the cow boy's occupation. It consists of twisting the animal's neck, pinning it to the ground and holding it by imbedding the teeth in its lower lip. As a public exhibition it is commercial cruelty, committed and performed only bf those who are indifferent and insensible to animal torture.

NEXT NATIONAL CONVENTION

The next annual convention of the National American Humane Socities will be held at Portland, Oregon, in September, 1926. The national officers and delegates are carrying on a great and progressive work in their efforts to reduce cruelty and needless suffering to a minimum.

TEACH CHILDREN TO BE KIND

One of the most important things to teach children to take good care of their house-hold pets; to remember to feed them and to give them water to drink at regular times if possible. We are only doing right if we treat every living creature as we would wish to be treated ourselves. If you drive a horse think how you would like to be treated if you were that horse. Treat your dog and cat as you would like to be treated if you could change places with them. Kindness on the farm—gentle treatment of cows; good bedding, good food and a stall large enough to lie down in; for the horse; shelter for the swine; proper food and care of poultry all repay the farmer in dollars and cents. Try it.

WHY NOT RAISE THEM ALL?

Railroad employess ask that their wages be raised to the wartime scale.

Why not raise price of farm products, wheat corn, cattle and hogs to wartime figure?

Why not raise wages of all labor to the scale that was paid during the great World War, and not alone rail unions?

The farmers who have to raise raw material on small margins in open com petition with world markets and pay the freight to market the same, would probably vote unanimously for a few million dollars increase in railroad payrolls.

CLEAN JOURNALISM

American journalism shows a continuing tendency to cast off sensationalism and morbidness in favor of higher ideals and clean morals.

Williamm McAndrews, superintendant of schools in hCciage, under the caption, "Can Morality Be Taught Directly?" urged that "When we see the opposite ofmorality directly taught by nasty dramas, salacious literature, disorderly moving pictures, daily details of crime and lawlessness, there comes to every man and woman in this education business the dreadful realization that vice is teachable."

If the world's morel progress is to keep up with its progress along lines of material advancement, a decided and world-wide change of front must be obtained as a result of journalistic efforts.

A GOOD ACCIDENT POLICY

No driver of a vehicle, and more especially no driver of an automobile, should ever cross a railroad or interurban track without first looking both directions to determine whether a train is approaching.

Where there are two or more tracks never start across after a train has passed without waiting to see whether another train is approaching on anoth er track. Let the first train get by at least 500 feet. If necessary to shoft gears, do so not less than 500 feet before reaching track, lest auto stalls on the track.

At crossings protected by flagmen, gates, bells or wig-wag, never attempt to cross while flagman is on the crossing, or gates are lowered or bells or wig-wags are in action, for this means that a train is closely approaching.

These are a few suggestions to drivers which occasion no inconvenience, and which if observed will prevent accidents at grade crossings, for a grade crossing is only dangerous when male so by careless driving. In fact, the danger is in the driving, not in the crossing.

Shake well in a fruit jar before serving.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE

The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lazy. Neglect of these symptoms might result in a sick spell, therefore the sensible course is to take a dose or two of Herbine. It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vim and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by the home maker, the surprise guest. Every w[illegible]ence of welcoming an unexpected visitor when supplies were at low ebb and has searched high and low to find something presentable to put on the table. The emergency shelf in the pantry does away with such worries in short order.

A can opener and—presto—a veritable banquet can be prepared in a few minutes. The housewife may have her choice of many excellent meats, corn, tomatoes, mushrooms. If she is short of milk or cream, a can of evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk sterilized in the can and with sixty per cent of the water removed will do the trick, in fact she [illegible] two hundred or more savory dishes ready to her hand.

When the surprise guest does arrive the hostess not only wishes to be hospitable She does not want to be tied to the kitchen range [illegible] the afternoon. She wants to entertain as she has been entertained.

But that's only one of the places where the emergency pantry comes in. Backed by a well-stocked emergency shelf, the wife can put together a splendid luncheon or dinner in a jiffy. The spontaneous wish that comes at the last moment to informally invite a few friends for lunch can be gratified at once wit' the aid of the new pantry.

Afternoon tea for the bridge club is an equally easy matter. A glass of preserves or jelly, a platter of bread and butter, tea, and a dish of cookies will meet the ordinary demands of the casual caller and a can of evaporated milk will answer the milk or cream need.

Clanton Social News

By Mrs. Clara P. Curry

Happy Birthday Celebration.

Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. N. S. Johnson, celebrated her twelfth birthday on Friday evening when she invited a number of friends to spend the evening as her guests.

The Johnson home was made attractive for the occasion by growing plants and chrysanthemums.

A number of games were played throughout the evening. Among these were: Spinning pan, wink, clap-in, clap-out, and other old-times games. After the series of games, the hostess invited her guests into the dining room, where the pretty white cake with its twelve candles and [illegible] centering the dining table, was much admired.

Cutting the cake evoked much interest.

The guests were served an ice course.

Evans-Reynolds.

Mr. Clarence Evans was married in Corinth Miss., on Sunday to Miss Reynolds.

The couple, after a brief honeymoon trip, will be at home in Clanton after Sunday.

Some time ago a pretty little bungalow cottage was built around the corner on Third avenue, East Side. This was the straw that told which way the wind was blowing.

Clarence's many friends have since been anticipating with much pleasure his return as a resident of Clanton.

A warm welcome awaits the happy pair and many good wishes are cherished for the happiness of Mr. and Mrs. Evans.

SOC...

The Study Club.

The Clanton Study Club was entertained at its regular monthly meeting on Friday afternoon by Mrs. Arthur Johnson.

Mrs. Johnson's home was made ready for the afternoon's entertainment by growing plants and chrysanthemums placed effectively.

The subjects, "The System of Courts in a Typical State," and "How Trial Courts Work," were interestingly and convincingly presented by Mesdames John M. VanDerveer and P. D. Wilson, respectively.

The hostess served to the club members and a few invited guests an attractive salad plate with hot coffee.

PENTERS RECOVERING FROM AUTO ACCIDENT

Mrs. Penter and her young son, Robert, who were severely injured in an automobile accident several days ago, when returning from a pleasure trip to Birmingham, returned home Saturday afternoon from South Highlands infirmary.

The Night Hawks.

The Night Hawks, an organization composed of young men and high school boys, have their headquarters in Hotel Wilson.

Headquarters were open for inspection on Saturday, when several guests called.

The Night Hawks are musical, they have a number of musical instruments from base drum to the tin horn.

These boys are planning to give a negro minstrel performance in the high school auditorium within the very near future.

The proceeds from the entertainment will be used for the benefit of the high school athletic association.

Messrs. H. C. Young, Floyd White and Sanders Fuch of the Alabama highway, are president, vice president and secretary-treasurer respectively, of the Nighth Hawk rounders.

Good Staying Qualities Needed by Swine Grower

Andrew Boss, vice director of the Minnesota experiment station, told an audience of farmers on Swine Feeders' day, University farm, St. Paul, Minn., that the important thing after getting into the hog business is to stay in and develop a plan that suits the individual farm. He gave five rules for successful hog raising:

Provide suitable quarters for feeding and sleeping.

Lay out a system of lots and fencing fields to give clean fresh forage for brood sows and litters through the summer.

Make use of all dairy products and farm waste possible and provide an abundance of water at all times.

Arrange the farm so that shotes can be turned into the corn fields and fattened.

Provide for a surplus of feed so that stock hogs can be fed out at any time that the market looks especially promising.

Thinning Improves the Farm Woodlot

Winter Is Season to Get Out Defective Trees.

Nearly every farm woodlot can be improved by the removal of dead, dying and defective trees, and some of the less valuable kinds as well. The foresters at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca make this statement and say that this work can best be done in the winter months when other work is slack. Winter is also the best season of the year in which to cut timber, since those species which sprout naturally from the stump will do so vigorously in the spring. The work of chopping and handling logs likewise is much easier in winter.

The way to go about making these cuttings follows: First, remove all dead and dying trees, or those which are suffering from disease or insect attack. Second, remove those which are crooked and defective or which may be hindering the growth of other more valuable.

It should, of course, be kept in mind that the stand of trees is not opened up to such an extent that grass and weeds will grow where young trees should be growing. In other words, the "crown cover" should be kept so that about one-half shade will be provided. Nearly all species of trees will reproduce naturally without special effort, and a second crop should be obtained without any difficulty.

In the case of failure from this source, it is possible to plant young nursery trees to take the place of those cut.

If there is no local market for the material removed from the woodlot, it is always possible to convert it into firewood with a small portable buzz saw. Cordwood has been commanding a good price in nearly all parts of the country this year.

The college of agriculture will be glad to send bulletins describing in more detail the work of thinning.

Cream Layer on Bottled Milk Will Vary Much

Some conclusions regarding the effects of various factors on the creaming ability of market milk have been drawn by the United States department of Agriculture and the Minnesota state board of health as a result of an experimental study of the different methods of pasteurizing, cooling, storing, and handling market milk. A discussion of the results of the study has been published in Department Bulletin No. 1344 which has just been issued and is now ready for distribution.

In the pasteurization of milk, some difficulty has been experienced with variations in the depth of the cream layer on bottled milk. A uniform and satisfactory cream layer is regarded as of great commercial importance because of the housewife's habit of judging the richness of milk almost wholly by the depth of the cream layer rather than by the butterfat content as determined by laboratory test. The study has indicated that the cream volume varies with various methods of processing, sometimes as much as 50 per cent. A study of the results of the test conducted to show the effect of the various milk-plant practices on the cream volume should be of value to the plant operator in determining how he can best secure a satisfactory cream layer.

A copy of the bulletin may be secured free of charge, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY GRAHAM BOWER

CAWING CHARLIE CROW

"Caw, caw," said Cawing Charlie Crow. "I must tell you, Chloe, what is said to me just now."

"We notice you jotted it in by using a [illegible] the other crows said. "Chloe noticed that."

"Caw, caw," said Cawing Charlie Crow. "It was a man in a night [illegible] coming toward me. He looked up much in the grass which I had found.

"Ah there, I am making a rhyme my self. Ground and found rhyme nicely. A poet could do no better than Cawing Charlie Crow."

"Perhaps a poet wouldn't agree with you," said the other crows. "But luckily there is no poet around now to hear you, so you're quite safe.

"I'd be quite safe anyway," said Cawing Charlie Crow. "A poet is too full of the beauty of life to go around with a gun and destroy any of it.

"A poet wouldn't shoot me with a gun as he'd see my beautiful feathers in the sunlight and he'd admire my size, and he'd like me.

"Poets have love in their hearts."

"How do you know so much about poets?" the others asked.

"Oh, living in tree tops as I do I hear about lovely things such as poetry."

"We never heard much about it," the other crows said.

"You never listened to the trees when they sang poetry, then," Cawing Charlie said.

"The trees sing some of the loveliest poetry in the world if people and crows would only listen. I'm one who listens. And trees, filled with poetry, won't do harm to birds. They make room for them so they can build nests.

"But I'm not getting on with what I was going to tell you about this man in the motor.

"I thought I'd let him slow down for me. He tootled his horn and he slowed down very nicely.

"Then he said:

"'Crow, crow, you'd better blow.'

"And you thought that was poetry," cawed the other crows. "That was slang. When a person says one had better blow, they mean they'd better leave, and it's a slang expression."

"Oh well, no matter," said Cawing Charlie Crow, "it made a rhyme and it's poetry in its way. I don't believe in being too fussy. That's not being kind to poets or anyone else.

"Then I came along here.

"But before I had had the poetry—which you may call slang, which I call poetry—recited to me I heard a piece of news about the farm below.

"They say they're going to put down clothes lines across where they plant

"I Must Tell You, Crows."

the seeds. You know we just won't go where they do that.

"Last year they said they got so disgusted planting their corn several times over and having us get it each time that they decided to do what their neighbors did.

"They had had their corn planted twice and then had put down lines—lines like clothes lines, I call them, though I don't know what they really are—and you know we do hate that.

"We don't mind scarecrows, but we do mind those things, and it is so hard to have them put down.

"But maybe it will keep them from shooting at us and that is a good point.

"Only one hates to think of being kept from eating anything."

"Caw, caw," said the crows, "such a pity to be kept from eating nicely planted corn."

"Then I heard some one else describing a distance by saying, 'It is only a mile as the crow flies, but it is two miles to walk.'

"That, I believe, is quite an expression. It means that judging from the actual distance, if one could fly, it would be only so far, but people have to go in a round-about fashion very often on account of hills or streams or one thing and another getting in their way.

"That's where we're superior. 'As the crow flies!' It's an important expression and we're important, too.

"They can't always go the direct way we can, and they know it, poor dears. Life isn't altogether hard for a crow, after all."

Not to Be Captured

Around one of the markets, boys congregate with little wagons in which they haul home marketing for various housewives.

One woman stopped a boy and asked, sweetly: "Are you engaged?"

"No, mum," replied the urchin, "I ain't old enough to be engaged."

And then he edged away suspiciously.

Health and Home

THE WOMAN WHO WORKS

In this new order of things, with women, both married and single, broadening their business activities, a very serious problem arises. It is the problem of what, when, and where to eat.

Breakfast is always a hurry-up meal for the men but much more so for the woman who goes to business. Luncheons, of course, are taken in the lunchrooms and restaurants in the business districts and are no problem. But how about dinners? Shall they, too, be restaurant meals or can they be so planned that business women may enjoy the home cooking of which they are so fond? Take away the element of haste and anxiety and in its place put carefully thought-out menus, well planned and easily prepared, and home dinners will again regain their high favor with the working housewife.

One of the big worries is frequently with the milk. Did it come? Is it fresh? Is it frozen? Has the milkman been paid? Are the bottles washed and set out? However, there is no cause for worry about milk. Why not keep a dozen cans of evaporated milk in your pantry? There are large cans, equal to a quart of milk and smaller cans that will meet the lesser needs.

For evaporated milk is just pure, fresh milk with more than half the water missing. This water can be replaced [illegible] if you so desire or you can use cream if rich and creamy is required.

[illegible] that may be [illegible] the "Works" [illegible] if help [illegible] and [illegible]

[illegible]

Buttered crumbs

[illegible] eggs in half and arrange edge of a greased [illegible] tomatoes in center of [illegible] sauce of the milk. Add cheese and [illegible] cheese is well [illegible] over tomatoes and eggs with crumbs and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven.

FAT PRICE HEALTH

VALUE of health may not be reckoned in dollars and cents. Two thousand years ago there was perhaps some excuse for the gastronome, but today there is none. The way to health lies in a balanced diet. Hippocrates, the father of medicine, figured along the same lines back 400 B. C. He expressed the belief that the science of medicine had its beginning in the efforts of men and women to find better and smoother diets.

Diet in the home today is becoming a matter of premier consideration. Women are taking cognizance of those important food elements known as vitamines. They have learned, also, the benefit to the human body of such minerals as iron, calcium and phosphorus.

This knowledge has resulted in the housewife planning her menus with an eye open to dietary values which is the big reason why milk has assumed such a large place in the menu of the American family. Milk contains every structural element for body building. It is an almost perfect food. Despite the best refrigeration facilities, milk will keep sweet only a short time. Millions of American housewives have solved this big problem by using evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk sterilized in cans to achieve keeping qualities and with sixty per cent of the water removed.

Evaporated milk is not the same as condensed milk, although many persons confuse the two. The condensed product is a combination of milk and sugar cane in a two-fifth cane sugar and three-fifth milk proportion. Evaporated milk has nothing but water taken from it and nothing at all added. Sugar is the preservative used in manufacturing the condensed product, while heat only is the preservative for evaporated milk. For this reason the evaporated product may be used in any way in which market milk is used.

In Witnessing for Christ.

I. Saul Preached Christ in Damascus (vv. 19-22).

1. Saul's Fellowship With the Disciples (v. 19).

After Saul was baptised he remained certain days with the believers in Damascus (v. 19). How beautiful to think of the transformation which took place—the one who was so passionately bent on their destruction was now enjoying fellowship with the disciples.

2. Straightway Preaching in the Synagogues (v. 20).

Saul, like every one who is really converted, begins to tell of the newly found Savior. As soon as he is saved he goes to save others. His message concerned the deity of Christ. His doctrinal belief is summed up in six words, "He is the Son of God."

3. The People Amazed (v. 21).

They knew that the very one who had been the ringleader in persecuting the Christians in Jerusalem, and had come to Damascus for the express purpose of bringing them bound to the chief priests, was now passionately advocating that which he had so vehemently sought to destroy. When a man is saved there ought to be such a change as to cause the people to notice it.

4. The Jews Confounded (v. 22).

Saul retired into Arabia for three years. During this time he was taught the full truths of his ministry (Gal. 1:17-18). Saul increased in spiritual strength and confounded the Jews, proving that Jesus was not only the Son of God, but their Messiah.

II. Saul Escapes From the Jews (vv. 23-25).

He used the Scriptures with such skill that the Jews could not answer him. Finding that the argument was against them, the Jews took counsel how they might destroy Saul. So intent were they upon killing him that they watched the gates of the city day and night that they might take him. When this became known to the disciples, they let him down at night in a basket by the wall.

III. Saul Visits Jerusalem (vv. [illegible]).

This journey to Jerusalem was in strange contrast with the one from Jerusalem to Damascus. The one was as a leader of an important expedition under the authority of the Jewish officers with the prospect of a place of distinction in the council of the Jewish nation. Now he is an outcast, disowned by his countrymen, and fleeing for his life. These are the outward circumstances, but he knows the fellowship of the Lord Jesus whom he once hated.

1. Suspected by the Disciples (v. 20).

The believers at Jerusalem had not heard fully about [illegible]. They knew nothing [illegible] Arabia, and [illegible] at Damascus after [illegible] therefore they regarded him [illegible] "Part of the penalty of wrong-doing is the difficulty of restoring it in the good opinion of honorable men."

2. Barnabas's Confidence in Saul (v. 27).

Barnabas was a man filled with the Holy Spirit (Acts 11:24) and therefore able to discern the sincerity of Saul's conversion. He was in reality a "son of consolation" and here showed his kind spirit.

3. Saul in Fellowship With the Disciples (v. 28).

He was not content merely to visit with the brethren. He spoke boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

IV. Saul Sent to Tarsus (v. 30).

A [illegible] at Jerusalem sought to kill Saul. When the [illegible] of it they sent him to Tarsus. Saul still was in danger [illegible] except among the Gentiles. [illegible] back to the place of his birth and lost [illegible] for many years in his home. Saul's conversion was typical of the [illegible] of the Jewish nation. [illegible] Him as [illegible] will go forth as a witness to the Gentiles.

Time and Eternity

When we think of this life and the life which is to come, we should give it a serious consideration. If we fail to make the necessary preparation in this life we will miss eternal life after death. The rich man wanted to make a change but it was too late as the opportunity had been offered him in this life and he failed to accept it. There is no hope nor promise after death to be found in God's promise unless we accept while here on earth.

It would be a mighty good thing if every body would study the bible and then practie its teaching. Search the Scriptures for they are the only way to be guided through life to an eternal home. Don't be deceived by reading literature put but to deceive you and the very Elect, it were possible.

Read the bible without literature and you will undestand it.

One hundred dollars a year is the value of the average housewife's services in the home, and statistics show there are 20,700,000 women engaged in housework, according to Mrs. Leonora Z. Meder, prominent Chicago woman lawyer and economist.

Leonora Z. Meder.

"The wife," said Mrs. Meder, who was formerly comanissioner of public welfare of Chicago, "is an executive, purchasing agent, budget expert, and producer rolled into one. The successful home maker studies food values. She arranges her budget so that the food she buys will have all the necessary body building qualities.

"The woman who would keep down her food bill will do better to spend her money on milk and green vegetables than on butter, though butter is one of the best sources of the essential food element, vitamin A. There are butter substitutes, but nothing can take the place of milk and vegetables.

"Milk, food experts say, is the most nearly perfect food. Science solved the problem by inventing evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk sterilized in cans and with sixty per cent of the water removed. Because evaporated milk is of double the richness of ordinary market milk, housewives dilute it half and half with water for cooking purposes. Keeping longer than ordinary milk, there is no waste from souring. Then, too, it is cheaper.

"Savings also can be made on meat. Cheaper portions of beef skillfully cooked are highly nutritious and often better tasting than portions which cost more. The shoulder, breast and new meat of lamb are excellent. Pork shoulders, feet, tails, heart, spareribs and hocks are in the same category."

FOR WORKING PEOPLE

It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vim and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by

FARMS AND TOWN GET ACQUAINTED AT STATE FAIRS

Alabama State Project Will Be Great Educational Clearing House, Pres. Brown Says

"What is the Alabama State Fair?" That question is answered by R. A. Brown, president of the Alabama State Fair Association, at Birmingham, as follows:

"The Alabama State Fair is an educational clearing house. It is an agricultural and industrial institute for residents of both town and country. It is a short course in better farming and better living. It is a physical demonstration of why the man who farms with his head instead of with his hands must inevitably succeed.

"The State Fair is a comprehensive exhibition of what the ambitious boy or girl may achieve in agriculture, livestock raising, dairying, horticultural, home gardening, domestic science or household economy. It is an exposition of the marvelous improvement in farm machinery and agricultural implements. It is an object lesson in the great part which improved machinery plays in the development and cultivation of the farm and the increased prosperity of the farmer.

Is Real Demonstrator

"The chief educational value of the Alabama State Fair lies in the fact that it is demonstrative in character. The eye is a more convincing instructor than the ear. We are slow to accept and believe in any new method until we have had an optical proof of its superiority over the old.

"Often it is difficult to secure the attention of the busy man or woman long enough to give such a demonstration. Not infrequently it happens that farmers who would be most benefited by better methods of farming are not sufficiently interested to be present at any special meeting called for the purpose of discussing the subject.

"But the Alabama State Fair appeals to that trait of mankind which demands entertainment and amusement and becomes a common forum for the discussion of all matters having to do with agriculture, industry, the home and the school.

"In this clearing house of education the farmer learns what the manufacturer, the merchant and the banker are and have been doing to make his labor less arduous and his farm more profitable and the town resident learns what rapid progress is being made in agriculture. A bond of common interest is created which means much to both town and country.

"The farmer learns by actual observation of the newest devices and improvements in agricultural implements. He learns their use and benefits. He learns in what way they assist in soil cultivation, in plant growth, in sowing, in harvesting, in threshing. He learns the economic value of the more modern machinery, of the silo, of motor power on the farm.

Sees Farm Lands

"Through the Alabama State Fair the urban dweller is furnished a vivid picture of the agricultural resources of the community. He learns about the fertility of the soil in the vicinity; of what is being done to increase the farm yield; to improve the quality of the stock, and to multiply the total dairy product.

"Every man and woman, whether town or country resident, is brought into closer touch with the home life of others. All imbibe that broader education which means co-operation—that ideal education which is service to self and all humanity."

You'll find prize chickens in the Poultry Building at the Alabama State Fair at Birmingham.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE BIRDS' MEETING

The birds met in the lilac tree for the meeting which was to be held there. First of all they had a banquet of suet and then they talked and chattered and chatted.

"I think we should do something about it," said little Mr. Chickadee.

"We should," said Mr. Nuthatch, "but the point is, what shall we do?"

"What Shall We Do?"

"We will ration them," said Mr. Chickadee. "Yes, we will have to ration them."

"What in the world or in the air does that mean?" asked Mr. Nuthatch.

"That means," explained Mr. Chickadee, "that we will give them just so much of our singing and no more. We will put them on song rations instead of food rations. Instead of allowing them so much food we will allow them so much song.

"It has got to the point where we must do something. We can't let things go on without really doing something."

All the birds agreed to that.

"You see," Mr. Chickadee said, there used to be the saying 'A little bird told me.'

"Whenever anyone knew a secret and someone said, 'How did you know that secret?' the first person would answer by saying:

"'A little bird told me.'

"That meant so much! That meant such an interesting secret, something heard in such a mysterious, wonderful way that they always said that it was a little bird who told them.

"That was such a sweet, such a pretty expression. We birds always liked it.

"But now they are always talking about what they can hear over the air by radio. They tell of the things they can hear from far-away points.

"And it seems unfair.

"It seems as though they'd forget the little birds who whisper secrets through the air or who are to be spoken of when secrets are learned.

"It seems as though they were growing careless about their memories.

"They seem to be forgetting that we lived in the air and whispered in the air and sang in the air long before they had their radios.

"We flew, too, long before they had their airplanes. They shouldn't forget the birds who give their music quite free.

"They shouldn't forget the birds who've been singing for them all these years without sets, without any fuss at all.

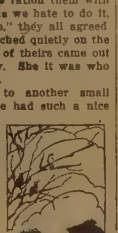
"They shouldn't give up that nice little saying about 'A little bird told me.' Dear me, it would be just too dreadful if they changed it and said, 'A little radio told me.'"

"That would be just too dreadful," the birds all agreed.

"We shall have to ration them with our singing, much as we hate to do it, just to punish them," they all agreed.

Then, as they perched quietly on the tree, a little friend of theirs came out of the house nearby. She it was who gave them the suet.

"Oh," she said to another small friend of hers, 'I've had such a nice birthday. I've loved my spring jonquils and lovely poems and presents. I've been just as happy as could be. Only the birds don't seem to be singing quite so much. Last year they gave me a regular concert."



"I Knew They Would Sing."

The birds nudged each other with their feathered wings.

"We needn't worry," they whispered. "We still have our loyal friends. We must never be disloyal. We're still loved."

Then they sang, and other birds came around and sang too.

"Ah," said the little girl, "my birthday is perfect now. Listen to those darling little birds singing. I knew they would sing in honor of the springtime and of my birthday. I just knew they would."

And every little bird sang and chirped and made merry in honor of her birthday.

Decrease in Work Horses and Mules Is Alarming

According to the figures released by the United States Department of Agriculture, the decrease in work horses and mules is going on at an alarming rate. The animals that are now supplying the demand are around seven years of age.

It does not cost much to raise a good colt. The work lost by not being able to use the mare is small as compared with the price that will be paid for a good colt. By beginning now one will be prepared when the price is at its highest peak. There will always be a demand for good horses.

By breeding the mare to the best draft stallion in the community, one will further enhance his chances for success. The fee may be a little higher, but it will pay in the long run. Remember that the law of heredity is: "Like begets like."

Lesson for May 10

PHILIP AND THE ETHIOPIAN TREASURER

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:26-39.

GOLDEN TEXT—"The entrance of Thy words giveth light."—Ps. 119:130.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Did What God Told Him.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Philip and the Ethiopian Treasurer.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Philip Won the Ethiopian.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Use of the Bible in Evangelism.

I. Philip Meeting the Ethiopian (vv. 26-28).

II. Philip Having Work by Divine Direction (v. 29).

The Lord called Philip away from a great work in Samaria and specifically directed him to this man. Abrahamlike, he obeyed the divine command not knowing why he should leave the work in Samaria and go into a desert place. As he journeyed on by faith he espied the state chariot of the Ethiopian treasurer. The Spirit of God directed him to go near and join himself to the chariot. The tactful question put to the treasurer gained him a seat by the side of this dignified officer. The mission which at first seemed so unpromising was now clear.

2. An Officer of State Seeking the Way of Salvation (vv. 27-28).

The Ethiopian had been to Jerusalem to worship. Despite his high official position he was not ashamed of the worship of God. The journey from that far off country required much hardship and expense, but to the one whose soul yearns after God, this is all joy.

3. A Providential Meeting in the Desert (vv. 29-30).

The coming together of these two men was clearly the predetermined way of God.

II. Philip Preaching to the Ethiopian (vv. 30b-35).

1. The Ethiopian's Employment on the Way (v. 30).

His occupation at the time of this meeting was reading the Word of God. At the invitation of the Ethiopian Philip joined himself to the chariot and found him reading from the 53d chapter of Isaiah. This is a most excellent way to spend one's time while traveling.

2. The Absolute Need of a Preacher (v. 31).

The Ethiopian was reading one of the clearest testimonies to the Messiah in the Old Testament, yet he was unable to get anything out of it. The fact that the Ethiopian, a great statesman, needed an interpreter of the Scriptures, even such a plain passage as the 53d chapter of Isaiah, shows the absolute need of a preacher. The gospel must be experienced before one can be a witness to its saving power. The human mind is blind to spiritual things, making the work of an evangelist indispensable. If a statesman of this rank was unable to grasp the meaning of such a clear passage, it should not be thought strange that for the rank and file of men a guide is needed. God has designed that through the foolishness of preaching the world should be saved. Preaching the Word of God will always be necessary.

3. Philip's Message (vv. 32-35).

He began at the Scriptures which the Ethiopian was reading and preached unto him Jesus. This shows us that the person represented in the 53d chapter of Isaiah as suffering instead of others was Jesus instead of Israel, also that the central theme of the preacher's message should be Jesus. He did not preach Jesus as a great teacher, but as a Savior who had suffered and died instead of sinners. He preached Him as the one who had offered Himself as a ransom.

III. Philip Baptized the Ethiopian (vv. 36-38).

As a result of Philip's preaching the eunuch proposed baptism. When Christ is truly preached, men naturally desire to confess Him in baptism. Where this feeling is lacking, the gospel in its fullness is evidently not preached. The Ethiopian might have offered many excuses for neglecting this important ordinance, but like every man who is honest before God, he was willing at any cost to render obedience. The proof that men really believe in Jesus is their willingness to render obedience to His Word. It is faith in Christ that saves, but those who have genuine faith desire to seal it in baptism. Having secured from the Ethiopian the proper confession, Philip baptized him.

IV. The Ethiopian Rejoicing (v. 39).

Confession of Christ always brings joy. Those who obey the commandment of the Lord can go on their way rejoicing.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

JOLLY JERBOA

"I am the Jolly Jerboa, I am," said the Jerboa. "Of course if I should feel sad I'd be the Sad Jerboa, but I feel merry and gay and jolly so I call myself the Jolly Jerboa.

"I heard you were coming to see me, Billie Brownie. I'm sure I'd like to have a jumping match with you."

"Well, that's hardly a compliment," said Billie Brownie, "for it means that you would like to get away from me. You can jump so quickly and get so far."

"Dear me, dear me," said the Jerboa, "I did put my foot into it, as the saying is.

"I didn't mean to at all. I wonder why it is that they speak of putting a foot into a thing when a person makes a break.

"Now I didn't put my foot into anything then. I simply said something which sounded a little tactless and rude and which I really didn't mean.

"But the saying always is that one puts one's foot into a thing."

"I suppose," said Billie Brownie, "it means that a person spills something

"My Tail Is Very Long."

over—a mistake or a tactless speech just as though one put one's foot into a mud puddle.

"Still it is rather a foolish expression. Sometimes it means that a person had stepped into something which would have been better not noticed at all and they speak of putting a foot in as though they knew they would have been better off if they had kept quite clear of it all.

"Sometimes they mean they have stepped into a thing with conversation and sometimes with just a little action.

"Pray do continue chatting, however," said Billie Brownie. "I do not think you meant you would like to jump away from me. I know you'd like to chat and you simply spoke of a jumping match because to you a jumping match would be such fun."

"Oh, that's the very thing I meant," said the Jerboa. "I do think you're very sensible.

"Some creatures would have got mad and then I would have felt upset, and they would have, too—all because of a silly mistake.

"It's so nice to be sensible and not be too sensitive.

"Now let me see, I was going to tell you a little about myself. I am the smallest of all jumping animals.

"I have very long legs as you see, and my tail is very long, too.

"In fact, when the Jerboa family were setting the tail style for all of us they decided it was best to wear them long.

"You know with people styles change. They look different at different times.

"When you see a picture album of any family, I've heard that there is always great laughter and that they say, for example:

"'Oh, don't you look funny in that big hat. I remember when hats were worn just that shape.'

"But should a Jerboa ever keep a family album of Jerboa pictures the style would never change and we'd never look at all queer and amusing to our grandchildren.

"We haven't started a family photograph album as yet, but it is as well to keep the same styles.

"Then we thought we'd be generous with tails and legs—or feet, if you'd rather call them all feet.

"The family said:

"'While we're having tails, let's have good ones.' So we did.

"I've a queer, huddled-up little body, and I can squeal as well as any mouse.

"Oh, I forgot to tell you that we're members of the Egyptian Mouse family.

"It's an old family—it is. We're proud of it.

"We don't jump from nervousness, but from pride. We just jump and jump with delight.

"We can jump ten times further than the length of our own body.

"I bet no boy or girl could do that.

"Oh well, that's one of the things that makes me so jolly. I'm such a good jumper.

"Must you be going? Well, I'm glad you called, as the saying is.

"I'm getting quite used to these sayings!"

"Good-by, and a thank-you," said Billie Brownie.

40 Million Dollars Saved to Shippers by Better and Quicker Freight Service

The graphic chart above tells a most interesting economic story. The increasing by 50% of the average number of miles traveled daily by freight cars on American railroads, saves to American shippers the immense sum of forty million dollars in interest charges.

The L. & N. by substantially speeding up its daily car movements, has not only helped its patrons to save considerable interest charges on stocks in transit, but it has saved shippers more than $30,000,000 in freight charges, by reduced rates, since the high level established by the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1920.

It is estimated that the average value of commodities in transit at any given time is two billion dollars. The annual interest rate at 6% on this amount of capital is one hundred and twenty million dollars, so that a reduction of one-third in the average length of time this money is tied up amounts to forty million dollars.

These startling figures furnish another example of the greatly increased efficiency of operation on the part of the steam carriers of the United States.

Farm Hints

Fat pocket gophers cause leaner pocketbooks.

The well-fed, well-housed hen certainly knows her eggs.

Now is a good time to begin planning for next year's garden.

The feeding value of sorghum grains is about 90 per cent that of corn.

The chief cause of ropy milk is bacterial growth on utensils. The remedy is careful scalding.

Potato storage should be dark, and arranged so that it can be ventilated during warm days.

Cabbage is rich in the green material needed by laying hens. About six pounds of cabbage may be fed per hundred birds per day.

A strong ram given one liberal grain feed daily, water to drink and with his fleece lightened or off will finish the season in good condition.

Lesson for May 3

THE BENEFITS OF TOTAL ABSTINENCE

LESSON TEXT—Dan. 1:1-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank."—Dan. 1:8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Four Sensible Boys.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Benefits of Total Abstinence.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Sound Mind and a Sound Body.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Some Benefits of Total Abstinence.

I. Daniel and His Companions in Captivity in Babylon (vv. 1-4).

They were carried away to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar in the first siege of Jerusalem. At the command of the king certain choice young men, including the seed of the king and of the princes, were carried away that they might be made skillful in wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, understanding science so that they might be trained to stand in the king's palace.

II. The Trial of Daniel and His Companions (vv. 5-17).

1. Their Conscience Tested (v. 5).

By the appointment of the king, a daily portion of the king's meat and of the wine which he drank was arranged for them. This was contrary to the custom among the godly Jews. Being contrary to the Jewish customs, they could not conscientiously partake of them. It should ever be borne in mind that conscience is the groundwork of human character.

2. Their Change of Name (vv. 6-7).

Among the Hebrews most significant names were given to children. Daniel means, "God is my judge." The significance of this name was that all the problems of life were submitted to God for His decision. God was made the arbiter of his life. This was the secret of Daniel's life. No doubt this expresses the purpose of his parents in giving him the name. His name was changed to Belteshazzar meaning "Bel's prince," the one whom the chief god of the Babylonians favors. Hananiah means "gift of" or "beloved of Jehovah," and his name was changed to Shadrach which signifies, "Illumined by the sun god, Rak." Mishael means, "who is as God" and his name was changed to Meshach meaning "who is like the goddess Shesach, the gentle one." Azariah means, "Jehovah is our help," and was changed to Abednego which means, "the servant of Nego." Back of the change of names was the attempt of Satan to wipe out the name of the true God, and have these young men lose their separation and thus become assimilated among the heathen.

3. Their Religious Life (v. 8).

This involved their refusal to eat meat and to drink wine which was contrary to their teaching. In the case of Daniel, at least, it also involved praying three times a day.

4. Their Courtesy (vv. 8-15).

Daniel seems to have been the spokesman for the company. Although Daniel's heart was fixed, he did not forget to be a gentleman. He requested to be excused from this meat and drink in order that he be not defiled. Christians should learn from this to be courteous even in times of great trials. God had brought Daniel into favor and tender love with those who were over him.

III. The Success of Daniel and His Companions (vv. 14-21).

1. Their Physical Health (vv. 14-16).

A test was made for ten days, and it was shown that they were fairer in countenance and fatter in flesh than those who indulged in the king's meat. Godly and temperate living pays. It is obligatory upon God's children today to conscientiously abstain from that which is contrary to His law. It means total abstinence from intoxicating liquors, and everything which would injure the health.

2. Mental Growth (vv. 17-20).

Daniel and his companions were found to be ten times superior to their comrades in matters of wisdom and understanding. It is always true that those who abstain from indulging in the use of strong drink have clearer minds and are mentally better equipped for their work than those who indulge.

3. The Social and Political Preferment (v. 19).

They stood before the king.

4. Their Temporal Influence (v. 21).

They were all advanced to positions of influence and Daniel became president of the college of wise men, and the prime minister of the nation.

5 Spiritual Insight (v. 17).

Because of Daniel's loyalty to God, visions embracing the entire history of the world came to him and Nebuchadnezzar's dream was revealed.

Do Right

Do right, and God's recompense to you will be the power of doing more right. Give, and God's reward to you will be the spirit of giving more. Withhold from God and the accounting will follow.

Society

Society is a more level surface than we imagine. Wise men or absolute fools are hard to be met with; and there are few giants or dwarfs.—Hazlitt.

HOWDY, FOLK.

In assuming control of The Chilton County News and coming among the good people of this section of the county the new management must share the sentiment and a great many of the emotions possessed by that Prodigal son of biblical history. The writer is a product of our sister county of Coosa, where he spent his barefoot days in the staid old capital of Rockford; but many other days have passed since then; yet we believe we can truly say that not one went by without recording in our mind at least some vagrant thought of the old home, of its splendid people, and little boyhood scenes that never grow old or less sacred to crowded memory. We've met many of the "old boys" since coming to Clanton—all of them doing well as considered in life's struggle, we are glad to see—and we can assure you that it has been a pleasure beyond our feeble method of expression to shake hands with them and renew the old ties. So much for the personal side.

Now, good friends, we are taking charge of The News under no false impression of its present rather imperfect condition—typographically speaking at least. And we say this with all deference in the world to our immediate predecessor, for he has been handicapped by lack of help principally in making the improvements which should have been made in order to keep The News up to the highest possible standard. The writer is bringing with him what is known among printers as a "home force," members of our little family being printers, too. In addition Mr. McCarthy will have charge of the linotype and with this force we will do all in our power, backed by approximately thirty years' experience in newspaper and job printing work to give the people or this territory a real live, readable local paper and prompt and efficient service in our job printing detartment. We have the materials—the type, the presses, the experience, just the same as they have in Birmingham or Montgomery or elsewhere—so why should we not turn out job printing just as satisfactorily as do those ofüces? Old? Worn out? Neighbor, it's not old, as thetime and erpected service of such material is considered by those who understand it. It's "glued up"— "goomed up," as Pat said. And that will constitute the big job of our force for the next week or more—"ungluing it." Properly straightened out, the type faces cleaned, the presses and other machinery cleaned, oiled and adjusted, there is no legitimate reason why we cannot turn out any commercial printing in as neat form and appearance as any other printshop. All we ask along this line is a trial. If we don't please you, the effort shall not cost you a penny. Weare here for your service, and we realize fully that if we donot give that service in a way pleasing to you, we certainly cannot maintain your patronage—nor could we expect it. And the repeat orders are those for which we shall strive.

Concerning the paper, let us say that we intend to improve its appearance and real worth to you along from time to time—we can't do it all at once, for the job is too big and time is too short to accomplish what we have in mind within the brief space of a week or two—or a month, for thatmatter. But we shall be hammering faithfully toward the ultimate end of a local paper of which all may have reason to feel proud—a paper which will meet with a hearty welcome in the homes of the splendid citizenry hereabout who will subscribe for it and read it because of its real merit and because of its genuine interest to them, morally, socially, politically and otherwise; a paper which shall prove of direct benefit to the business man and the professional man in getting his messagges of his wares disseminated atthe smallest consistent cost to him and the largest "coverage" possible. In this connection we are not of that brand known as "cut-throats," in the sense that we will not accept your printing at a rate lower than the cost of production However much we may regret it, or perhaps have reason to feel proud of it, we've never progressed to that point in the "art preaervative" where we might, with any degree of safety, attempt to print ten dollar bills quite as well as our Uncle Samuel; so we are not millionaires.

The Chilton County News is here in your interest, reader, advertiser or job patron, and to ccreate a modicum of life's necessities for its publisher. We are here just as the merchant, the lawyer, the garage man is here—to make an honest living from an honest effort, to serve the public in a satisfactory way and if we remain in business we must necessarily receive a reasonable profit for that effort. No ust man would deny us or begrudge us that right and pprivilege. In saying this please do not conceive the idea that your printing will cost you more at The News office than elsewhere. Not by any means. On the other hand we are in position to do this work for you at probably a lower cost, certainly than the big gcity shops can do it because of lower living expenses here, lower overhead cost, lower office expense because of the "home force" mentioned ppreviously.

Now friends, offering you the service outlined, cannot we hope for adn are we not justified in soliciting your co-operation? For, ater all, regardless of the product which we may tender you, if we fail to obtain your co operation, our efforts will prove in vain. We earnestly invite your help your patronage, a commendable word for us among your neighbors or business associates wherever and whenever convenient, with the thorough understanding that we shall render "value received" for every dollar spent with us, not only, but that The News shall always be found fighting for the moral and material upbuilding of our beautiful little city, county and state—which includes every man, woman and child within its borders. We want you to be our friends indeed, and w will do everything possible to crystalize and maintain that friendship.

Of course, The News will continue in the advocacy of true democratic principles as understood by its editor. We come to serve you with no axe to grind, no enemies to punish, but with an honest political principle, zealous in its desires, yet charitable enough at least, to grant an equal prpivileg to a conscientious opponent. Abov all do we detest the poicy of the weak kneed straddler—the man burdened with an honest conviction, but who is afraid to let it be known.

The News needs a number of good correspondents over Chilton. Give the world the happenings of your community; it will interest more people than you might think. Verbena, Thorsby, Calera, Jemison, Mountaain Creek, Billingsly and many others should be represented in every issue of The News. Sign your name to every communication without exception. We will not print your name unless requested; but we must know who does the writing for our own protection as well a yours.

Now, friends, the latch string of The News hangs on the outside. Come to see us—let's get acquainted. You will always find a welcome here, whether as a prospective patron or a social visitor.

Yours to serve,

JOHN T. THORNTON.

It has become a proposition too costly to the average dairyman in the Birmingham district to rcontinue to dairy alone on his high priced holdings. Prices of land suitable for such purposes in that district have soared, and many of the dairymen are now hunting locations outside that high priced area, so that they may sell there at a nice profit and re-invest in lower priced lands nearby— lands suitable for either cultivation or pasturage And right there is where the Chilton county territory "shines." We should by all means now be onto the job of letting those progressive people know of the advantages this territory offers. We have the fertile soils, not only, but the shippingg facilities above the average. Then,too, dairymen generally provide themselves with trucks for carting their produce and in this case they would have the advantage of one of the finest state highways anywher over which to reach the capital city Montgomery on the south or the Magic city, Birminghan, on the north It is a proposition well worth investigation by those who have suitabl acreage for sale.

The average editor couldn't very well explain the difference between a bull-tongue scooter and a hay mower but it doesn't require an extra amount of intelligence to know that our farmers—most of 'em, at leart—do not raise all their requirements in feedstuffs and foodstuffs on their land. Which reminds us: Don't forget to put in that extra acreage of oats this year.

In the mad race for the dollar, in order to 'get there" before the other fellow did, Birmingham stacked up the enenviable list of forty-one deaths and an unknown injured list last year with automobiles as the vehicl of destruction. This is said to be the higher death record changed against the city of equal size in the country. So far as The News can see it, this record in the main was establish by and through speed with its constant coworker, neglect. For if speed were eliminated from any bearing in the matter, it is only too apparent that there would have been few, if any, deaths.

The Democratic county executiv committee will meet here in the Wilson hotel on next Tuesday, and a full attendance is urged. Business of considerable importance will come before the body for settlement at this time, and every beat should by all means be represented. There are thirty-two men and two ladies on the committee, two men from each of the 16 beats ofthe county, and it is hoped to place representatives of the female vote at each beat also on it. Lay aside home duties for the day, and come with determination to give your party t much time at least. Don't let it l said afterward that you neglected th patriotic duty. Come—rain or shine.

The News regrets the necessity of asking pardon, or making excuses. But we must do it this week, the first one with the new management, for any short-comings in the paper. "The greatest fault is to be conscious of none," said Thomas Carlyle; and so long as we remain human, we must admit our faults, or imperfect state We hope to make noticeable improvements as early as possible, and we trust our friends will bear with us until w have had the opportunity required.

Will Rogers, the writer-comedian i said to be the highest paid writer o his particular kind of literature in captivity, has his life insured for $900,000 the premium on which amounts to $10p per day. Bet he don't get as much fun out of it, however, as we do in "scribing" for The News.

"Palindrome?" Yeah; that's one o those back-firing sentences, spells an reads the same either way, so here' one you might try next on yourubicle and said to have been the old man' original introduction: "Madam, I'a Adam." Or, this one of more modern design: "Able was I ere I saw Elba.

Write the news of your section for publication in The News. Some youn gentleman or lady would find it a mos pleasant ,pasttime, aand your friend would be tickled pink to have yo take up the work regularly. Let u hear from you when we will send yo all necessary stationery.

Here's wishing every reader of The News the very choicest of blessings for the New Year, and may the entire year be filled with an abundance of good fortune for you and yours a will prove a record breaker in you life thus far lived.

The News would thank the boys o the weekly press who receive a copy o this week's issue and whose paper i not now on our exchange list, to plac The News on their mailing list, and le us have your paper regularly.

Govern your garden planting accordingly, all ye believers in the "signs." Last quarter of the moon on the 7th new moon on the 14th; first quarter on the 20th, and full on the 28th.

HOLIDAY

No holiday in all our calanda: is comparable to Christmas There is none quite like it anywhere in the world. It celebrates no battle, no fall of a Bastile, no bank or business holiday, no political revolution, no church ritual. It is the great holiday of common people who thank God for his Son who died for the world. We are not celebrating Washington or Columbus or the Declaration of Independence, but just the Savior of the world.

FIDDLER'S CONTEST

Fiddler's contest at Maplesville high school auditorium December 26, 7:00 p. m. Prizes awarded to best dancers and fiddlers. Admission 20c and 35c.

Rev. Deason called in Saturday and spent some time with us. Mr. Deason is an old resident of Chilton County and is quite interesting in his talk.

Remember to gve thanks to Him whose birthday we celebrate. Shall we honor it in a way that would be well pleasing to him, or shall we spend it in a disgraceful way to ourselves and to Him? This is a time we should not forget, but always hold in reverence to our Savior who die dfor us. Through Him we have to be brought to a higher and better life if we expect to reach the reward laid up for the final faithful in that great day. On the 25th think on your way and see which side you are on. There is only one way and we all must travel that way or take the broad way to destruction. Begin on the 25th and set an example for your friends to follow while living here and to follow after you are gone.and your living on this earth will be a blessing not only to yourself but to your neighbors and friends also.

Nourishing Drink for Children

BABIES and children, the same as adults, grow weary of being fed the same food in the same way each day. It is true that most children take naturally to milk, but that does not mean that they must be fed it ad nauseam. On the contrary, that is the very thing to be avoided.

Pediatricians advise consumption by children of a quart of milk a day in one form or another. This does not mean skim milk, but whole milk, for the skimmed product is lacking both in butter fat and the essential food element known as vitamin A, which is found in butter fat. Many mothers do not appreciate that removal of cream from the top of a bottle of milk results in skim milk.

In evaporated milk, a product recommended by many leading doctors for the use of infants and children and which is simply pure cow's milk sterilized in cans and with sixty per cent of the water removed, there is no cream line. The milk in the top of a can is the same as it is in the bottom of the container. This results from a process called homogenization, in which the fat globules in the milk are broken up into such microscopic bits that they remain in homogeneous suspension. Every drop of homogenized milk has a buttery taste because it contains butter fat. For this reason, in evaporated milk, there is none of the flat taste one finds in drinking from the bottom of a bottle of market milk.

In order to avoid feeding the baby or child plain milk three or four times a day, many authorities recommend the use of a mixture of fruit juice and milk, a highly palatable and refreshing drink.

Following is a recipe worked out by experts for an orange-milk drink: Mix in a fruit jar ⅞ of a cupful of orange juice, ¼ of a cupful of evaporated milk, three teaspoonfuls of sugar, ½ teaspoonful of lemon juice and a few grains of salt. Shake well before serving.

Make Cows Comfortable During Severe Weather

Dairy cows should be kept indoors whenever there is danger of frost at night. Farmers who keep dairy herd records and weigh the milk night and morning know that when their cows are out at night, and there is a frost—even a light frost—they will go down from one to two pounds in their milk in the morning.

Cold rains that come in the fall, and early snowstorms, are extremely costly when dairy cows are exposed to them. Keep the cows in the barn at night when the weather gets at all cold.

Straw is plentiful and cheap. Use plenty of bedding. Make the cows comfortable.

Old Tire Tubes Useful

Hardly anything is more useful than an old tire tube. Circular strips cut off make strong rubber bands; sections slipped over bottles protect from breaking; pieces can be used to prevent scarring of finished surfaces; it makes a perfect waterproof covering for the auto coil, and so on. Think of it when needing insulation or waterproofing.

Permanent Tame Pasture Returns Most Net Money

We have been finding out lately that permanent tame pastures return more net money than most of the acres that are cropped.

Alfalfa is the most permanent if the grasses are kept out. If one wants to treat it as a cush crop, it is good for around $30 a year counting on three tons of $20 hay.

The acreage of alfalfa in some sections has increased a thousand per cent in the last year. Some of the store-box gentry allow that in a year or two alfalfa hay won't be worth cutting. It was ever thus. One banker made a pretty apt reply to this objection when he said:

"Well, sir, maybe alfalfa will be cheap enough then so you can afford to feed it to your cows."

Making long-time investments such as growing alfalfa is generally a mark of shrewdness.

Coniferous Trees Good as Farm Crop

Have Assured Market for Lumber or Pulpwood.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Profitable crops may be obtained from the poorer areas on many farms by planting coniferous trees. Even in small sizes the conifers may be sold at a profit as Christmas trees, and in the large sizes they have an assured market for lumber or pulpwood. As a class they promise earlier and larger money returns to the farmer than other kinds of trees. Conifers are also very effective as windbreaks. And although they grow best on rich, deep, well-drained soils, some species of conifers—the pines in particular—will ordinarily take hold better than hardwoods on poor soils such as worn-out fields or pastures, sandy areas, cut-over woodlands and areas with shallow soil.

Information on how to obtain trees for planting, as well as complete instructions for producing home-grown seedlings, for planting them, and for caring for the plantation, are given in Farmers' Bulletin 1453, just issued by the Department of Agriculture under the title, "Growing and Planting Trees on the Farm."

Eighteen states listed in the bulletin now operate nurseries or provide in some other way for distributing tree seedlings for planting. These states usually furnish the seedlings at cost or free. Good planting stock can also be obtained from commercial dealers.

With the possible exception of two or three species of hardwoods, nearly twice as much saw-log timber can be taken from a fully stocked merchantable stand of conifers as from a similar stand of hardwoods. Conifers can be matured in greater numbers per acre, and their straight, unbranched trunks yield more saw logs. In general, therefore, for timber production, conifers are the best choice for farm planting.

Grow Christmas Trees for Money

Not. Felt That Business Is Menace to the Country's Timber Supply.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Christmas-tree crops, raised on plots especially set aside for the growing of evergreens, seems to be a coming business, say forestry officials of the United States Department of Agriculture. Although federal foresters do not feel that the use of Christmas trees is either a menace to the country's timber supply or incompatible with forest conservation, they point out that the practice of growing small evergreens especially for the Christmas trade is far better than cutting them in an indiscriminate manner.

Prices Increased

In 1924 spruce and fir trees commonly sold for $1 to $3 and more on the streets of the large eastern cities. Retail prices have increased several hundred per cent in the last 15 or 20 years and high prices are likely to prevail in the future. Growing Christmas trees in plantations near large consuming centers is beginning to look like an attractive business. This is particularly true for centers in the eastern and middle western states, which are rather distant from a natural source of supply. Several such plantations are already in existence from which trees have been sold at prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.50 each. In a plantation adjacent to a main road it seems probable that the trees could be sold right on the ground to people passing in automobiles.

Most Desired Trees.

Spruces and firs, where they can be grown, are the logical choice for planting, because they are the most desired as Christmas trees and command the highest prices. Since the trees will be grown only for from five to eight years after they are set out, they can be planted at the rate of 5,000 to the acre.

It is doubtful, says the department, whether Christmas-tree plantations would at present yield satisfactory financial returns in the South and the Far West because of the abundant supply of small evergreens found in the forests of those locali-

Brood-Rearing Is Big Honey Factor

Amount of Honey Depends on Number of Bees That Are of Proper Age.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The quantity of nectar gathered by a colony of honey bees does not depend merely on the number of bees in the colony during the honey flow, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It depends, rather, upon the number of bees that are of the proper age to serve as nectar gatherers when the honey flow opens.

Since normally a worker bee, before going to the field, spends the first two or three weeks of its life in duties within the hive, most of the bees should emerge from the brood cells about three weeks in advance of the main honey flow, in order to have the largest possible number of field bees ready at the proper moment. In other words, the queen should reach her maximum egg-laying rate during the period six weeks prior to the honey flow.

Maximum Honey Crop.

Since a colony left to itself does not usually bring forth the new worker bees at the most advantageous time, a correct understanding of the principles governing brood rearing throughout the year becomes of prime importance to the beekeeper, if he is to handle his colonies in such a way as to secure a maximum honey crop. The principles are discussed in Department Bulletin No. 1349, prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture after an intensive study of the brood-rearing cycle of the honey bee.

Lack of knowledge of the principles governing brood rearing may cause a reduction in the honey crop by bringing about in a colony any or all of the three following possibilities:

(1) The population of the colony may not become large enough to provide sufficient field bees during nectar flows to gather surplus adequate to give the beekeeper a fair return for the time spent and capital invested.

(2) Surplus honey may be consumed in regions of early nectar flows by bees which have emerged too late to serve as nectar gatherers, and too early to winter over or even assist in building up the colony for the winter.

(3) Swarming may be stimulated if the ratio between hive bees and field bees does not remain such as will avoid causing a congestion within the hive whenever one of these classes is relatively idle while the other is extremely busy.

The prevention of any or all of these states involves such questions as wintering, stores for spring, requeening, population of the colony at the beginning of brood rearing, swarm control, dequeening, removal of brood and other related factors.

Important Factors.

Among some of the important factors which are within the power of the beekeeper to provide are a prolific queen, sufficient bees wintered over to meet all brood-rearing requirements in the spring, sufficient worker brood cells, sufficient stores of good honey, and proper insulation. All of these are factors which must and can be provided in the manipulations in the latter part of the previous season if the beekeeper wishes to take advantage of the natural tendency toward intense brood-rearing activity at the beginning of spring.

Conditions within the hive making for brood rearing during the period of initial expansion may be likened to a charge of explosives set to go off at a certain moment in the spring, the time depending on weather conditions; in the one case the force of the resulting explosion is definitely predetermined by the quantity of the charge; in the other case the amount of brood reared is definitely predetermined by the provisions made in the preceding season to give the colony the conditions most favorable for the purpose.

A copy of the bulletin, the Brood-Rearing Cycle of the Honey Bee, may be obtained, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Methods of Control of Diseases of Strawberry

The more important diseases of strawberries are described in a recent bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture as Farmers' Bulletin 1458 together with an account of such control methods as are of proved value. The great variety of conditions under which the strawberry is grown necessitates different methods of culture and handling. Methods of control of strawberry diseases must be adapted to local conditions.

Severe attacks of leaf diseases—leaf spot, scorch, and mildew—may be controlled by spraying or dusting. Often, however, frequent renewal of strawberry patches or the use of resistant varieties will serve to keep these diseases in check.

The diseases caused by nematodes may be avoided by planting strawberries in soil which is free from these pests. Infected land may be freed from nematodes by a three-year rotation with immune crops.

Fruit rots may be reduced by proper mulching. Careful handling and adequate refrigeration will greatly lessen the losses from rots which occur after picking.

A copy of the bulletin may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Chemicals Becoming Important for Soil

Commercial Fertilizers Are Meeting With Favor.

Truck growers, nurserymen, and greenhouse men are finding it more and more difficult to obtain the required amount of stable manure, and are wanting to know what can be used as a substitute.

No undue concern over the situation is necessary, explains A. W. Blair, associate soil chemist at the New Jersey agricultural experiment station, for it must be remembered that there is no special virtue in the nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash contained in manure. Indeed, as they exist in manure these constituents are more slowly available than when supplied in the form of commercial fertilizers. The nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash contained in manure may be supplied in the form of commercial fertilizers with much less expense and in a more available condition.

On the other hand, the organic matter equivalent of the manure cannot easily be supplied in the form of commercial fertilizers. In the last analysis it is this organic matter that makes the manure so valuable, but in some cases the price has become almost prohibitive. Experiments in vegetable growing at the Rhode Island experiment station have shown that with 16 tons of manure and about 1,000 to 1,500 pounds of a good commercial fertilizer per acre, the yields of vegetables were equal to the yields obtained when 32 tons of manure alone were used.

In a rotation modified to include rye grass and clover as green manure, the yields of all crops, with 16 tons of manure, compared favorably with those where 32 tons of manure were used in the unmodified rotation. Even when the manure was reduced to 8 tons per acre, in combination with fertilizers, in the modified rotation containing green manures, the yields of beets, spinach, and carrots were maintained.

When comparing stable manure with green manure supplemented with commercial fertilizers, the losses incurred due to the shrinkage and handling of the manure are not to be overlooked.

If in vegetable growing the manure application can be reduced from 32 to 16 tons per acre by the use of green manures supplemented by about 1,000 to 1,500 pounds of commercial fertilizers, why spend the extra $50 or $100 for manure?

Zez Confrey Mixes Salads and Songs

Zez Confrey, famous composer of the musical classic, "The Kitten on the Keys," is hailed by his friends as the most versatile of America's popular song composers. Those who know him say he can mix a salad or a song oddity with equal success, which is saying considerable since his portrayal of the delightful pranks of a certain young feline frisking over the ivories has been recognized as the model of American syncopation.

But Mr. Confrey has other "firsts" in repertoire. His acquaintances declare, for instance, he is a judge of horse flesh, and knows a good cigar.

BUSINESS FOR YOU

There is business for everybody who wants to do business, and the only way to get i to go after it. The time has passed when business comes to you unles you ask for it.

Through the newspapers is the best medium to tell people what you have to sell and also what you want to buy. Ask for business and you will get it. It is here for you. Just as in the case of Ikey.

Ikey had just taken unto himself a wife and had gone to a neighboring town for a brief honeymoon. He put up at a hotel run on the American plan without having a knowledge what that plan meant. In order to economize, according to the true Hebrew characteristic,he slept in the hotel but took his meals at a cheaper hash house near by. At the end of five days he went to pay his bill, and the clerk handed him a slip in detail, with a charge of $10 per day for the room for the two, and $5 per lay for meals.

Ikey studied the bill for a few minutes and protested that he should not be charged with the meals since he had eaten out, the clerk replied that made no difference,the meals were there for him if he wante them and the charge must stand.

Ikey went over to a seat in the corner of the lobby and was busily engaged in figuring for a few minutes before walking back to the desk.

"Well," said the clerk, 'Are you you ready to pay your bill?"

"Yes," replied Ikey, "but first I have a bill for you."

The clerk took it and read: "For holding my wife's han once each day at $5, $25; for kissing my wife once each day at $10, $50."

"But," protested the clerk, "I didn't do that."

"No," Ikey came back, "But it vas er for you."

So is the foundation on which you must build up your business right there for you. If you don't take it you have no kick coming.

DOES VOCATIONAL EDUCATION PAY?

In oder that we may answer the above question there are a few facts relative to the Vocational Agricultural School at Isabella I am giving for the benefit of the County. Mr. Earl Thomas, the Vocational man at this school, has just made his annual report in which the following facts are given. In the first place every boy in his class is required to take some sort of a project. This boy must keep an accurate account of all his expenses charging for each hours work done, all fertilizer purchased and rent for the land, even though it is his fathers land at the end of the year he sells his project whether it be corn, cotton, etc. He even charges 5c per hour for tools. The total expenses or all projects in the community this year, including the salary of the teacher and his traveling expenses are $6,015.15 and the receipts from these projects are $8,350.89. This shows a net gain to the community as a result of Vocational Education of $2,335.74.

This would prove to the nearest of near-sighted that it pay from a purely purely financial point of view regardless of the gain to the boys and girls in later years. Not only that but if we would give more time to such training, this County would soon be one of the leading counties in the state. It is a purely agricultural County and can nev er be anything more. Unfortunately it is the only school of its kind in the County and the only one we can get for the time being but we trust that the above facts will create such an interest in Vocational work that at the very moment it is possible for us to have another one of the kind, that we apply for same.

Not only that, but it shows beyond all doubt that this County ought to have a County Demonstration Agent who is alive and capable of leading our farmers in their work.

It might be interesting also to call your attention to the fact in the Isabella community a number of adult farmers are taking the work and a and a part of the above figures are from their projects.

For fear that this artice will be too long for the Editor, I will, within a few days prepare another telling you of their plans for Home Economics in that school.

Yours for better schools,

B. LAWRENCE
County Supt. Education

A very learned Roman Catholic of this place states that the following signers of the Declaration of Independence were Roman Catholics:: Chas. Carroll, William Whipple Matthew Thornton James Smith George Taylor James Wilson Thos. Nelson,Jr. Edward Rutledge and Thomas Lynch. The "Forum" has stated that ony Chas Carroll was a Roman Catholic. Which is right.

There was only one signer of the Declaration of Independence that was a Roman Catholic, viz, Chas. Carroll. Even socalled Roman Catholic authorities do not claim more than two, as did Mitchell Wiljams, author of "American Catholics in the War" However, as Daniel Carroll, the other name listed by Williams as a Catholic, did not sign the Declaration of Independence, but the Constitution, this historian (?) may be discredited. Grand Lodge records show that Thomas Nelson, Jr., was a Master Mason,as was Edward Rutledge. Possibly the gentleman is in line to rewrite the history of the United Statees a la th Knights of Columbus.

In the August issue of the "The Forum Magazine" I find the following statement: "But the church (Roman) has found that as a matter of disciplin it is on the whole best for the clergy to remain unmarried, although at various times and even today in certain portions of the world, she allows the clergy to marry." Can you tell me where this has happened?

The eastern churches, which are affilliated with Rome, are permitted a married priesthood. Some of these are the Greek Catholic, the Slavonic Catholic, the the Maronite, etc.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE

The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lasy. Neglect of these symptoms might result in a sick spell, therefore the sensible course is to take a dose or two of Herbine. It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vim and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by

I would like to know, if possible,how many or what percent of public school teachers of Chicago are Protestant and how many are Roman Catholic?

A former superintendent of the Chicago public schools states that of the school teachers in the public schools of Chicago, 50 percent are Protestatn 44 percent are Roman Catholic and 6 percent are Jewish. That in the primary grades 82 percent are Roman Catholics.

Can you tell me how many Roman Catholic priests there are in the United States? Aroman Catolic acquaintancesays that there are as many more Protestant preachers according to church members than there are Roman Catholoc priests. Is it right in this continent?

Your question is difficult to answer. Roman Catholics claim more than 18-000,000 members and 22,000 priests, according to their official figures for 1923. This would mean one priest for every 820 members, approximately The Methodists report one minister for every 176 members;the Baptist for every 157; the Presbyterians one for every 178the Episcopalians one for every 188; and the Unitarians one for every 234. From these figures it would seem your acquaintance was right However one should remember that Roman Catholic figures are based on constituents, and not on actual communicants as is the case with Protestant denominations. We therefore have no figures as to what the actual communicants in that church. Again, an item appearing recently in the New York Herald-Tribune leads one to doubt the correctness of the "official figures." The item is as follows: "The International Catholic Truth Society is undertaking to cover the country with books and pamphlets containing Catholic doctrine. 108,000 priests are to be supplied with literature." If these are the correct figures as to the numbe rof priests in the United States, then even granting, the 18,000,000 membership they claim, they would have one priest for approximately 170 members or more priests per member than any of the large denominations except the Baptists. If the actual church membership were known, in all probability it would be shown that there is a priest for every 100 or less.

Eggs Carry Well in Good Packing

Series of Tests Made to Show Efficiency Under Commercial Conditions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The economy of careful packing of eggs has been demonstrated in a series of shipments to test the comparative efficiency under commercial conditions of eight different methods of packing eggs in cases and two methods of buffing the cases in the cars. The eggs carried through to market with comparatively little damage.

The tests were made recently under the auspices of the interrelations committee, representing egg case and filler manufacturers, shippers, railway and express companies and receivers in co-operation with the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

Different Methods.

The eight different methods of packing used were as follows:

1. Standard case, standard fillers and flats, four excelsior pads.
2. Standard case, standard fillers and flats, six excelsior pads.
3. Cut down three-eighths inch less in depth than standard, standard fillers and flats, four excelsior pads.
4. Standard case, standard flats, fillers one-eighth inch deeper than standard, four excelsior pads.
5. Standard case, standard fillers and flats, cup flats top and bottom.
6. Standard case, standard fillers, cup flats throughout.
7. Cut down case, standard fillers, embossed flats, four excelsior pads.
8. Standard case, standard fillers, embossed flats, cup flats top and bottom.

Six different shipments of two cars each were made. The different shipments moved from Enid, Okla., to Boston; from Wichita, Kans., to East St. Louis; from Hutchinson, Kans., to East St. Louis; from Clarinda, Iowa, to Chicago; from Columbus, Neb., to Washington, and from Marion, Ind., to Jersey City. Each car was loaded with an equal number of the eight different packs, one car in each shipment being braced with wood and the other buffed with baled straw or hay. The eggs were packed in the cases by employes of Swift & Co. at their plants located at the various shipping points.

Two cases of each pack, in each car, were thoroughly candled and inspected to determine the number of damaged eggs at shipping point and again at destination in order to ascertain the damage occurring in transit. Impact recording instruments were placed in each car to secure a record of the shocks to which the eggs were subjected during shipment.

Damage in Transit.

The damage occurring during transit was reduced to terms of the average money loss per case. On this basis the results show that for all shipments there was a slight, but hardly significant, advantage in favor of the straw and hay-buffed cars over the wood-braced cars. The average loss in the former was 1.49 cents and in the latter 1.82 cents.

The various packs, all shipments considered, ranked as follows in terms of average money loss per case: Pack 6, 0.94 cent; pack 7, 1.22 cents; pack 2, 1.49 cents; pack 4, 1.55 cents; pack 8, 1.62 cents; pack 5, 1.88 cents; pack, 1, 2.9 cents and pack 3, 2.46 cents.

A mimeographed report entitled "Comparative Efficiency of Various Methods of Packing, Loading and Bracing Eggs" has been issued which describes the tests and gives the data secured in detail. Copies of this report may be obtained on application to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Cover to Protect Grape Vines in Cold Weather

Young grape vines should be pruned as soon as the leaves are off and then covered to protect them from extreme cold weather and drying winds which quite often cause winter killing.

Plants set out last spring are usually pruned heavily, leaving but one cane and this from three to four buds long. These small plants are protected by molding about six inches of dirt over them. Two-year-old plants are cut to one vigorous cane from three to five inches long. If the one-year plants have two or three vigorous canes, they may be pruned the same as the two-year-old vines. Vines older than two years may be pruned to a definite system, the Kniffen system being one of the most popular.

In following this system, the trunk is trained to the upper wire of the trellis. The fruitage cane arises from this trunk. These canes are light in color as compared with the old wood and the bark is smooth. From four to six of these canes are chosen to produce the next year's crop.

Only Two Cases of Chicken Pest

Losses in All Instances Have Been Caused by Common Ailments.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Fear of recurrence of European fowl pest, which appeared in the United States for the first time about a year ago, has caused many poultrymen in the Central West to feel alarmed at any sign of sickness among their birds. Numerous investigations have been made by representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture during the past two months at the request of poultrymen in these states. In all instances the findings have been that the losses, which in a few shipments have been quite heavy, have been caused by some of the common ailments, such as roup, or by dietic disturbances, apparently the result of hardships attending the transportation of birds, aggravated by improper feeding and confinement in insanitary quarters.

Only Two Outbreaks.

Only two outbreaks of fowl pest have occurred since last spring, one in New York and the other in Delaware. In the former state the disease made its appearance about July 1 in a flock of 900 chickens near East Hampton, on Long Island. In the latter state about 200 chickens on a farm near Dover were involved early in August. The usual slaughter and disinfection methods were employed in combating these outbreaks and there has been no subsequent spread.

While the department does not wish to minimize the importance of watchfulness for fowl pest by the poultry raiser, it is desirous of impressing on those engaged in concentrating and distributing poultry the importance of maintaining their plants and equipment in a sanitary condition and improving their feeding practices. Some progress has been made, says the department, but much remains to be done. Many of these common ailments which have worried the poultrymen might largely be avoided by exercising greater care to create sanitary conditions and to adopt approved methods of feeding.

Keep Close Watch.

Veterinary inspectors employed at the department's substations maintained for animal disease and meat inspection work in each of the chicken-raising states are keeping in close touch with the producers, distributers, and slaughterers of poultry. When any unusual losses are reported to the bureau of animal industry of the department, employees experienced in poultry disease work are detailed to investigate. The bureau is prepared to act quickly in the event there should be a recurrence of either fowl pest or infectious bronchitis.

Ration Largely of Corn Not Favored for Sows

Practical feeders and breeders have known for a number of years that brood sows, when fed on a ration composed largely of corn, have not produced thrifty, healthy litters. The young from such animals have been weak, unthrifty and very unsatisfactory in the breeding pen or fattening lot. This can be accounted for due to the fact that corn is rich in carbohydrates and fats and contains but a small quantity of protein and very little ash. On the other hand, brood sows that are fed on corn which was supplemented by high-protein feed stuffs such as tankage and alfalfa hay, farrow strong vigorous young. This is not due solely to the protein feed which is added, but is also due to the fact that these high-protein feeds carry a large percentage of mineral matter or ash. The better informed breeders realize that it is impossible to raise pigs profitably unless their corn ration is supplemented with these high-protein feeds, which provide more mineral matter than they get in their ordinary grain ration. Most swine feeders use mineral feeds with their fattening herd.

A Few Good "Don'ts"

Don't buy securities that are handled by irresponsible persons or unknown firms.

Don't buy mortgage notes on distant property.

Don't buy stock in new enterprises.

Don't try to work the stock market. If the public were to win, professional operators would soon shut up shop and quit.

Don't buy stock in mines you know nothing about. Many mines are holes where fools dump their money.

Don't buy oil stock.

Don't buy stock in new [illegible] schemes.

Don't buy real estate unless you have seen it. It may be a swamp

Don't buy from one who says, "Invest now or it will be too late."

Don't buy from one who says, "The price will soon be raised."

Don't buy from one who offers you a discount for cash.

Don't buy anything on "tips."

Have nothing to do with the "bucket shop."

Don't speculate. A rich man can afford to, but you can't.

A splendid rule is, before you buy a security take it to a conservative and disinterested banker and ask him how much he will lend on it alone as security.—Banker-Farmer.

Lime Quite Useful on Any Acid Soil

Judicious Use to Be Favored Where Manure Is Scarce.

Do not get the idea that you can safely stop using lime just because the writer of popular articles has questioned its value. This advice comes from A. W. Blair, associate soil chemist at the New Jersey College of Agriculture, New Brunswick. In explanation of this he says: "There are a few plants that do fairly well on an acid soil, but if you are engaged in general farming or trucking where the supply of farm manure is limited, you will be abundantly rewarded for the judicious use of lime in some form. For the average soil, unless known to be highly acid, one to two tons of pulverized limestone per acre or the equivalent in another form, once in a four or five-year rotation, will usually be sufficient.

"One who spends all his days on the farm, and observes carefully the effect of fertilizers and lime on such crops as clover, alfalfa, and other soil-building legumes, is in a better position to measure the effect of lime on such crops than the one who makes an occasional visit to a farm or to some experimental plots. He knows full well that commercial fertilizers cannot fully take the place of lime.

"The soils gradually become acid, not because of the fertilizers, but in spite of them, and lime or some other basic materials must be added at intervals to replace certain substances that are constantly being lost through drainage waters and the removal of crops.

"When mineral fertilizers have been used continually without lime or manure, it is practically impossible to get clover and alfalfa to grow, but add lime to this same land and volunteer clover comes in, even to the partial exclusion of timothy and other grasses. This fact has been demonstrated many times on the soil fertility plots at the New Jersey agricultural experiment station."

Improved Oat Varieties Developed for New York

A number of high-yielding oat varieties have been developed by the New York state experiment station in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture. Six of these varieties, the Cornewell, Cornellian, Empire, Ithican, Standwell, and Upright, are discussed in Department Circular 338 just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. Testing on New York farms for a period of four years, 1921 to 1926, each of these varieties gave an average yield of more than 50 bushels per acre.

The investigational work to develop these high-yielding varieties was undertaken because of the important place the oat crop holds in the agriculture of New York, and because the general average of the crop over the entire state has been 31.9 bushels per acre for the past 25 years. This low yield has been due in part to the use of poorly adapted and low-yielding varieties.

During the six-year period from 1918 to 1923, inclusive, in experiments at Ithica the Cornellian has produced decidedly the highest average yield, exceeding its nearest competitor, the Ithaca, by more than five bushels to the acre. The yield of the Cornellian was 68.9 bushels.

A copy of the circular may be obtained, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Better Live Stock

The most enthusiastic corn-grower is the one who has been at it the longest. Corn, alfalfa and sweet clover mean more and better live stock, and this means that your operations will be on a much more profitable permanent basis. Remember these things: Get seed of a variety suited to your climate; test the seed for germination; plant it with an accurate planter; work the soil shallow in the later cultivations, and use your own good judgment as to the best time and manner of harvesting.

Windbreaks Should Have Attention Beforehand

Farmers who are interested in windbreaks should look around their farm buildings now to see where the snow is coming from, with the object in view of planting windbreaks to keep out the cold, wintry winds sometime in the future. Plans can well be made now to prevent snow from drifting and to break disagreeable winds that sweep about farm buildings.

Plan on planting the farm woodlot so that it will be an efficient protector against severe north and northwest winds. The amount of nursery stock needed can be figured out and orders placed early with the nurseries. Nurseries usually fill orders in the order received. Another reason for early buying is that it pays to have seedlings in the ground early in the spring. Seedlings should be planted before they have started their normal growth.

FARM NOTES

Don't overwork pullets in the fall with too much light.

The wet fall has shown many farmers what tile drains are worth to them.

• • •

A concrete walk from the house to the barn and other buildings would be a mighty fine improvement on many farms.

• • •

The quickest and cheapest method to eradicate the pocket gopher is by poisoning with grain or vegetable baits treated with strychnine.

• • •

Hogs that are to be carried over in stocker condition to be sold as feeders may be fed to a good advantage on a ration consisting of either kafir corn or barley, together with a small amount of tankage.

Elements for Alfalfa

Since alfalfa when inoculated can gather its nitrogen from the air, a sound policy is to supply it with the other mineral elements in a commercial form rather than through manure, because the manure can usually be used more profitably on other fields which need nitrogen. Nevertheless it is very important to apply manure when alfalfa is seeded.

Fine Time to Overhaul Farm Machines in Winter

During late winter and early March is a fine time to overhaul farm machinery, or at least send for the needed repairs and put them in place on warm days, also to oil and repair the harness. At this time, plans for spring and summer work are gone over in detail and everything made as handy as possible for the rush of spring. Extra nuts, washers and bolts for the machines, and extra snaps, straps, etc., for the harness are bought and laid in a handy place.

In fact, everything is done that can be done to permit rapid and effective work when spring opens up, and if we use our brains, it is surprising to see how much can be done during the winter season that will pay big dividends later on in the lessening of breakdowns, and in their quick repair if they happen. Remember that the farmer makes more money with the right use of his brains than he does with the use of his hands, or at least it is a 50-50 proposition. Endeavor to improve your brains during the winter and do some regular reading and study.

IT DRIVES OUT WORMS

The surest sign of worms in children is paleness, lack of interest in play, fretfulness, variable appetite, picking at the nose and sudden starting in sleep. When these symptoms appear it is time to give White's Cream Vermifuge. A few doses drives out the worms and puts the little one on the road to health again. White's Cream Vermifuge has a record of fifty years of successful use. Price 35c. Sold by Upchurch Drug Company

Precautions Reduce Big Poultry Losses

Good Plan to Plow Up Yard to Expose Germs.

If there has been coccidiosis in your flock, a few precautions [illegible] may reduce the loss from this disease next year. That the disease has [illegible] drought, however, may help to reduce losses next season and may possibly help some now if the disease is already in the flock. A splendid precaution to follow is to plow up the poultry yard, if there is one, thus giving the soil a thorough renovation by turning under the top soil and exposing the earth to sunlight and air. Germs, eggs and worms are also turned under in this way.

Coccidiosis makes its appearance in young chicks most often at the age of from one week to ten days, although it may appear later, or earlier in the life of the chick. It is also sometimes found in older chickens. Although it is not a germ disease, it is caused by an organism low in the scale of life, having many germ characteristics, but not belonging to the germ family.

Chicks become infected with the disease because they are raised in a pen [illegible] chickens in it, consequently the organism is easily picked up. For this reason the location of the chicken pen or grazing ground should be changed if possible.

Commercial Dehydration Fruits, Vegetables

The various methods which have been [illegible] commercial drying of fruits and vegetables are discussed in a new bulletin prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture. The bulletin is intended primarily for those who either have decided to enter or are already in the dehydration industry. The information included in the publication will enable [illegible] to proceed with fair assurance of being able to prepare dehydrated fruits and vegetables and will assist those now engaged in the work to improve their methods.

Since success of the industry as the [illegible] plant, the selection of [illegible] preparation for drying, curing, [illegible] and storing, are discussed [illegible].

Two objections to the use of dehydrated foods exist, say the authors of the bulletin. Dehydrated foods require soaking and cooking and they do not always reach the consumer in good condition. There is no evidence at present that the first objection can be overcome. The second objection, however, will undoubtedly disappear as familiarity with dried foods increases the demand for them.

A copy of Department Bulletin 1385, Commercial Dehydration of Fruits and Vegetables, may be obtained as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Color Grader Been Devised for Honey

Sample Readily Assigned to Given Grade.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the marketing of honey the flavor and color must be described to the purchaser in terms which shall conform to the standards set up by the bureau of agricultural economics with regard to honey grades. The flavor is commonly indicated by naming the plant source, as "White Orange honey" or "Light Amber Clover honey." There has been considerable difficulty, however, in establishing standard grades corresponding to the trade color names for honey, but work on this problem by the bee culture laboratory of the United States Department of Agriculture has led to the perfection of a grader by means of which different persons readily assign a given sample to the same grade. This grader overcomes many of the objections to other types of graders heretofore used and, while more expensive, is considered better.

The five standard grades of color are as follows: Water white, white, light amber, amber, and dark. These are the terms at present commonly used in the sale of honey. In response to the demand from western beekeepers for further subdivisions of the lighter grades, two additional grades are established as subdivisions of the white and light amber grades, these to be designated as extra white and extra light amber.

Further information about the color grader will be furnished by the United States Department of Agriculture to anyone interested.

Size and Management of Litters Decide Profits

A litter of pigs at farrowing time costs approximately $16. If only four pigs are saved the cost is $4 per pig, but if eight "pull through" then only $2 needs be assessed each pig, figures O. G. Elling, swine specialist at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Expenses on the next-spring pig crops are already beginning to accumulate, he warns. From now on until the pigs are farrowing much can be done in the management of brood sows to keep this expense as low as possible and at the same time establish conditions which will produce thrifty pigs.

"Only sows of desirable conformation should be selected as foundation for next year's hog-raising operations," says Mr. Elling. "These sows should be deep bodied, with a strong, arched back, good feet and legs and vigorous in every respect.

"Sows at this time of the year should be in good condition, made up mostly of muscle, developed through ranging over fields and picking up scattered grain. The amount and kind of feed should always be regulated more or less by the comparative price of the feeds but it is never advisable to make up the brood sow's ration on corn alone. Some skim milk or a little tankage can nearly always be used with profitable results, according to Elling.

"Sows will eat lots of alfalfa hay and this feed is one of the best conditioners to be found in a winter ration when green feed is scarce. They will drink much water during the winter season, if the supply is constant and easily accessible.

"Many pigs are lost by not being protected from the weather. Often a severe chill will cause many ailments to young pigs. Attention should be given now to the location and preparation of suitable farrowing quarters."

Happiness And Prosperity to all

.....We wish to thank our many friends for their loyal support during 1925.....May this be thehappiest Christmas and most prosperous New Year you have ever known.

The Leader.

Protect Farm Machinery From Weather in Winter

Farm machinery and implements will be used very little in the fi[eld] from now on until next spring; so, [put] them away under shelter and in g[ood] repair, thus saving time and mon[ey] next spring.

"Put the machinery and implemen[ts] in an implement shed or in some o[ther] building on the farm where they w[ill] be protected from the rains and sno[w] of winter," says D. S. Weaver, fa[rm] engineer of the department of agric[ulture] at North Carolina State colle[ge]. "Before storing, however, clean off [the] dirt and mud, especially from the parts not painted. Clean off the bri[ght] parts and cover them with a hea[vy] coating of grease. This will prev[ent] rusting. WHY! WHY! WHY!

The SanFrancisco Bulletin brings up the question of irresponsible automobile drivers being allowed to operate on crowded streets and highways. It cites a local accident where a child of two years lost his left arm almost to the shoulder. His mother had a fracture and dislocation of her ankel. The driver of the machine said, "I have not paid for the car, have no insurance, and am in debt.

The question then arises, why should such an irresponsible driver be allowed on a public highway with as deadly an instrument as a motor car? If a man cannot afford to get a public liability insurance policy on his car, he should not be permitted to run it. When it is huggested that such a policy be dequired by law, agitators for public ownership of industry immediately demand that such a policy be furnished by the state "at cost." This means at "cost of taxpayers," for the state cannot write an insurance policy which will pay expenses of writing it cover losses, and taxes which should be collected any less than a private company

Why should the general run of taxpayer have to run the risk of being assessed even a single penny in order to try to furnish state insurance "at cost" to an irresonsible automobile driver who doesn't own his car, who can't afford to buy insurance. and who is in debt? Why should such a person be driving as expensive a piece of machinery as an automobile? Why should he endanger the lives of the public or why should the taxpayers be involved in furnishing him insurance?

STATE RETAILING KILLED

Amending the constitution of South Dakota to authorize the state to sell gasoline at retail has been declared unconstitutional.

The legislature act specifically authorizing the sale of gasoline was knocked out on the ground that "taxes shall be collected and levied for public purposes only."

If the state could lawfully engage in retailing gasoline by merely amending state constitution, it could open peanut stands or millinery stores with equal propriety.

TAXPAYERS ALSO INTERESTED

To arouse greater interest in good roads, the American Road Builders' Association has forme plans for National observance of Good Roads week during the week of January 11, 1926.

Schools will be asked to have appropriate exercises, and civic clubs will hold meetings for purpose of discussing road construction.

During same week the Association will hold its annual convention in Chicago,cussing road building from two angles—one dealing with actual construction, and the other dealing with technica and administrative problems of especial interest to engineers and state, county and city officials.

There should be a third proposition considered—in the interest of the taxpayer and the type of road construction which will give him the most for his money, for he pays the bil.

TAXATION NON-PARTISAN QUESTION

Chairman Green of the House Ways and Means Committee, is confident that the new tax reduction bill will be nonpartisan in character and receive practically unanimous support from Republicans and Democrats. Partisan politics should have no bearing on cientific tax reduction or tax equalization measures. The people are in no mood to stand for such horseplay, if it is attempted, at public expense.

Friends will ever remember.

Decline in Prevalence of Parasitic Disease

A noticeable decline in the prevalence of sheep scab, a parasitic disease especially troublesome in range flocks, is reported by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. During the last fiscal year the number of scabby sheep found by federal inspectors was approximately 15 per cent less than for the preceding year. The inspectors, working in cooperation with state officials, made inspections of approximately 25,000,000 sheep and supervised the dipping of more than 4,000,000. No infection was found in Montana and Nevada; and the disease is very rarely found in Utah. In other western range states where the disease is still quite prevalent a decrease is reported in all except South Dakota, Washington and Wyoming.

To Avoid Trouble Give Ewes Proper Attention

Old ewes need good care. They need to be under the eyes of a man who is skilful enough to avoid trouble. Old ewes will die from hardships that young vigorous ewes would survive with little apparent loss. Under the very best conditions the death loss in a flock of old ewes will be much greater than with young ewes, and the hands of the inexperienced losses are likely to be so great that a profit is impossible.

One trouble with buying old ewes that they may be much older than they are claimed to be. The ages of sheep may be determined with approximate accuracy up to four years old by the appearance of the teeth. After that age it is impossible to tell how old a sheep is by its teeth or appearance.

FARM FACTS

Is the ice house ready to fill this winter?

Do not let your seed corn freeze before it is dry.

All grains or concentrates make better feed for dairy cows if they are ground.

One pound of grain should be fed for each three to four pounds of milk given by the dairy cow, depending upon per cent of fat in the milk.

Sunshine is the disinfectant of the farm. It is a great destroyer of germs. "Where one has the capital, which is a good time to add some windows to the barns and cattle sheds. If homes are being built, be sure to make provision for windows," advises J. D. S. Weaver, farm engineer at North Carolina State college. "If windows permit of the free use of nature's disinfectant. Horses and cattle should have at least three square feet of glass per animal and hogs not less than two square feet. These windows should be so placed that the sunlight falls directly on the floor as much as the germs in barns and outhouses are found in the litter on the floor."

How Butter Fat in Milk Is Broken Up

Do you know what the word homogenization means?

Ninety-eight out of 100 housewives to whom the question recently was put admitted they couldn't answer. Can you?

But here it is explained by Miss Meta H. Given, food authority doing research work at the University of Chicago.

"Homogenization," says Miss Given, "is the name of the process which breaks up butter fat in evaporated milk into tiny particles so they blend evenly with the solids. Homogenization causes the butter fat globules to adhere to the albumin and the casein of the milk. In the process, milk is forced through a countless numbers of openings at a pressure of around 3,500 pounds.

Fat Globules in Raw Milk.

"In addition to preventing a cream and skim milk line, this breaking up of fat contributes to smoothness and perfect blending of foods such as cream sauces, soups, ice cream and in baked products.

"It also has a digestive advantage for those who have difficulty in assimilating milk. Many pediatricians recommend evaporated milk as a baby food, although, like other substitutes for the natural supply, it should not be considered as a food complete in itself. Addition of orange or tomato juice, barley water or lime water are important in providing adequate diet for the infant.

"All authorities recognize that normal mother's milk is the best food for infants, but this natural milk is frequently inadequate in quality and quantity. Scientists say cow's milk is the best substitute [illegible] be modified and supplemented with other foods. The fat in mother's milk is in homogeneous suspension and in [illegible] flocculent forms small curds in the stomach, but the fat in cow's milk is in relatively large globules forms large tough curds in the stomach and is much harder to digest. In evaporated milk the fat is broken up by homogenization and the curds softened until in size and digestibility they resemble natural infant food."

Globules After Homogenization.

IT DESTROYS GUT WORMS

The sure sign of worms in children is paleness, loss of interest in play, restlessness, variable appetite, picking at the nose and [illegible] during sleep. When these symptoms appear it is time to give White's Cream Vermifuge. A few doses drives out the worms and puts the little one on the road to health again. Princeton College reports that 20% of living graduates are owners of their plants, 34% are managers and 40% are executives. Graduates from the engineering school earn an average of $3,000;000 per annum the fifth year out of school.

Be a Milk Tippler, Says Dr. Schireson

Peaches and cream complexions of American women have their foundation in a milk diet, according to Dr. Henry J. Schireson, famous Chicago dermatologist and facial plastic surgeon.

Dr. Schireson.

Doctor Schireson has won fame by beautifying motion picture, musical comedy and vaudeville stars and many society women of America. He transformed Fanny Brice's nose, rejuvenated Eva Tanguay's face, removed sixty-four pounds of adipose tissue from Truly Shattuck in one operation, straightened the cross eyes of the leading lady of Singer's midgets, and has performed other corrections for making people young and beautiful.

Doctor Schireson has one infallible prescription for the attainment of beauty. It is: "One quart of milk a day, one hour of sunshine, and repeat ad libitum."

"Beauty specialists and cosmetic manufacturers," says Doctor Schireson, "would be driven out of business in a few weeks if all the women of America would drink their quart of milk a day.

"Babies and children have complexions of angels for the reason that they are fed largely on milk. Milk used externally or internally is a beautifier. Anna Held, I believe, was the first actress who adopted the milk bath. While this was a novelty at the time, and her press agent undoubtedly made the most of it, the principle in itself was sound. But a beauty secret of even more value is the daily quart of milk taken as a part of the diet.

"The milk fed girl is easily distinguished by the velvety texture and the healthy color of her skin. Milk is a wonderful body builder, because it contains every structural element. It is, in a way, an elixir of life.

"Authorities agree that milk is the most nearly perfect food but it is an extremely delicate one as well. Heat sufficient to kill all bacteria is the essential of absolutely pure and sterile milk. One of the advantages of evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk with sixty per cent of the water removed, is that it is entirely sterile and is more easily assimilated than ordinary market milk.

"Milk is mentioned forty-seven times in the Bible. The Promised Land of the Israelites was said to flow with milk and honey and Ovid graded milk as second only to nectar, the drink of the gods."

The younger the scrub bull the better beef he makes.

If you lost at the fairs this year, did you learn why the other fellow won?

The safest way to protect trees against gnawing by rabbits is to use wire screen or some other wrapper on the trees.

Keep those young pigs growing. They should begin to eat some grain by the time they are three or four weeks old.

Four parts of corn chop, two parts of bran, one part of linseed or cottonseed meal makes a balanced grain ration for a dairy cow.

Considerable work has been done at the Kansas experiment station with the use of sulphur on alfalfa. In no instance did the application of sulphur give a profitable return.

The PUBLIC Owns and Regulates the Railroads

In previous bulletins issued by this and other railroads, the ownership of railroad securities has been explained, the facts have been stated, and figures given showing that almost two million individual Americans own the stocks and bonds of the great steam transportation lines.

Not only does this quasi-public ownership tend to insure their operation for the public [illegible] of the United States, as interpreted by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Railway Labor Board and various State and National commissions, absolutely control 90% of the railroads' earnings, and more than half of their expenses.

ABOUT HOG RAISING

derstanding on ers in this local-to the ... of the informa-
as to hog production and crop ages obtained from the cards dis-ed by the rural mail carriers has requested the Department of Agri-made with the

the same changes possible to take all enumeration of all farms ... so changes in production and acreage each year must be estimated from samples The nearer these samples are to being exact the more correct will be the est mates

The need and value of such information for individual farmers and agriculture in general need not be stressed Without dependable information as to actual production and trends of production both of livestock and crops more balanced production and better market distribution is impossible

The Department of Agriculture is the best qualified agency to undertake work butthe accuracy of its estimate depends upon the accuracy of the returns made by farmers

The beneficial effects that such information may have upon price is shown by the level of hog prices during the winter of '24-25 compared to the previous winterThe pig survey of June and December 1924 showed a decided decrease in hog prouction in 1924 compared to 1923 Marketings however however during the winter from the 1924 crop were almost as large as the previous winter and in December and January were the highest on record
In spite of heavy carketingh hog prices were from $2 to $3 per hundred higher than during the winter before
The heavy marketings were rightly interpreted as being an early marketing of a smaller number of hogs caused by a short corn crop and not as indicating a correspondingly larger number of hogs

But unless these estimates can be kept dependable the trade will disregard them and be guided by the either by private estimate sor actual marketings as these take place Therefore every farmer shiuld help to make these reports accurate by making the report of his own farm complete and accurate

THE NATIONAL PUZZLE

In commenting on the Joint Stock
LandBank System, a leading bond house nhich is a leading distributor of tax-exempt government obligation, make sthe statement that while the farm loan system has made loans aggregating more than $100,000;000 in northwestern states investors resident in those states have not purchased more than $5,000;000 of the bonds

This is natural because the wealth which seeks exemption via the tax-exemption hond route is not in the north western states—the capital in these states is invested more largely in productive enterprises.

Continuing the statemet says that interest of the Joint Stock Land Banks to the farmers are as low as per cent in some parts of the country and at no place do they exceed 6 persint, and that being tax exempt in the same way as Federal Farm Loan Bonds, these securities have become specially favored by investors whose incomes require them to place their money largely in tax free bonds.

In the last statemtnt is the comedy of the whole proceeding. Why should the law permit tax exemption to the purchaser of this purely commtrcial paper? Why should the law furnish a metod for the invehtors to escapete taxation which mu.t be levied for government needs and protection of all the people including thos who are exempted from tax paymnt?

GOOSE THAT LAID GOLDEN EGG KILLED

According to the views of John Hays Hammond, chairman of the coal commission which recently investigated the fuel situation for President Coolidge, the anthracite miners and operators killed the goose that laid the gold-egg through their refusal to reach an agreement at the Atlantic City meeting several weeks ago.

Mr. Hammond also informed President Coolidge that the country is not suffering because of the scarcity of anthracite and that the only danger of suffering on the part of the peopls would be through profitering in bituminous and substitutes for anthracoite coal This he said coud be avoided by fair price committees in every municipality to handle the situaton.

Through their failure to reach an agreement and continue the operation of the anthracite mines, Mr. Hammond declared the largest anthracite market, New England ha dbeen lost to the operators and miners forever also that the people of the country moud nver return to the universal use od anthracite coal.

He predicted that the United States would save approximately $70, 000,000 anually through the use or substitutes, which amount would be gradually increased from year to year as the market developed
